Around the County.

Brooklyn is now trying to work up a lecture course.

Clean out your chimneys and see that everything about the stove and pipe is safe. It may save your house.

"Uncle Alvin" Osborn has hauled several loads of fine Hubbard squashes to this market all the way from his farm sixteen miles north of Hudson.—Hudson Gazette.

The movement among the farmers forbidding any hunting or shooting on their farms seems to be quite general about the County. Hunters are having a hard time of it this fall.

Editor Kempton has returned from a few weeks' travel south and east, and simultaneous with his coming is an announcement that butter is not to be had in the village.—Adrian Press.

The Brooklyn creamery has made over 25,000 pounds of butter since it started, the first of last April. This is a pretty good showing, considering the adverse circumstances.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A very important discovery was made in one of the street cars this morning. Two ladies found out that they both mashed potatoes with the same kind of a potato masher. It took ten minutes to get over the surprise.—Adrian Times.

A. C. Rogers lays upon our table some twigs of red raspberry bushes, with green foliage and fine, well developed, luscious red raspberries, of the October crop. They were grown on the Comfort Rogers farm, just east of the city.—Adrian Press.

We invite all our readers in to see our new press. We have needed it some time, but it takes a good many 75 cents to make those improvements. Be prompt to renew your subscription and we will try and repay you by improving the paper.—Clinton Local.

It is now Postmaster C. Binns, but genial John H. Underwood still holds the fort. He is retained at the written request of a large number of patrons of the office, and as formerly the public will be well served at Uncle Sam's Addison headquarters.—Addison Courier.

Among the increased pension claims granted this week was that of Hon. Milnor T. Cole, of Palmyra. That's right. Any man who has to be agent for bone dust, that smells louder than the explosion of a land mortar, is entitled to a pension and other troubles.—Adrian Press.

Another winter is coming on, and Lenawee county roads are no better than they have been for ten years past. While they are no worse than the average in this state, they are not up to the standard of what people should expect Lenawee's wealth.—Adrian Times.

With one-third of the office force at home with the grip, half the remainder scarcely able to be around, and no available help at hand, many communications and matter of special interest and importance on the local option matter, it is impossible to more than [illegible].—Adrian Messenger.

Hon. Cassius, of Macomb, has patented a [illegible] and proposes to organize a company for the manufacture thereof. The popular demand in this section among husbands is a broom without a handle, as an article of that kind would be made conducive to peace in the family than the old-fashioned kind armed with which a woman is more dangerous than an Indian with a tomahawk.—Hudson Post.

James Stamp, of Ogden, met with a horrible accident. While pulling clover on the farm of Henry Loar, his right arm was accidentally drawn into the cylinder, and before the machine could be stopped it was literally ground to pieces half way above the elbow. He was promptly placed in a buggy and brought to the village. Dr. Moore thought best to put him to bed at the hotel, and last night amputated the arm below the shoulder. The young man is of good constitution and it is hoped will survive the shock.—Blissfield Advance.

Misses Kate and Maggie Goodwin were thrown from their buggy while returning home Saturday evening, sustaining serious injuries. The accident happened at Clifford's Corners, four miles west of this village, and was caused by the horse becoming frightened at a woman carrying a straw hat on her head. The young ladies were unable to arise and had to be carried home. When Dr. Dodge arrived he found the older sister suffering from a depressed fracture of the left hip, the other's injuries were about the right knee and left wrist.—Hudson Gazette.

The Hudson Athletic Association was organized last Friday evening with the following officers:

President, James Schermerhorn.
Vice President, N. H. Hayden.
Secretary, Harvey Leyster.
Treasurer, O. I. Thompson.
Directors, Rev. A. H. B. Nacy, Fred Hathaway, Ed Frensdorf, Bert Crandall, O. I. Pease and the above officers.

It was voted to organize as a corporate body under the state laws, with a capital stock of $1,000, the organization to be known as the Hudson Athletic Association. The articles of incorporation have been signed by the members, and placed on file at Lansing and Adrian, and the association is now ready for business. The first meeting will be held next Tuesday evening. New and when by-laws will be adopted and arrangements made for securing a gymnasium and furnishing it with the necessary appliances and bath rooms.—Hudson Gazette.

Humane Agent Avery, of Detroit, arrested on Adrian on Thursday to get a warrant for the arrest of D. A. Downer, owner of the famous horse Kentucky Boy, on the charge of cruelty to animals. The officers gentlemen at Adrian could not see it this way. Furthermore he learned that the foolhardy driver was fooling made that day. He came there on his mission, notwithstanding he had been told that he would be driven out and promptly notified so that he might see the horse. He seemed to think there was a game somewhere, and discovered that he was mistaken. Last Saturday morning the little mare was found to be very lame and could scarcely walk to say nothing about being driven. Hence the trial had to be declared off for the time being.—Adrian Press.

George Exelby went to Detroit last week.

Sleeper shipped a carload of hogs last Saturday.

Neil Exelby went to Buffalo last Saturday to spend a few days.

L. C. Hoagland expects to leave us for his southern trip about November 30th.

Fred Morrell ran a nail in his foot Tuesday and now you see him limping about town on a crutch; after a pension, he says.

The rain the early part of the week was a little too much of a good thing for the corn huskers, as they had to quit business.

Regular meeting K. O. T. M. Tuesday evening, Nov. 17th. Let all Sir Knights try and be present.

W. J. CLARK, Sir Kt. Com.

Chas. Dubois had a tip-over with a load of cornstalks last Thursday, and now he is laid up with a broken leg, but at present he is doing nicely.

The decision on the ditch, known as the Robinson drain, is left with the township board and will probably go through as originally surveyed.

M. D. Britton and A. J. Lee are now situated at Battle Creek, in the employ of the C. J. & M., the former as operator and the latter as clerk in the freight office.

W. Lenardson & Son have commenced their closing out sale of suits, overcoats and crockery. They invite everyone to take advantage of this sale, as they mean business.

Report says there is to be a saloon in our town. Maybe here is an opportunity to test the validity of the cold water clause, which heretofore has kept the saloon from our midst.

Fred Dubois is working on the C. J. & M. section, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Wm. Hause. Fred has always wanted to railroad it and now that he has secured a position we extend to him our best wishes.

On account of the inclemency of the weather, the meeting called for Nov. 10th, for the purpose of organizing a reading room, or library association, was postponed until Saturday evening, Nov. 14th. Let everyone who can be present.

Another night operator for the Wabash railroad. This makes only about the fourteenth different one in the last year. Seemingly the Wabash is very hard to suit, as this is the fourth change since our friend Maxwell left us, a little over a month ago.

The cider making season over, the next thing to follow is to get it out of the way for next year's supply, and judging by the shouting and racket on our streets every night till 11 or 12 o'clock, the surplus for vinegar will be rather slim and the barrels'll be empty for next year.

Married.—At the home of the bride's parents in Ridgeway, Wednesday, Nov. 4th, Ida M. Pocklington and Mr. Will Babcock. Will is our young and enterprising druggist and we extend to him and his happy bride our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy future.

Norman Post wishes to acknowledge the receipt of the reward offered by Mr. Hayden, of Tecumseh, for the finding of his medal. He sincerely regrets the mentioning of the matter in the HERALD of a late date, as he did not know that he was addressing the remark to the reporter. Please accept his kindest regards and grateful thanks.

As Will Cadmus, of Ridgeway, was getting off the Wabash midnight fast train Monday, he made a miscalculation as to the number of steps and fell from the yet fast moving train, receiving severe injuries about the face and head. He was conveyed at once to his home, still in an insensible condition, but later reports inform us he is doing as well as could be expected and his recovery is only a matter of time.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

We have now closed the season for sorghum grinding, which has been a very successful one, we having booked 250 separate lots of cane and made about 5,000 gallons of syrup. We now wish to close our mill at an early day, hence desire all persons having molasses here to take it away as soon as convenient and oblige GRIFTON BROTHERS,
Britton, Mich.

The M. E. Society will hold a cake and coffee social at the home of Mrs. S. Hollenbeck next Friday afternoon and evening.

Once more we have heard the peal of wedding bells. On Thursday, Nov. 5th, a large company of friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Halladay, of Napoleon, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Addie B., to H. Ray Kemp, of Tipton. Promptly at 11:30 o'clock the strains of the wedding march were heard and the parties took their places under a beautiful arch, and the words were pronounced which made them one. After the ceremony a bountiful repast was served and then came the congratulations of a host of friends. The presents were numerous and costly. And now, as they embark upon the voyage of life, the sincere wish of their many friends is, that they may have a cloudless voyage.

The members of the Epworth League will give an entertainment, "A Night in India," consisting of readings, recitations and music, in the lecture room of the church, on Tuesday evening of next week, Nov. 17th. Admission free, and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody to be present.

The stormy night prevented a good many from attending the Blind Boone entertainment at Tecumseh Tuesday night. Elder Yager and T. H. Temple attended, and speak of Boone and Miss Stella May in the highest of praise, and think Boone's manipulation of the piano and imitation of various instruments on the piano a wonderful accomplishment. Miss Stella's vocal solos were grand, being those old plantation melodies that are always good.

The Hall Library Association will give their fourth annual box social at the Library parlors on Wednesday evening of next week, Nov. 18th. Each lady is respectfully requested to provide a box of eatables for two, the boxes to be sold at auction. It is hoped the gathering will eclipse anything heretofore and that each one interested in the welfare of the Library will help to make it one of the pleasantest times ever held by the Association.

W. P. Cadmus and James Curry went to Kalkaska last Thursday on business, returning by way of the T. A. A. & N. M. and the Wabash Monday, arriving at Britton on the late train. As the train does not make a platform stop passengers wishing to get off at Britton have to leave the train as they stop at the C. J. & M. crossing, north of the depot. It being a dark, stormy night Mr. Cadmus met with quite a bad accident. He says he thought there was another step and stepped down, and losing his balance fell, receiving several very bad bruises and a cut on his forehead. He was brought home in an unconscious state and did not regain consciousness until the following forenoon. At present he is as comfortable as can be expected.

The community does not easily become reconciled to the removal of the body and monument of the late Wm. Queal from the Cambridge to the Tecumseh cemetery. It is thought his last resting place should have been in the town for whose best interests he ever worked, and which honored him so many years.

SMALL BUT DEADLY

Ago many of the countless microbes which infest the earth. Their destruction is great, as they destroy life in thousands of human beings annually. The only limitation to their devastation is food to feed on. They produce countless diseases—as malaria, scrofula, eczema, cancer, contagious blood poison, etc., etc. The remedy for this small but numerous and destructive foe, is to expel him from the body by the use of Swift's Specific. S. S. S. will rout him out completely, and force out also the poison which he has left behind. Be sure to get the genuine. Do not let anyone put off on you a substitute or imitation. Send for our book on the blood and skin.

A GREAT MAGAZINE.

The Century's Programme in 1892—A New "Life of Columbus"—Articles for Farmers, etc.

That great American periodical, the Century, is going to outdo its own unrivaled record in its programme for 1892, and as many of its new features begin with the November number, new readers should commence with that issue.

In this number are the opening chapters of a novel by Rudyard Kipling, the famous author of "Plain Tales from the Hills," written in collaboration with an American writer, Wolcott Balestier. It is the story of a young man and a young woman from a "booming" Colorado town, who go to India, he in search of a wonderful jeweled necklace, called "the Naulahka," (from which the story takes its name), and she as a physician to women. The novel describes their remarkable adventures at the court of an Indian maharajah. Besides this, The Century will print three other novels during the year, and a great number of short stories by the best American story writers.

"THE NAULAHKA,"

The well-known humorist, Edgar W. Nye ("Bill Nye") is to write a series of amusing sketches which he calls his "autobiographies," the first one of which, "The Autobiography of a Justice of the Peace," is in November. This number also contains a valuable and suggestive article on "The Food Supply of the Future," which every farmer should read, to be followed by a number of others of great practical value to farmers, treating especially of the relations of the Government to the farmer, what it is doing and what it should do. This series will include contributions from officers of the Department of Agriculture, and other well-known men will discuss "The Farmer's Discontent," "Cooperation," etc., etc.

A celebrated Spanish writer is to furnish a "Life of Columbus," which will be brilliantly illustrated, and the publishers of the Century have arranged with the managers of the World's Fair to print articles on the buildings, etc.

One of the novels to appear in 1892 is

A STORY OF NEW YORK LIFE

by the author of "The Anglomaniacs," and the magazine will contain a great deal about the metropolis during the year,—among other things a series of illustrated articles on "The Jews in New York." In November is an illustrated "description of "The Players' Club," founded by Edwin Booth, and one of the features of the splendidly illustrated Christmas (December) number is an article on "The Bowery."

To get The Century send the yearly subscription price ($4.00) to the Century Co., Union Square, New York, N. Y.

MOTHER'S FRIEND,

is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and and worth the price for that alone.

MRS. M. A. BREWSTER, Montgomery, Ala. Sold by John J. Orr.

GRATIFYING TO ALL.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly gratifying to the California Fig Syrup Company.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The best medical authorities say the proper way to treat catarrh is to take a consitutional remedy, like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 12, 1891

The vote in the Briggs case doesn't exactly mean that he is no heretic. It means that the heretics were in the majority in that particular presbytery.

The Buffalo Courier takes the elections in a philosophical spirit. It says: We rejoice with the victorious, sympathize with the defeated, and are ready for Thanksgiving.

Andrew Carnegie has bored himself under special obligations to the occupant of the White House. He got that barrel of old Scotch whiskey where it would do the most good.

If Major McKinley's victory shall give him the Republican nomination next year, which seems very probable now, tariff reformers will have no cause to regret their temporary reverse in Ohio last week.

During the late campaign in Detroit, the Tribune supported Pingree for mayor, the News supported Thomson and the Times supported Maybury. Candidates could pay their money and take their choice, but the voters carried Pingree's ticket straight.

The St. Louis Republic says: "If Mr. Blaine has a family dispute to settle before he decides to be a candidate, he might as well settle it now. New England will not vote for a man unless the Pennsylvania and Ohio home talent and 'the grocery' is satisfied."

A young lady showed a letter at the city editor's room the other day which she had received from a young man who had proposed to her some time and saved the postage. He had written half a page and then concluded that he would not ask her to marry him. The editor was disgusted and the young lady was disappointed. The letter was returned to the writer, and the young lady is now engaged to a reporter. The editor is still looking for the young man who was afraid to ask for the young lady's hand.

The Briggs heresy case took a severe turn last Tuesday. Dr. Vandyke, who has been chosen to succeed Dr. Briggs, made a speech in which he charged dishonesty and the most disgraceful conduct upon the professor. After the speech was concluded Dr. Briggs was asked if he would care to say anything in reply. He said that he had nothing to say.

The Chicago Times expands the Democratic victory in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan into a victory for Democratic governors in Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Michigan. Candidates could pay their money and take their choice, but the voters carried Pingree's ticket straight.

Indiana is in a turmoil over the boundary line question. Chicagoans a piece of her territory containing 1,200 square miles. The strip is 12 miles wide on the north line and tapers to a point on the Ohio River. This new line would throw Fort Wayne and Richmond into Ohio. But Indiana proposes to recompense herself by taking a similar strip from Illinois, which would throw Chicago into Indiana. Whatever betides, the irrepressible Hoosier proposes to keep at the head of the procession.

The regrettable illness of Gov. Boies in Iowa makes him a presidential quantity of more than ordinary consequence. Of course Grover Cleveland will be the candidate of his party for president if he will accept the nomination. No other person will be seriously considered. Boies will be a splendid running mate. Having carried Iowa twice, and this year having carried his whole state ticket to victory he will be able to command electoral votes in his section. Keep a political eye on the combination Cleveland and Boies.

Processions on the march are bound to go together by brass bands.

THE WAGES THEY PAY.

What Wages the Massachusetts Cotton Mills Are Paying Under Protection.

Badly informed advocates of high tariff taxation having challenged the correctness of figures of wages paid in the cotton mills of Massachussetts and recently given in the Republic, we are requested to repeat them with the authority. Here they are, classified for 157 Massachussetts cotton factories in 1890:

At weekly wages under $6	10,421
At weekly wages $6, but under $6	11,168
At weekly wages $6, but under $7	14,134
Total number of employes at less than $7 a week	43,719

This is out of a total of 71,965 of all employed in the 157 mills. This table gives additional data of wages in the same establishments:

At weekly wages $7, but under $8	9,145
At weekly wages $8, but under $9	5,928
At weekly wages $9, but under $10	5,830
At weekly wages over $10, but under $20	1,500
At weekly wages $20 and over	498
Total employes at $7 a week and over	28,246

So in this protected industry employing 71,965 persons in Massachusetts, 43,719, or over 74 per cent. of the whole, receive less than $7 a week.

These figures may be found on page 147 of "The Annual Statistics of Manufactures" for Massachussetts, issued officially by the state from the office of its state printer, 18 Post Office square, Boston, 1891.

On page 161 of the same volume is given a table of wages paid in all manufacturing establishments of the state ($8,047) for 1890, from which the following is condensed:

At weekly wages less than $7	134,287
At weekly wages of $7, but under $8	80,793
At weekly wages of $8 and over	182,570
Total employed in all industries	397,650

So that while 134,287 of these "protected" workers receive less than $7 a week, only 182,570 of them receive $8 and over.

According to the table given on page 928 of the tenth census compendium, the average weekly wages paid in the manufacturing industries of Massachusetts in the census year was $7 (87.0051).

The figures of the state census of 1890, as well as the federal census, were furnished by the protected corporations themselves, and it is not likely that they have underestimated the wages paid by them. Nor is it to be forgotten that all salaries are added into the pay account to make up the average. The salary of $100 a week paid the president and general manager of the corporation adds on to the salary of the employe at $5 a week and under to make the "average wages for all employed"—an average that would be reached for these two by this process:

Weekly wage of president and general manager	$ 100 00
Weekly wages of 6 employes	30 00
Total wages of president and 7 employes	$ 145 00
Dividend for average	20 71

So that "on the average" the wage of the "under $8 week" man shows up much better in the statistics.

While the protected corporations and capitalists of Massachusetts pay such wages as this, they virtually own five or six of the western agricultural states. The railroad bonds, the county and state bonds, the private mortgages and other securities for debts in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Ohio and other western states are largely held by Massachusetts corporations and capitalists, who, under the prohibitive tariff, get western products at their own prices and sell supplies to the west at their own prices. We would be glad to have Mr. McKinley's attention to these statistics. He will, of course, recognize them at once as official.—St. Louis Republic.

PRICES OF PLATE GLASS.

A False Protection Claim Exposed. Where the Prices of Plate Glass Fell First—The Downward Course of Prices Before We Began to Manufacture—Domestic and Foreign Prices Now.

One of the most valuable points of attack in our present protective tariff system, and one which the tariff reformers use to an advantage in showing that the workingmen do not get their proper share of the high duties imposed, as it is alleged, for their protection, is the duty upon plate glass. Here is an industry that is protected all the way from 45 to 152 per cent., and it is a notorious fact that less wages are paid to the class of workmen employed there in other branches that reap the benefits of our protective system. The National Glass Budget, organ of the glass blowers' union, reproduces the following from an exchange, which makes very interesting reading:

"The high tariff papers of the country are at present making a great ado over the plate glass industry, which they claim is a triumph of protection. They are constantly asserting that it was not until the industry was established in this country that the prices of plate glass began to fall, and they are very fond of comparing the prices which prevailed from 1870 to 1872 with those at which the glass is sold now.

"How careful they are not to say anything about the real cause of the high prices which prevailed during the former period. France is the most important center for the industry in Europe, and it is from France that nearly all our imports of plate glass have come. During the Franco-Prussian war all industries were shaken up, and the drain of recruits from the workmen for the armies caused a great rise in wages. For the same reason the prices of materials rose, which, taken in connection with the heavy taxes and expenses incident to manufacturing industries in war time, caused an abnormal rise in the cost of production and hence the price of glass.

"History tells us that in 1699 the Countess of Frique exchanged an estate for a single mirror of plate glass. Only three years later a yard of plate glass sold in England for £6 12s. or $32.12.

"How absurd is the statement of the papers that plate glass did not fall in price until the industry became established here, is shown by the following figures, which are for plate glass sold by the St. Gobian plate glass works, of France:

PRICES PER SQUARE FOOT

	1835	1858	1872	1881
39.37x39.37 inches	$2 27	$1 89	$ 86	$0 62
78.74x39.37 inches	6.75	2.56	1.91	1.46

"This does not show that prices were kept up until we began to make plate glass. On the contrary, the prices have steadily fallen. Only during the past decade have our manufacturers been able to produce enough glass to affect the market.

"The duty on the sizes of plates now imported are twenty-five cents and fifty cents per square foot, and our manufacturers add the duty to the price of the glass they make, thus enabling them to exact this amount from the consumers. That the domestic manufacturers do add the whole amount of the duty to their glass is shown by the fact that, while the small quantity of plate glass imported last year is valued in the treasury reports at slightly less than thirty-three cents per square foot, the domestic manufacturers sell their output at an average of about eighty-five cents. Thus the domestic manufacturers are able to declare enormous dividends on watered capital, and last year the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. declared a dividend of thirty-one per cent.

"At the same time that the manufacturers make these enormous profits they pay the lowest wages of any industry requiring skilled labor. The highest wages they pay their workmen for twelve hours' work is $3 per day. This amount is earned by the master teasers. Other workmen receive as low as $1.25 per day for the same number of hours. They are enabled to keep the wages down by importing contract laborers in spite of the contract labor law.

"The real causes of the fall in the price of plate glass are the use of machinery, which makes possible cheaper production, and the greatly increased demand for plate, which in turn makes possible production on a large scale.

"The true effect of the duties upon plate glass, therefore, is to make possible the combination among manufacturers to keep up prices and keep down wages. It is impossible to evade the duties so that the prices they fix cannot be cut. But they succeed in evading the labor law so that they have practical free trade in labor. Thus on the one hand they make consumers pay more, and on the other force their workmen to accept less for their labor. These are the true effects of the high duties, and, being such, tariff reformers are perfectly contented to let their opponents have all the glory that they can make out of them."

WHAT FREE HIDES HAVE DONE.

Free Hides Have Put the Leather Industry on a Solid Foundation.

A wholesome economic lesson is taught by the history of the effects of admitting hides into this country free of duty. It would naturally be supposed that with our variety of soil and climate we could provide all the kinds of leather needed from domestic hides, and that while we might profit from free raw materials in many industries, in this particular one the benefits would be small. In 1872 hides (except those with wool on) were put on the free list. Of course there was then much growling by one-sided theorists, who saw only the imaginary injury that would be done to some domestic industries. The experiment of giving the leather industries free raw materials was eminently successful. It put new life into the leather glove business, which in 1872 was dragging along a precarious existence. It decreased our glove imports from $4,556,167 in 1872, to $3,586,525 in 1873, and to $3,514,658 in 1874. In 1872 there were in Fulton county, N. Y., the center of the glove industry, less than half a dozen small leather dressing establishments. In 1890 there were 2[illegible] these establishments employing 3,000 men. Mr. D. E. Judson, who has manufactured more gloves than any other man in America, said "free hides are air, light, food, drink to Fulton county and the glove and leather-dressing industries. This last industry, right here in Fulton county, has revolutionized the shoe business of the world." It is a fact that we make shoes cheaper than they are made anywhere else, and in greater variety. The injury to domestic industries has never been manifest. Our exports of leather have increased greatly since 1872. McKinley in 1890 proposed to put a duty on hides again. It is not quite certain why he did this. Some say it was to give a little more bogus protection to the farmers and stock growers; others that it was to aid the reciprocity scheme and was to be used to bluff some of our southern neighbors. It is more likely that it was to help Armour and the other members of the "big four" who constitute the dressed beef combine and who would profit by a scarcity of hides. Such a howl went up from New England and the east that McKinley was compelled to put hides back into the free list.

If the benefits of free raw materials are so extensive and so manifest in this case, they would be far more so in cases where we cannot produce, in this country, the raw materials needed.

Sugar and Tin.

The tariff was taken off sugar because we did not make enough of it, and the tariff was doubled on tin so that we could make some of it. There's logic! We do produce a large amount of purely American sugar, but there is not a pound of American tin plate on the market and never has been, although it has been taxed ever since 1846—seventy-five years. If the tariff on sugar, of which we make large quantities, was an unjustifiable tax on the American people because we did not make quite enough, how are we to characterize the tariff on tin plate, of which we make none at all? Does it not follow that it must be a still greater and more distinct and unjustifiable tax on the American people? Yet, the American consumer must fork over $16,000,000 per year tin tax and about $10,000,000 for sugar bounty, or $26,000,000 in all, for the fun of seeing Acrobat McKinley attempt to ride his two hobbies going in opposite directions.—Wheeling Register.

—A bushel of wheat in 1855 would buy 21⅝ yards of heavy brown sheeting and shirting. To-day it will only buy 12½ yards of the same quality of cloth. Has the farmer profited by "protection?"

ELECTORAL INDICATIONS.

The elections last week make presidential forecasting easier. All the states which gave democratic majorities on Tuesday may not keep in line but the weather vane of politics is steady in that direction now. As the states voted this week, and as others presumably will stand, the electoral figures are as follows:

Democratic.		Republican.
Alabama	11	California	9
Arkansas	8	Colorado	4
Connecticut	6	Idaho	3
Delaware	3	Illinois	24
Florida	4	Kansas	10
Georgia	13	Maine	6
Indiana	15	Michigan	10
Iowa	13	Minnesota	9
Kentucky	13	Montana	3
Louisiana	8	Nebraska	8
Maryland	8	Nevada	3
Massachusetts	15	New Hampshire	4
Michigan	4	North Dakota	3
Mississippi	9	Ohio	23
Missouri	17	Oregon	4
New Jersey	10	Pennsylvania	32
New York	36	Rhode Island	4
North Carolina	11	South Dakota	4
South Carolina	9	Vermont	4
Tennessee	12	Washington	4
Texas	15	Wisconsin	12
Virginia	12	Wyoming	3
West Virginia	6	Republican total	186
Democratic total	288

Two hundred and twenty-three votes are necessary to a choice. The above figures give the Democrats 35 to spare. The party can lose Iowa and Massachusetts, which were Democratic on Tuesday, and still have six to spare. Except those two states the Democrats are reasonably certain of carrying all the rest in the Democratic column, and if Gov. Boies should be on the ticket with Cleveland Iowa would likely cast her electoral vote for the Democratic candidates. The prospects for Democratic success in 1892 grow brighter as the result of the elections this year are more fully understood.—Tofedo Bee.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT

THE SINGLE TAX FIRST.

The discussion of economic and social questions among the farming classes has taken a very wide and comprehensive range, and single taxers have much to encourage them in the fact that no subject comes in for a greater share of discussion and criticism among the farmers than does the single tax. Especially is this true of the farmers who belong to the Farmers' alliance in the western and northwestern states. They seem to be honestly and earnestly striving to find out what is really the matter, and then to set about applying the remedy.

Familiar as I am with the opinions, habits of thought and methods of reasoning that prevail among the farmers (who, after all, are the great force that must be won to the single tax before we can hope to enforce it,) I think the first necessary step is to convince them that reform in our system of taxation is of primary importance; and that such necessary reform can only come through single tax before we can hope to enforce it, and that while there are other needed reforms besides tax reforms, the adoption of the single tax will make all other reforms easier of accomplishment.

The views of a large portion of the Farmers' alliance are expressed by a friend of mine, who is a member of the legislature of Missouri, in an article to the alliance organ of the state, in which he says: "We admit that there seems to be a fatal disease over the land, though I don't think single tax the panacea." Now, I have said to my friend, and I want to say to all my brothers of the alliance, and all others who really believe there is something wrong, that if they will honestly set about finding out what the disease is, that he and they will conclude that the single tax must precede all other remedies, and that we do not claim that the single tax is a panacea for all the ills which afflict the body politic.

What we do claim, however, is that it is the one reform that will make all other reforms easier. That, without it, any or all of the reforms which are being advocated by industrial organizations would avail nothing to lighten the burdens under which the farmers and the laborers of this country are staggering. That all the benefits which would accrue would be swallowed up by the comparatively few who own and control the natural sources of wealth.

The necessity for funds to defray the expenses of government is not questioned by the single taxers, but they object to the present methods of providing such funds.

It is an axiom in republican government that government is instituted for the sole purpose of securing to the individual his natural rights, guaranteeing him immunity from any deprivation of those rights by any other individual or combination of individuals, and placing every one on equal footing with every other one, with respect to the exercise of their natural rights.

We single taxers hold with Thomas Jefferson: "That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with unalienable rights; that amongst these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights governments are instituted among men."

The rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," include the right to all means necessary to secure and enjoy these rights; and unless every individual, humble and great, rich and poor, is secure in these rights as well from their infringement by the government as by the individual, the declaration of independence is a mockery and a lie, and our boasted free institutions are a fraud and a farce.

We single taxers contend that in permitting a few people to monopolize the land upon which and from which all men must live, government denies to all other people their natural rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Let me state a few fundamental propositions on which rests the whole philosophy of the single tax.

All men have the right to live on this earth.

The wise, bountiful and beneficent Creator made the earth for the common use of all men, and not for the exclusive use of a portion of His creatures who might deny to their brothers the right to live on the earth except on such terms as they might propose.

All wealth, which includes the means of subsistence for man and the domestic animals, is the product of labor applied to land, and in order that conditions of equality may be maintained, all men must have an equal right, upon equal terms, to the use of land.

All men have a natural right to the ownership, possession and use of the product of their labor; therefore no individual nor aggregation of individuals called a government has any right to take from them an iota of the wealth they produce for any purpose whatever—not even for the support of society or government. Society has no more right to rob me of the results of my labor than has an individual.

Society has a right to the means necessary to defray all its expenses, and a fund sufficient for that purpose has been wisely provided in the very constitution of social adjustments. That fund, which has been produced by society, and which, therefore, belongs to society, is economic rent, or the value of land exclusive of all improvements.

Now, the contention of the single tax advocates is simply this: That what the individual produces by labor of hand or head, belongs to him. What society produces belongs to society, and, that society, instead of taking from the individual that which belongs to him for public uses, should draw upon the common fund which has been produced by all the people, to meet all its expenses.

This, we contend, can only be done by concentrating all taxes on land values, and leasing free from all taxes the products of labor and skill.

Many objections to the prevailing method of taxation may be urged, but I will content myself with stating only a few of them.

It deprives the individual of what justly belongs to him; in one short, but expressive word, it is robbery.

It is unjust and unequal in its operations; it makes the rich richer, and the poor poorer.

It enables the wealth of the country to shift all the burdens of the government on to the shoulders of the farmer and the laborer.

It puts a fine on industry, enterprise and thrift, and a premium on idleness, laziness and shiftlessness.

It taxes people on what they consume and not on what they have.

It discourages and retards improvements.

It limits and restricts the production of wealth.

It increases the cost of all the necessaries and luxuries of life.

It is the parent of monopoly, and the fruitful source of the inequality which produces poverty with all its attendant evils.

My friend, in the article before referred to, says if a man "owns $10,000,000, and it is necessary to levy five mills, he should pay $50,000; if he only owns $500, he should pay $2.50." Has it ever occurred to my good brother that if a man is worth $10,000,000 his wealth must largely consist of valuable lands, or other forms of property based on land values, and that, under the present system of collecting taxes, he is able to shift every dollar of his $50,000 of taxes onto the producers of wealth, who, in addition to paying the taxes of the ten-millionaire, must also pay him for the privilege of working?

But by far the greater part of the taxes collected from the people are taxes on consumption, and the government takes in taxes from the mass of workers about all they make above a bare subsistence.

The effect of shifting all taxes to land values would be cheaper land and reduced rent. It would destroy land speculation, and lands now idle and vacant would be cultivated and improved; instead of the tillers of the soil bearing all the burdens of the government, as they do to-day, the bulk of the taxes would be paid by the owners or users of valuable lands in the towns and cities, and the owners of mining and timber lands that now pay little or no taxes. We are not proposing to tax land in proportion to its area, but according to its value; and if those who raise the cry that "the single tax will put all the taxes on the farmers," will stop and think a moment, they will see that the "tillers of the soil," about whom they profess so much solicitude, do not own the valuable land in this country, and therefore they could not be made to bear all the burdens, nor, indeed, any considerable share.

Under the single tax it would be impossible for this to be a "land of landlords and tenants;" but if the present methods are allowed to obtain for a few years longer, it is inevitably bound to become such.

Under the single tax, men could not grow rich by holding land out of use, for speculation; neither could they grow rich by charging other people rent for the use of land, thereby appropriating their earnings without rendering an equivalent.

Then all land would be put to its best use, and every individual would simply pay to the community the annual rental value for so much of the common property as he could profitably use, and in this way restore to the community those values which are created by the community.

The Farmers' alliance has adopted as its shibboleth and battle-cry these words of Thomas Jefferson: "Equal rights for all; special privileges to none," and if it be the purpose of the farmers of the United States, who too long have been "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for monopolies of all kinds, to crystalize that glorious sentiment of pure democracy into the legislation of this country, there is no other way on earth nor among men by which it can be done, except by first adopting the single tax.—H. Martin Williams.

What a Fire Reveals.

The six-story brick building at the southwest corner of Fulton and Nassau streets, New York city, once occupied by the Sun, and lately deserted by the Commercial Advertiser, was burned September 15. The property belonged to the estate of Moses Y. Beach. It fronted 113 feet 9 inches on Fulton street and 57 feet 10 inches on Nassau street. After the fire the agent of the estate told the Sun reporter that the building was worth about $50,000, and was insured for $25,000. The Tribune placed the loss on building at $50,000. According to the city assessment rolls, completed not many weeks before the fire, the assessment of this piece of property, land and building included, was $140,000. If the estimated value of the building is correct, the land must have been assessed at $90,000.

This piece of property now lies cumbered with the blackened ruins of the fire, and reduced to "prairie land," save for whatever value may lie in the damaged cellar and its walls. According to the Sun, the site of the ruins has just been sold to Lewis S. Wolff for $385,000. In other words, the land without the six-story building is worth to Mr. Wolff $245,000 more than land and building were assessed at for the purposes of municipal taxation. The owners have been collecting rent on $425,000 worth of property, probably not less than $30,000, and have been paying taxes on rather less than one-third that sum.

It may be of interst to note that the property on Nassau street adjoining the burned building is assessed at $40,000. It is a piece of land 35 feet 1 inch by 112 feet 2 inches, bearing the ruins of a brick building. The adjoining property on Fulton street, 25 feet 2 inches by 108 feet, is assessed at $68,000. These two pieces, without the buildings, are worth probably $600,000.

FARM INDUSTRIES.

Annual Report of Secretary of Agriculture Rusk.

An Increase of Over $700,000,000 in the Value of Farm Products—Opening of Foreign Markets to American Meats—Other Topics.

AN INTERESTING DOCUMENT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Secretary Rusk in his third annual report estimates that the increase in the value of agricultural products this year over last will not be less than $700,000,000. He asserts that during the first three months of the present fiscal year American exports in cereals alone have aggregated $76,000,000, with indications that the sales abroad of the surplus from farms will, during the present year, largly exceed those of any previous twelve months. He notes the increase of some $28,000,000 in the imports of agricultural products during the first ten months under the present law, by comparison with the same period during the last year under the old law, but emphasizes the fact that the increase is confined almost entirely to articles not competing with home products; such as sugar, tea, coffee, etc. At the same time, he claims that the changes in the rates have checked the importation of products which may be produced at home.

He speaks at some length of the withdrawal of the governments of Germany, Denmark and Italy of the prohibition against American pork, reviews the subject of meat inspection and urges a system of inspection for all articles of food which are the subject of interstate or foreign trade. The secretary earnestly recommends that congress be asked to make an appropriation sufficiently large to extend the inspection to all applicants.

He estimates that the losses to our pork raisers during the past ten years owing to the prohibition, which an efficient market inspection can alone remove, aggregate over $260,000,000. He concludes that the condition of the United States trade and the vigilant supervision of our government justify the strongest presentation to the British government of the grievance which our cattle raisers suffer unjustly by reason of its arbitrary regulations enforced against American cattle, coupled with an urgent demand for their removal, adding that they have been clearly shown to be useless, and that their maintenance can only be regarded as an evidence of unfriendliness. He says we have far more justification for the exclusion from the United States of all animals coming from Great Britain and its dependencies than they have for the interposition of any obstacles to cattle exports from the United States.

The secretary regards it as highly desirable that the people of foreign countries should be informed of our resources and facilities for supplying their wants, and refers to the work done in Great Britain during the last year by the special agent of the department charged with introducing Indian corn and its products to the attention of Europeans as an economic substitute for other cereal foods, and highly commends the work already done in this direction.

Touching the experiments in producing rain, he states briefly that they have been made, but that he has no data yet at hand which would justify him in making any conclusions on the subject.

In concluding his report Secretary Rusk states that from the time he assumed the reins of office he has devoted his personal attention to a general enlargement of the scope of the work of the department in the interest of practical agriculture, especially to the extension of the market for the disposal of the surplus of our great staple crops. He points out that to fully carry out his views will unquestionably involve liberal expenditure, but he says that within twenty years the efforts of the department on such lines as he has laid down will have increased the value of annual agricultural products from between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 to at least twice that enormous sum.

MET AN AWFUL DEATH.

Two Italians Ground to Pieces in the Presence of a Hundred People.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 9.—Early Saturday morning two Italian track laborers on the Pan Handle railroad were run over and instantly killed at Mansfield station, 14 miles from this city. The men were jumping on to a flat car just as the train started from the main street crossing. One named Cavialli fell off head first. One of his countrymen seized his feet, but the unfortunate man's head struck the rail and a wheel passed over his neck, severing the head from the body. The Italian who held Gavialli's feet was also jerked from the car and five trucks passed over his body, cutting it in half. The horrible sight was witnessed by a hundred people.

CHEATING IN HORSE BLANKETS

Nearly every pattern of 5/A Horse Blanket is imitated in color and style. In most cases the imitation looks just as good as the genuine, but it hasn't the warp threads, and so lacks strength, and while it sells for only a little less than the genuine it isn't worth one-half as much. The fact that 5/A Horse Blankets are copied is strong evidence that they are THE STANDARD, and every buyer should see that the 5/A trade mark is sewed on the inside of the Blanket.

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE

cures sand and quarter cracks, split hoofs, sore and contracted feet, corns and all hoof troubles. Stops cracking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than soaking with oil, meal, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, tetter, galls of all kinds, bruises, etc.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

It isn't too soon, perhaps, to remark that next year will be a leap year. All years whose number is divisible without a remainder by four are leap years except century years, which are leap years only when they are divisible without remainder by four hundred. For instance, 1800 was not a leap year and 1900 will not be, but 2,000 will be.

The town "smartles" that ridicule an earnest country boy will some time find out that they have made a mistake.—Morenci Observer.

Levi Stockwell, of Dover, believes in twisting the forelock of time, rather than to be caught by his foot. Perhaps we should speak more gravely, however, concerning a post mortem subject. Not only has he constructed on his farm an enduring family vault, built of stone and ornamented interiorly, but he has ordered a metallic casket placed in it, to forestall any emergency that might arise. Mr. Stockwell is always prompt, whether in matters of life or death.—Adrian Press.

The Lake Shore attorney will file his exceptions to the verdict in the Retan case, and it will go to the higher court. The defense first sought to take the case from the jury by claiming that the village was responsible, but the judge decided that, as the defective place in the crossing was between the rails, the railroad company was accountable for its condition. In the trial the defense was that the plaintiff himself was chargeable with the responsibility of the accident, on account of carelessness, but Mr. Retan's attorneys produced several witnesses who testified that they had been caught in the same place where he lost his limbs. One lady testified that she was obliged to unlace her shoe to release her foot. The counsel for plaintiff based their claim of damages on the dangerous condition of the walk at the crossing.—Hudson Gazette.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A LEGAL COUNTY.

The State Tax in Menominee and Dickinson Counties to Be Reapportioned.

The supreme court has announced its decision in the case of the auditor general against the board of supervisors of Menominee county, wherein the auditor general sought a mandamus to compel the board to levy the state tax apportioned by him to that county. None of the constitutional questions were passed upon by the court, but as the writ was denied and the auditor general directed to reapportion the tax between Menominee, Iron, Marquette and Dickinson counties, the court indirectly, at least, sustained the validity of the act creating the latter county.

Thomas W. Palmer's Munificence.

Thomas W. Palmer bought the Palmer homestead in Detroit because he passed his childhood in the house. His father sold the property in 1866 for $8,000. Mr. Palmer bought it back in 1899 for $45,000, and he has refused an offer of $80,000 for it. His intention is to move it out to his log cabin farm and erect on its site an eight-story building, which will be dedicated as a manual-training school for girls. Mr. Palmer also intends to give $50,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, of which he is president.

What Laborers Found.

There were a few small articles in the pockets. The body was but two feet below the surface. No means are at hand to identify the remains and no one in the locality is missing.

Many citizens testify to the truth of the story.

A frog and the microscope have furnished an object lesson in the circulation of the blood for several of the departments last week. Willis Finch managed successfully the combination.

Some of the geography classes in the branch schools are beginning sand modelling, modelling pans having been provided for the purpose. Geo. Wilson furnished a pan frame for the fourth and fifth grade room in the East branch and the other rooms are hoping for a benefactor.

The Lyceum last Friday afternoon was very successful. There were several young lady visitors, and the program, which was entirely literary, was rendered in a pleasing manner. The next lyceum, which will be a debate, will be held on Friday, Nov. 20th. Subject: Resolved—That all soldiers of the late war should receive a pension.

B. B. B.

Surprise Party.

Last Saturday being the 44th anniversary of Mrs. Alonzo Biddle's birthday, her daughter Florence conceived the idea of springing a surprise on her mother, who prides herself on not being caught napping, but with all her cunning Florence was too much for her, for she very quietly sent invitations to a large number of friends and relatives, who responded. The guests commenced to arrive about 11 a. m. and by noon fully fifty people had assembled at their pleasant home in Raisin. Mrs. B. was so completely taken by surprise that she did not know what to do or say, but thinking a change in her toilet might add to her appearance she repaired to her room and in a few minutes she was seen mingling with the guests, where everything was as merry as marriage bells.

There were a number of nice presents left, which showed the esteem in which Mrs. Biddle is held among her friends. At a few minutes after 12 the company were invited to take seats around the tables, that were loaded with the good things which the ladies know so well how to prepare. After all had satisfied their appetites they spent the remainder of the day enjoying themselves as best they could, and when the hour for returning home arrived all expressed themselves as having spent a very pleasant day and wished that many such birthdays may be allotted to Mrs. Biddle.

Good markets, land cheap and terms of payment favorable. All inquiries answered promptly. Come via "Burlington Route" and you will be met at station and shown the country whether you buy or not.

C. A. BARNARD,

Mrs. James Jackson died Sunday evening, aged 73 years.

The storm the first of the week was the worst of the season.

A number of new side walks are going down in different parts of the village.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, spent a part of last week on the old farm at Newberg.

Rev. and Mrs. Geo. P. Wright, of Winfield, Kansas, are visiting at Chas. Lawrence's.

C. T. Cummins was shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends the fore part of the week.

Ben Reynold's sale will begin promptly at one o'clock to-morrow afternoon at the old Silver's barn.

Blind Boone demonstrated his skill with cards at the Lilley House, he being provided with a raised deck.

A fine new side walk in front of Mrs. Westcott's place on Chicago street is the latest improvement at the west end.

Do you wish to buy anything? Do you wish to sell anything? Then attend Ben Reynold's sale to-morrow.

A. B. Cotton, of Chicago, was in town last Friday. He is still in the employ of the Thompson-Houston Electric Co.

Misses Bryan and Kennedy, of Hanover, are the guests of J. B. Kennedy this week. Miss Bryan is canvassing for a class in physical culture.

The opera house never contained a more cultivated or appreciative audience than the one which greeted the DeVere-Campanini troupe last Thursday evening.

Two things are necessary to make a lively sale—buyers and sellers. Buyers as well as sellers will find it to their advantage to attend Ben Reynold's sale Friday afternoon.

The fourth annual box social for the benefit of the Hall Memorial Library at Ridgeway, will be held on Wednesday evening next, Nov. 18th. Frank Davidson will wield the hammer. A good many Tecumseh people will doubtless attend.

Irve Osborne has just completed a ditch four hundred rods in length on his prairie farm in Ridgeway. He claims it to be the best piece of ditching ever done in that township and quite likely the claim is good, for Jim Underwood had charge of the work.

The centre cartoon in Puck of Nov. 11th is entitled, "Time to Clean Up, Boys, and Look Pretty!" There has been a great deal of mud thrown, and a large quanity of ink spilled during the late campaign, and the orators and editors can not do better than follow Puck's advice.

We have received a catalogue of the Michigan Mining School for the current college year. From a hasty glance at its contents it can be readily seen that this institution is flourishing. Three classes have graduated from the school and nearly every graduate has already obtained a lucrative position.

Ben Reynolds auction to-morrow.

S. D. Nesmith, of Cleveland, was in town the fore part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Strong and Mrs. B. F. Snyder, spend to-day in Detroit.

Mrs. L. F. Harrington, of Mansfield, O., is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. G. Blymyer.

The indications all point to a good sale at Ben Reynold's auction to-morrow afternoon.

The Sunday afternoon service at St. Peter's Church will be held hereafter at five o'clock.

Trade was fearfully dull Monday and Tuesday, but it brightened up again on Wednesday.

Twenty-three tickets were sold in Clinton for the Tecumseh entertainment course.

The new meat market on Railroad street has already been provided with electric lights.

Miss Bertha Shoemaker, of Fairfield, has been visiting friends in Tecumseh for the last few days.

Vincent Wood will take subscriptions for all newspapers and magazines. See his card on the eighth page.

A number of our young society men have organized a series of six social hops to be given at Armory Hall.

There will be plenty of property to sell at Ben Reynold's sale to-morrow. Let the buyers turn out in force also.

The Blind Boone troupe carry with them a very intelligent parrot, which takes universally with the little folks.

Don't make any appointment to conflict with Saturday, Nov. 21st. That is the date of Leland T. Power's lecture in Tecumseh.

The Friends will open their new meeting house on Sabbath, the 22nd inst. Dedication services will be held at three p. m. All are invited.

The Lake Shore passenger house has been repainted and sanded on the outside, and the new freight house is being treated in the same manner.

The Lake Shore road will not only prohibit its employees entering a saloon while on duty, but orders that active work in politics must be stopped.

E. M. Coller has secured the services of Miss Rhoda Benedict as clerk in his music store. She will be a valuable acquisition, being well qualified for the position.

The W. C. T. U. county convention held at Adrian last week was largely attended and was one of the most interesting and profitable sessions ever held in the county.

C. J. Woolley, the deservedly popular piano dealer of Toledo, furnished a Chickering grand piano for the DeVere-Campanini concert, when it was discovered that the company failed to keep their contract in that regard. By so doing Mr. Wooley helped the committee out of a very tight place.

Reports from the Fayette Normal University, Fayette, O., show a present attendance from forty to fifty per cent greater than that of any previous year. The substantial endorsement that this institution is receiving from the public, is significant of liberal business management and the best educational advantages.

While at Clinton the other day we dropped in to see our old friend Marstellar and found him with chisel in hand, putting the inscription on a monument. He is so rushed with work now that he has to get right down to business himself. The orders now on his books will keep a full force of hands running till January.

Again our citizens have had the pleasure of spending an evening with Blind Boone. Since his visit to Tecumseh several years since, Boone has not only grown into manhhood, but has greatly improved in his playing. He is certainly a musical wonder. No music is too difficult for him to render. Boone gave several classical pieces to please those who appreciate that class of music, but a majority of his selections were of a class that all could understand. Boone's plantation songs were received with much applause. Miss Stella May, a young lady of much promise, rendered several very fine plantation melodies and "brought down" the house. The Epworth League deserves much credit for securing the services of Blind Boone's Concert Co. We understand the League will give our people several entertainments during the coming winter.

Tecumseh has been favored, the past ten days, with several musical events. The concert given by the Fisk Tennesseans on Saturday night last was equal, and in many points, superior to any of them. This troupe is so well known that the bare announcement of their coming is sufficient to fill the opera house. Mr. Thomas, one of the original Fisk Jubilee Singers, has secured the services of the very best colored vocalists in the country, and is giving the people a class of music that all can appreciate. The solo rendered by Mr. Chas H. Louis was very fine. He has a tenor voice seldom equaled and is fast coming to the front. Mr. W. H. Thompson has a powerful bass voice and brought forth much praise. His selection was finely rendered. The reading by Miss Verina M. Gillian was of a high order. One of the best numbers of the evening was the male quartette, by Messrs Louis, Thomas, Chambers and Thompson. Should this troupe favor our village in the future they can count on a full house.

The Sabbath School Institute to be held at the Baptist Church next week Tuesday will be interesting to all Sunday School workers, and there will doubtless be a large attendance.

Forty pieces New Dress Goods just received and placed on sale, worth 25 and 50 cents per yard, to be sold at 16 and 31 cents. Sale commences Saturday at ANDERSON & Co.'s.

H. S. Waring has made arrangements with L. F. Wheeler, of Chicago, whereby he can furnish "crayon" pastels or "water color" work to all who wish pictures enlarged. See his samples.

The taxes in this town will be lower this year than for several years past. The total levy is $6.44 on $1000 assessment. This includes all taxes collected by the township treasurer, all but the village taxes.

Will Babcock, of Britton, having tired of backelor life, has become a benedict. Will's numerous friends here in Tecumseh will extend their congratulations and wish him bon voyage on his matrimonial journey.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church will hold their monthly social in the church parlors on Wednesday, Nov., 18th. Business meeting at 4 p. m. Supper will be served from 5:30 to 6:30, by Mrs. Coller's committee.

Considerable interest has been taken in the progression of a game of cribbage of 5,000 points at the Lilley house, between Harry D[illegible] Tom Moffett. Dunn is a skil[illegible] but Moffett's fine playing for[illegible] won him the game by 146. p[illegible]

A large granite monument has been removed from the Cambridge Junction cemetery and placed in the Tecumseh cemetery upon the Wm. Queal family lot. A beautiful iron fence surrounds the lot. Marsteller did the work of resetting the monument.

A committee to visit the public schools of the village has been appointed by the School Board for the ensuing year. The committee consists of the following ladies:—Mrs. C. Burridge, Mrs. C. M. Woodward, Mrs. Irving Osborn, Mrs. Ida North, Mrs. A. W. Mills.

C. M. Dickinson has been moving his fixtures and furniture into his new building on Railroad street this week and he would be glad to see all his old customers at his new quarters after to-day. The building will make a model meat market, and it has been put up in a hurry.

Two new teachers have been received at the Industrial Home. Last week Miss Ella Armstrong, of Centreville, St. Joseph county, accepted the position of teacher in Clark cottage, and yesterday Miss Blanche Heeley, one of Lansing's most accomplished young ladies, assumed the duties of teacher in Central cottage. The administration is to be congratulated upon securing the services of two such competent teachers.—Adrian Times.

Lieut. Col. Butler, of Detroit, inspected Co. C last Friday afternoon and evening. The announcement was somewhat unexpected, the troops usually being inspected only once a year, this occuring in the spring. However, Capt. Hayden presented a full and complete quota of stock and equipments belonging to the State, Col. Butler complimented the company on the condition of the armory and clothing, also, on the department and manual of the men, but criticised the attendance and foot movements. He regretted the fact that the State could not supply the company with a more suitable armory, and was somewhat surprised that the citizens had not provided something in this respect for the light guards.

The DeVere-Campanini concert on Thursday evening last fitly opened the entertainment course for the present season. Every member of the company is a musical artist of superior merit, and their selections consisted of classical music of a high order. The program was chosen for an audience of cultivated musicians, and hence perhaps it was too classical to be fully appreciated by those who are not favored with a musical taste or education. We confess our lack of ability to properly criticise the entertainment. Campanini has held first place among tenor singers for many years. Clementine DeVere and Rose Linde, the soprano and contralto, enjoy an equally high reputation as concert vocalists. Franz Wilczek, the violinist, and Jaques Friedberger, the pianist, are comparatively new candidates for public favor, but they have already scored a brilliant record in their profession. The troupe, as a whole, is considered the finest concert company, of equal numbers, now before the American public. Tecumseh is the smallest town the company has ever visited. A more cultivated audience never filled the opera house and they were richly rewarded by a superb entertainment.

Cheap Reading.

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish the HERALD and Detroit Weekly Tribune four months for only fifty cents, and we can make the same terms for the HERALD and Weekly Free Press. That is, the HERALD and either of the Detroit Weeklies, two papers, four months for fifty cents. This offer will be held open but a short time. Now is your chance to secure cheap reading.

What Is Good Baking Powder?

It is a well known fact that carbonate of ammonia is used by bakers in the preparation of the finest and most wholesome bread and cake, and has been from time immemorial. It is among the oldest and at the same time most healthful constituents of baking powders. It is all evolved in gas by the heat of the oven, and leaves no trace of itself in the food, and it is this that gives it its great value as a leavening agent in the opinions of the physicians.—New York Journal.

STATE ELECTIONS.

Latest Returns from the Battle of the Ballots.

Gov. Boies Reelected in Iowa — Flower Has 47,000 Votes to Spare in New York—McKinley's Plurality Will Reach 20,000.

IOWA.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 6.—The result of Tuesday's election is practically settled as to the head of the ticket. Gov. Boies' plurality will not vary 500 either way from 9,000. He carried forty counties with pluralities aggregating 32,702. Wheeler carried fifty-nine counties giving 23,880 pluralities, leaving Boies 8,822 in the lead. These returns are based on dispatches from ninety-eighty county auditors of the state and are as nearly reliable as anything unofficial can be.

The senate stands 24 republicans, 1 prohibition, 1 people's party man, 1 independent and 24 democrats. The house consists of 58 republicans, 46 democrats and 1 people's party man, Daniel Campbell. The republicans elected to the house are all pledged in the most positive way to the maintenance and enforcement of prohibition and have prohibition constituencies back of them.

OHIO.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—The latest figures on Tuesday's election, with nine counties estimated and a few others unofficial, made by the republican state executive committee, place McKinley's plurality at 20,486. The republicans now claim from 48 to 50 on joint ballot in the legislature.

There is a great deal of talk here to the effect that Brice, the democratic senator-elect, may never take his seat. It is a question whether the New Yorker is eligible, and should Brice's credentials be refused when presented to the senate the legislature, Ohio will then have to choose two senators instead of one. Senator Sherman is sure of reelection.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Flower's plurality is 47,068. The footings stand: Flower, 806,014; Fassett, 758,406. Great interest is manifested in the complexion of the legislature. The figures still give the republicans the control, but in several districts the vote is so close that contests are bound to be made before the boards of canvassers and the republican majority may be cut down. The latest figures are: Senate—republicans, 18; democrats, 14. House—republicans, 66; democrats, 62.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—The results of Tuesday's election in Massachusetts can now be given with something like exactness. The vote for governor was: Russell, 157,087; Allen, 150,109; Russell's plurality, 6,808. Russell increased his vote of last year by almost 15,000, and Allen received 17,000 more votes than were cast for Brackett. Kimball (pro.) received for governor 8,162 votes, some 5,000 less than the party's poll in former years. This vote is not sufficient to constitute it a political party in the eye of the state law, falling below 3 per cent. of the total vote cast. The legislature will stand as follows: Senate—Republicans, 25; democrats, 17. House—Republicans, 150; democrats, 89; prohibition, 1. In this summary all independent republicans are counted as republicans and all independent democrats as democrats.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Complete figures from every county in the state show a plurality of 58,889 for Gregg (rep.) for auditor general and 53,764 plurality for Morrison (rep.) for state treasurer.

BOMB THROWERS HONORED.

Memorial Exercises at the Graves of the Hanged Chicago Anarchists.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—About 2,000 anarchists assembled at Waldheim cemetery Sunday and held memorial services over the graves of Parsons, Spies, Engel, Fischer and Lingg. Speeches were made by Henry Wissman, editor of the New York Bakers' Journal; Morris Schultze, editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, and H. Mikalaner. Mrs. Lucy Parsons, Mrs. Spies and Miss Spies and other relatives of the dead anarchists were present at the exercises.

Population of Illinois.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The census office has completed its final compilation of the population of Illinois by minor civil divisions. Of the 102 counties in the state thirty show slight decreases. The growth of population in Illinois is altogether in the cities and towns. The population of the state is now 3,826,351, an increase of 748,480.

Lost Their Lives in a Prairie Fire.

PLANKINTON, S. D., Nov. 7.—A terrible prairie fire burned across the western portion of Aurora county Thursday. Nicholas Wolf and Anton Ahrens perished in the flames, both young men leaving families. A large amount of property was destroyed.

Got Away with Royalty's Cash.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Inquiry into the suspension of the banking firm of Hirschfeld & Wolff led to the arrest Thursday of Herr Wolff. The empress of Germany, Prince Henry of Prussia and many aristocratic families lose heavily by the failure.

Broke the Three-Mile Pacing Record.

KNOXVILLE, Ia., Nov. 7.—The world's three-mile pacing record was Friday reduced 13¼ seconds at the Iowa driving park by Joe Jefferson, who made the three miles in 7:33¼. The best previous record, 7:44, was made by James K. Polk in 1847.

Killed by a Drunken Woman.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Patrick McGuire, of 209 East Ninety-eighth street, who was struck with a lighted lamp by a drunken woman named Gaffney as he lay in bed Thursday night, died at the Presbyterian hospital.

Secretary of Legation at Santiago.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The president has appointed Fenton R. McCreery, of Michigan, to be secretary of the legation at Santiago, Chili.

BOUNDARY LINES.

The Dispute Between Ohio and Indiana Will Not Affect Illinois.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—To ease the minds of Illinoisans who tremble at the possibility of being called Hoosiers it may be said that the boundary lines between Indiana and Illinois were not run when Indiana was split off from Ohio. Nor would the mere fact that the Ohio line was zigzag instead of straight justify the same conclusion in regard to the Illinois boundary. The supposed ruling by which Indiana would be entitled to a slice on the west in case it lost on the east would soon come to an absurdity when Illinois sought to compensate itself by spreading a little further west. The Mississippi river would be the bar, and as that river was the limit of northwest territory no claim could be made against Iowa for a strip of its fertile river land.

In connection with this boundary question it is worth while to recall that Michigan people think Toledo ought to be in their state. There are Wisconsin historians who seriously maintain the claim that Chicago ought to be a Badger city. It is an old controversy in both cases, growing out of the looseness with which the general government divided up the northwest territory. The Ohio people, even in the early days, were fighters. They moved into the disputed territory along the Maumee, which Michigan claimed, and kept it. There was a commission to settle the question, but the decision was never acquiesced in by Michigan. Illinois has been a gainer of territory in another way. The Mississippi has washed a good deal of Missouri soil over to the Illinois side. There have been many lawsuits growing out of the growth and disappearance of islands in the Mississippi, but somehow the accretion always went to Illinois.

A RUSH FOR SPACE.

Exhibitors Making Applications for Accommodations at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Exhibitors are more anxious for space in the world's fair buildings than they were at the Philadelphia centennial. More than 1,700 applications have already been received, and at the present rate 200 more will be in the hands of department chiefs before January 1. During the same period only 800 applications were received for the centennial. Altogether 34,000 applications were sent to Director-General Goshorn by prospective exhibitors at the centennial. Of these 20,000 came from foreign countries and the remaining 14,000 from domestic exhibitors. The officials of the exposition believe that fully 100,000 applications will be made for space, as many manufacturers who have written for blanks have not returned their applications.

SLAIN IN A MINE.

Terrible Disaster in the Coal Regions of Pennsylvania.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 9.—Another horrible accident has been added to the long list of mine disasters in the anthracite region. Sunday evening a number of men went down No. 1 shaft of the Susquehanna Coal Company at Nanticoke for the purpose of inspecting some of the workings. As the men were going along the safety lamp of the leader suddenly blazed up, and before they could retreat it exploded. Instantly the mine was a mass of flames and the poor victims were enveloped in it. So great was the force of the explosion that they were dashed against the walls of the breasts and not only burned, but some of them were mangled almost beyond recognition. Seven men were instantly killed and three died soon after being taken out of the mine.

Laid the Cope Stone.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Just one year ago the corner stone of the new masonic fraternity temple on the corner of State and Randolph streets was laid with imposing ceremonies. At 3 o'clock p. m. Friday occurred the laying of the cope stone of the great building, now towering upward more than twenty stories in height. The occasion was a memorable one, and in the services, according to masonic rites, about thirty lodges participated. The programme was an extensive one.

Killed by the Cars.

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 7.—William Morrill, 35 years old, of Cincinnati, and P. Hart, aged 45, of Anderson, Ind., were instantly killed at Shanks station on the C. H. & D. railroad. They were walking along the track and stepped aside to let a south-bound train pass, and were struck by a train going south on a parallel track. Both men were horribly mangled.

G. A. R. Post in Mexico.

MONTICELLO, Ill., Nov. 7.—A private letter received here says a G. A. R. post has been organized in the City of Mexico, Mex., with twenty-eight charter members. They received a charter from the department of Tennessee. President Diaz, of the republic of Mexico, made a very fine address to the veterans and congratulated them on their organization.

An Italian Convict Kills Three Men.

ROME, Nov. 7.—A convict named Derossa, recently released from prison, to revenge himself on a witness who testified against him armed himself with a pistol, dagger and gun, and went in search of his accuser. In the course of his search he killed a doctor and two peasants in the street, and severely injured a woman.

All Were Killed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 9.—An ox team attached to a wagon in which John Henry, a farmer, his wife and two children were riding ran away down Chillhowie mountain, near Knoxville, Friday afternoon. Henry and his family were thrown over a precipice 100 feet high and all killed.

Fine Crops in Cuba.

HAVANA, Nov. 7.—The fine weather prevailing at present again arouses strong hopes regarding the result of the coming crop, which is expected to be the largest ever obtained on this island.

A NEW RULER.

Admiral Jorge Montt Chosen as President of Chili.

He Will Be Inaugurated December 26—A Satisfactory Outcome of Diplomatic Questions Speedily Looked For.

MONTT IS PRESIDENT.

VALPARAISO, Nov. 6.—The liberal electors have chosen Admiral Jorge Montt for president of the republic, ratifying the conservative choice. The inauguration occurs December 26. It is stated that the election of Admiral Montt is not only approved by the entire liberal party, but that the leading members of the other parties acquiesce in his election, believing that it will tend to consolidate the best interests of the country. It is further believed that with the institution of a constitutional government the questions now at issue between Chili and the United States will be more calmly discussed, and that the outcome will be satisfactory to both nations. Admiral Montt was a most pronounced opponent of the late President Balmaceda.

Admiral Montt is represented as having at first been unwilling to take the nomination, but at last accepted when made quite certain that it was not offered to him as a reward for his services, but rather urged as another sacrifice to the wishes of the people as expressed at the elections. Admiral Montt said that he assumed power only to insure peace and prevent a conflict between the political parties.

There is universal rejoicing throughout the country at the news that Admiral Jorge Montt has decided to accept the presidency. He is extremely popular, and it is the general opinion that he will administer the affairs of the country with an eye single to her best interests.

VALPARAISO, Nov. 7.—There is a decidedly more friendly feeling here between the Chilians and Americans. The intendente of Valparaiso has addressed an official communication to Capt. Schley of the United States warship Baltimore, requesting that the sailors attached to that ship who were wounded in the recent riots be permitted to go before Judge Foster and give their testimony. In case it is found impossible or expedient to have the men appear before the judge in person he is requested to furnish copies of their depositions, which have already been taken by Capt. Schley. The Baltimore's wounded men are rapidly recovering from their hurts. A feeling of extreme cordiality now seems to exist between Chilian authorities and the United States naval officials, and there are frequent exchanges of courtesies.

TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.

About 6,500 People Killed by the Recent Earthquake in Japan.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—A telegram from the Japanese government has been received by Mr. Tateno, the Japanese minister, giving an account of the earthquake which occurred in Japan on October 28. It seems from this authenticated report that the damage caused by the earthquake was confined almost entirely to the prefectures of Aichi and Gifu, the former of which is on the sea about 17 miles from Tokio and the latter immediately to the west. Nogoya is the chief city of Aichi prefecture, and has a population of 150,000. There are no large cities in Gifu prefecture. No mention is made of any damage in any other parts of Japan. According to the telegram received by Mr. Tateno 6,500 persons were killed, 9,000 were injured, 75,000 houses were totally destroyed and 12,000 were badly damaged.

KILLED HIS SWEETHEART.

A Farmer Shoots a Girl Because She Refused to Marry Him.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—Andrew Kohler, a farmer near North St. Paul, has been courting Annie Drew, a young girl of that place. She persistently refused him. Friday night Kohler called on her, and, drawing a revolver, told her that she could take her choice between him and death. Supposing it a joke she said: "Death." Kohler fired and the ball pierced the girl's heart and she dropped dead. The police are scouring the country for the murderer, who immediately fled.

Archduke John Still Lives.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Authentic news has been received from Vienna that John Orth, formerly the Archduke John of Austria, who was supposed to have been shipwrecked with his wife and lost off Cape Horn, is alive in Chili, and that he fought all through the Chilian war with Balmaceda. This confirms a rumor to the same effect current several weeks ago.

Convicts Captured.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Of the 450 convicts turned loose in this state by the mountaineers only about 150 have been returned to the state authorities, although the most vigorous efforts have been made to catch them. Most of these 150 are petty criminals whose terms of punishment would have been over soon.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 7.—A special from Tokio, Van Wert county, O., says a portable engine boiler of a sawmill, belonging to William Thomas, near here, exploded Thursday afternoon. Robert Thomas and Richard Miller, working near the engine, were killed outright.

The Failure Record.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 265, as compared with a total of 255 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 215.

A Schoolhouse Burned.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Nov. 7.—Thursday night No. 6 school building was burned, involving a loss of $12,000. The board of education says it is a clear case of arson.

MERIT WINS.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica alve and Electric Bitters, and haves never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal Satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. J. J. Orr, Druggist.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 16, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. THE STATION DESPAIR.

We must trust the conductor, most surely;
Why millions of millions before
Have made this same journey securely
And come to their ultimate shore.
And we, we will reach it in season;
And ah, what a welcome is there!
Reflect then, how out of all reason
To stop at the station Despair.

Ay, midnights and many a potion
Of little black water have we
As we journey from ocean to ocean—
From sea until ultimate sea—
To that deep sea of seas, and all silence
Of passion, concern and of care—
That vast sea of Eden-set islands.
Don't stop at the station Despair!

Go forward, whatever may follow,
Go forward, friend-led, or alone;
Ah me, to leap off in some hollow
Or fen, in the night and unknown—
Leap off like a thief; try to hide you
From angels, all waiting you there!
Go forward! whatever betide you
Don't stop at the station Despair!

A NIGHT OF HORROR.

Thrilling Experience on the Roof of a Cathedral.

Have you never read of a person's hair turning gray in a single night? Of course you have. The old story books are full of such tales. I can remember dozens of them, stories reeking with gore and dank with dungeons and grewsome with ghosts or other uncanny things. The heroine and sometimes the hero goes to bed at night with hair as black as the raven's wing and along in the night come the horrors, whatever they are, and in the morning the raven hair has turned a snowy white.

I can remember, too, that I never used to take any stock in such stories. I used to hear them read and get up quite a respectable thrill at the most horrible portions, especially when the candle flickered awhile with a ghostly light and then went out, leaving everybody in total darkness just as a deep groan was heard or a long shuddering sigh like the wind through the weeping willows in a graveyard. Oh, yes! I was quite susceptible to touching passages like those; and I used to hurry up to bed and tuck my head under the clothes and shiver with the most timid of them. But somehow or other I could not accept the hair-turning part of the story. I knew that hair, black or white, could stand on end, but that a good head of black hair would bleach itself out between dark and daylight was a little too much to swallow.

I know better now. I have had a little experience of my own which—but perhaps it is best to tell the story just as it occurred.

It was on the roof of the cathedral at Milan. We had climbed the stairs in the late afternoon of a beautiful spring day after paying the custodian the insignificant price he asked for all the glories visible from the elevated position. We looked through the telescope—for another fee—and had each assured the others that we saw Mount Blanc perfectly well, without for a moment believing what the others said or convincing them that we told the truth. And we had ended our climbs by ascending to the highest point under the lantern—if it is a lantern—by the cork-screw staircase, which will scarcely permit any but the thinnest persons to pass when one is going up and the other coming down.

We were a party of four, and when the roof was reached the youngest proposed a ramble over that portion of the structure. To this all but myself assented. I was tired and proposed to rest awhile at the foot of the tower stairs, where the others were to pick me up on their return, so that we might all descend together. This was satisfactory and off they started.

For a time I was quite comfortable and paid no attention to the passage of time, but I suddenly noticed that it was getting dark and that my companions had not returned. I called to them first in a moderate tone of voice, then more loudly, but received no answer. Fearing that they would be belated on the roof I started in search of them. I walked the entire length of the ridge of the main roof and peered down all the side passages in the gathering dusk, but caught no glimpse of my companions. Then I descended to the roof of the aisle and made a search there, which was also fruitless. I became alarmed as the light failed and ran from one point to another, calling out as I ran, until I found to my great distress that I had lost my way. I could see far below me the lights of the great city and hear the distant rumbling of the carriages as they drove past on the stony streets. But I was as effectually lost for the moment as if I had been in the heart of an African jungle without a compass and no Stanley on the alert to hunt me up. In the excitement and despair which the consciousness of this fact produced I rushed about so wildly that I slipped and fell on a long flight of stone steps wet with the dew which had begun to fall. I was not conscious of any serious injury from the fall, but when I brought up at the foot of the stairs and tried to regain my footing I found to my despair and horror that I was utterly unable to move my limbs. I was paralyzed.

The mental agony I suffered is inconceivable. Yet curiously enough I spent the first moments in speculating as to the exact nature of the injury I had sustained. Had I broken my back or simply injured my spinal cord? I tried to recall what I had heard my doctor friends say about injuries of similar character, but could not seem to remember anything definite. The words "the fifth pair" flashed into my mind and appeared to connect themselves in some way with my condition; but whether it was the fifth pair of nerves or ribs or of something else I could not make out. I could not understand either how I could have been so seriously injured without any sensible shock; but that my power of locomotion was gone there was no doubt. I could move my hand, and I began to speculate on the number of things one could do with one's hands alone. This occupied me for what seemed to be an hour; but as the train of thought was interrupted by a clock striking the hour of midnight I concluded it must have been much longer and wondered I had not heard the preceding hours.

Suddenly the full horror of my condition flashed upon me. I was not only doomed to remain where I was, helpless and alone, during the long, chilly hours of the night, but there was no certainty that I would ever get away alive. My friends would never dream that I was there. They had undoubtedly concluded that I had gone down, and if they missed me would search everywhere but in the right place. It might be days before the particular spot in which I lay would be visited, and in that case it would be too late. Starvation would do for me, even if the injury I had received did not. In my anguish I shrieked aloud, but was dully conscious all the time that nobody could hear me. Visitors and custodians alike must have departed hours before; and even if my cries were heard from the streets below nobody would attribute them to their real source.

To the feeling of acute anguish succeeded one of blank despair. I no longer speculated on the possibility of being discovered dead or alive. There was a dull leaden feeling at my chest and I found myself repeating mechanically old rhymes and jingles and saying the alphabet backward, as I once learned to do in seeking relief from insomnia. Yet at the same time I was conscious that my whole life was passing in review before me as they say it does when one is drowning or being hanged. I remembered that saying, too, and without any cessation of the review I wondered in my double consciousness if I were undergoing the sensations of a drowning man or of one being hanged, and I wished I could put them down on paper for the benefit of the rest of mankind. What struck me as singular was that the clocks kept on striking twelve. The second time they did this I thought I must have lost consciousness for an entire day and that this was the second midnight. But when the third stroke of twelve came from half a dozen clocks I knew it could not be two days since I had fallen. I thought first that I had become demented; and then it occurred to me that if I were I could not reason about it in that fashion so the clocks themselves must be crazy. This theory satisfied me until the striking began again, when I went off in another fantastic speculation. My friends had discovered that I was missing and were having the bells rung to keep my spirits up.

Oh! the long, long, weary hours I spent in waiting for a glimpse of daylight. I had no hope that daylight would bring me any relief, but the prospect of staying where it was endlessly midnight seemed unendurable. I groaned and wept and dug my nails into the palms of my hands until it seemed as if the blood would come; but I did not even feel any sense of pain.

It must have been after the clocks had struck midnight a dozen times or more—I kept no exact account—that I saw in the distance at what seemed to be the farther end of the cathedral roof two faint glimmers of light. Presently there were two more, and then two more, until there was a regular procession of them. I tried to shout, but had become so weak with cold and suffering that I could not raise my voice above a whisper. The lights nevertheless approached, growing gradually stronger until I could see that they were borne by several black-robed figures who were marching beside a coffin. As the procession moved slowly towards me I began to wonder what it meant and whether funerals took place at midnight on the roof of Milan cathedral. Then I speculated a moment on the propriety of disturbing the obsequies even in my extreme need. Suddenly it dawned on me that this was my own funeral, and I knew that I was either dead or had gone mad. In the supreme anguish of this discovery all memory of past suffering was blotted out and I entered on a new period of the most exquisite torture. Fortunately it was of brief duration. As the foremost of the moving figures reached me I felt a grasp on my arm and a voice called in my ear:

"Wake up, father; it's time to be going down. I guess you must have had your yoke turned."

It was my daughter, and beside her were the rest of the party, flushed with their ramble on the roof. I straightened out my cramped limbs, which must have gone to sleep about the time I did, and pulled out my watch. I had been there just fifteen minutes.

I don't mean to be understood that my hair really did turn gray in that night of horror on Milan cathedral. In the first place there is not much of it and what there is has been tolerably gray for some years. But I do mean to say that I am no longer incredulous as to the possibility of such a capillary change as the story books tell about. I am quite sure that if any man or woman really had just such an experience as I thought I had his or her hair would turn gray provided, of course, he or she had any hair that was not gray already.—Detroit Free Press.

The Fox and Grapes.

A fox in search of food and adventure espied a large bunch of juicy, unhookable grapes, hanging from a lofty vine. He watched them for some time with hungry eyes. In the meantime a big, soft hen slunk out almost from under his feet and disappeared in the gloaming.

W. V. Fisk left here last week Wednesday for Newton, Iowa, where he will remain during the winter.

The first entertainment on this season's lecture course will be given by the Kellogg Concert Co., of Chicago, Friday evening, Nov. 13th.

The town hall gallery is finished and was occupied for the first time Wednesday night. Instead of disfiguring the hall, as many prophesied, it has improved its appearance.

It is rather an unusual sight here to go on Main street at 8 p. m. and see every store closed. The new custom was inaugurated Monday, Nov. 9th. All our merchants heartily concurred in the system of closing at 7:30, except Saturdays.

"Gilded Age," the gallery benefit, as presented Wednesday evening, was a decided success, both as regards the merit of the actors and the appreciative audience they met. C. D. Keyes, as Col. Sellers, kept the audience in an uproar of laughter, while the wrongs of Laura Hawkins, as depicted by Miss Grace Stevens, moved them to tears. W. D. VanTuyle acted the part of the villian inimitably. Each and every one who took part filled their respective positions very creditably. The orchestra music was furnished by Miss Minnie Humphrey, James Rogers and Charles Keysor. The ballad singing between the acts was very much enjoyed. The receipts of the evening were about $65. The play will be given again to-night. The committee wish to raise money to furnish the gallery with seats.

"The Best of Children's Magazines."

The publishers of St. Nicholas, that famous young folks' magazine, are offering to send a sample copy, free of charge, to any father or mother who would like to consider the question of taking a children's magazine during the year to come.

Certainly if that question is up for discussion in any household St. Nicholas will be the magazine selected. From its first number, in 1873, the pens of the greatest writers of the English world, and the pencils of the most famous illustrators, have been at its service. Tennyson, Longfellow, Bryant, Thomas Hughes, Whittier, Bret Harte, Bayard Taylor, Mrs. Burnett, Miss Alcott, Donald G. Mitchell, George McDonald, Mrs. Oliphant, Professor Proctor are a few of the many great names which have been upon its list of contributors. Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge is the editor. Everything in it is illustrated.

there are to be serial stories by Brander Matthews; Lieutenant Robert H. Fletcher (the author of that charming book, "Marjorie and Her Papa.") Laura E. Richards, William O. Stoddard, Charles E. Carryl (the author of "Davy and the Goblin"), and Frances Courtenay Baylor. There will be short stories by Thomas Nelson Page, Mary E. Wilkins, Mary Hallock Foote, Richard Malcolm Johnson, Octave Thanet, General O. O. Howard, and many others, with papers of travels and adventure by J. T. Trowbridge and Lieutenant Schwatka, and useful articles on "How Columbus Reckoned," "William the Conqueror," "Volcanoes and Earthquakes," "Straight Lines and Circles," etc. In "Strange Corners of our Country" the great American Desert, the Cliff-Dwellings of Arizona, and other interesting places, will be described, and in "Honors to the Flag" and Boys and the National Guard" the patriotism of the young readers will be aroused and stimulated. Julian Ralph is to describe "The Making of a Great Newspaper," and the arc and incandescent electric lights are to be clearly explained.

APPLIED CHRISTIANITY

is what St. Nicholas teaches;—unselfishness, faithfulness, courage, truthfulness—these things are taught in a hundred ways by stories, poems, and pictures. Do you need such an assistant in your work with your boys and girls? If so, and if you are not already familiar with St. Nicholas, send a postal card to the Century Co., Union Square, New York, N. Y., and ask to see a sample copy. A year's subscription to St. Nicholas makes a splendid Christmas present, for it brings Christmas twelve times a year.

An Ideal Publication.

The illustrious historian, Mr. James Parton, has recently written to a friend in this city, "I consider it part of my week's work to read Public Opinion, which gives me in brief compass the topics of the hour, and what men of many minds are thinking upon them."

Surely such testimony from such a man speaks volumes in praise of Public Opinion, which enjoys a well earned popularity, not only in the United States but among Americans who reside abroad.

At a meeting of the executive local Option Committee on Saturday, October 31st, as per public notice, it was decided to have a mass meeting of all the people in the County, at the city of Adrian, the latter part of this month, for the purpose of hearing both sides of this Local Option question. This advance notice is given so that people may arrange their business and so be prepared to come from every township and village—themselves and families—to hear and to take part, if they will, in discussing this important question that concerns us all. Notice, with time, place, etc., will appear later, in every paper in the County, as soon as the necessary arrangements are perfected.

By order of committee.

SAMUEL MORET, Sec'y.

Adrian, Nov. 4, 1891.

SKEDADDLE.

The term here given is one which was supposed to have been coined during the late war. It is claimed, however, that it is an old word revived, perhaps of Swedish origin. Be this as it may, there is certainly no word in the English language that more forcibly expresses the action of certain pathogenic microbes which may have found their way into the blood, after the administration of Swift's Specific. Finding this sanguineous medium too warm, so to speak, for their comfort, they skedaddle through the pores of the skin, leaving the system intact. Not only does S. S. S. cause the elimination of the said microbes and the poison produced thereby, but it assists in rebuilding the waste places of the system resulting from the devitalizing and disintegrating effects of the micro-organisms aforesaid.

The stormy night prevented Elder Yager from filling his engagement with the Clinton friends Monday.

The Epworth League will give a corn social in the basement of the church on Wednesday evening, Dec. 2d. Full particulars next week.

Elder Yager delivered an address at the anniversary exercises of the Union Sunday Schools at the South Macon church on Sunday afternoon.

Jennie Osgood, who has been attending school at the Normal, returned home Saturday night and began teaching the winter term of school in the Henry district, Macon.

A letter received by friends from George Bigate, who went to Oregon a few days ago, informs us that flowers are in full bloom and strawberries are nearly ready for the table.

Leland T. Powers, second on the Tecumseh entertainment course, will be at the Opera House on Saturday night, in his impersonation of David Copperfield. Don't forget the date, next Saturday night. Reserved seats at Adamson's for 10c.

The attendance was not very large at the entertainment on Tuesday evening, given by the Epworth League. The program was very interesting and successfully presented by those taking part. It is proposed by the League to give monthly entertainments, and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

The attendance was good at the box social given by the Hall Library Association, on Wednesday night, and a very enjoyable evening spent by all present. Twenty-six boxes were sold, amounting to $36.40, averaging $1.40. A number of Tecumseh and Macon gentlemen were in attendance. The association desires to extend a vote of thanks to those taking part, especially the gentlemen for their liberal bidding.

Miss Minnie Cadmus, of Ridgeway, closed her school in the Smalley district last Friday. She will teach the winter term there.

Rev. Parker, of Adrian, preached in the M. E. Church last Sabbath morning. The pastor was called to officiate at a funeral near Adrian.

John Antcliff, a resident of the southwestern part of the township, was found dead in his barn last Sunday, where he had been engaged at his morning's chores. He was born in England in 1825, came to America in 1851, and located in this township in 1852. By his steady thrift he was enabled to accumulate a large property. He leaves a widow, but no children.

MOTHER'S FRIEND,

is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and and worth the price for that alone.

MRS. M. A. BREWSTER, Montgomery, Ala. Sold by John J. Orr.

GRATIFYING TO ALL.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly gratifying to the California Fig Syrup Company.

S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

A large company accepted the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Spafard and filled the spacious parlors at "Wheatlands" on Thursday, Nov. 12th.

The November meeting is always looked forward to with pleasure, as it is the fair meeting. The display this year was unusually fine and extensive. The farmers brought their grain, fruit, and vegetables; their wives and daughters their specimens of needle-craft.

Messrs. W. E. Pease, B. F. Mattison, M. B. Wallace and B. G. English brought fine apples; Richard Green, wheat and late pears: John G. English, some late peaches; J. P. Lapham, parsnips and beets; L. M. Baldwin, a specimen that was labelled "Esau" corn. H. C. Calhoun and S. M. Merithew showed splendid potatoes. Mr. Calhoun's were of the State of Maine variety.

A. D. English exhibited three varieties of fine corn.

Mrs. W. B. Osborn exhibited a bouquet of chrysanthemums and a silk quilt; Mrs. D. W. Palmer, a silk quilt, crazy pattern, and Mrs. Pease, a worsted quilt. Mrs. H. R. Palmer brought drawn work; Miss Nettie English, reticella work; Miss Alice Bowers, a beautiful collar made of feather-edge braid. Mrs. Frank Spafard brought three pairs of linen hemstitched pillow slips, with beautifully worked initials. Mrs. M. W. Howard, of Lansing, was present and exhibited a doily, of linen drill, which was labelled "embroidered by M. W. Howard, in her 59th year."

After the exhibit was in place and had been duly inspected, the elegant dinner was served, to which all did ample justice.

The program—the meeting proper—began with a finely executed piece of music upon the piano, by Mrs. A. F. Freeman. Mrs. H. C. Calhoun read a selection in her usual happy manner. Miss Sadie Fay, of Norvell, kindly favored the Club with a recital—The story of the Switch.

The subject for discussion was: "What shall be our national flower?"

L. D. Watkins did not think it essential to have a national flower, but should he choose one would select either the fringed gentian or lady slipper.

Mrs. M. W. Howard favored the adoption of the golden rod, the name signifying the gold and the iron—the rulers of the world.

Mrs. D. W. Palmer said the wide diffusion of the golden-rod was an argument in its favor, for it is found from the coast of Maine to the sands of Georgia, and westward beyond the Rockies.

W. E. Pease would not object to any flower that might be chosen, only the apple blossom. That is too nearly related to the Fall from Eden, and the mandate: "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread."

A. D. English rather humorously espoused the cause of the dandelion.

G. P. Wright, the emblem of his adopted State of Kansas—the sunflower.

Miss Nettie English read a bit from a poem of Lucy Larcom's, "The Golden-rod."

Amariah Hitchcock and his sister Mary were earnest advocates for the red clover, not alone for the beauty of the clover, but because it is so useful.

Mrs. Eva Spafard read an original poem, of merit, in which she indorsed the golden-rod as having all essential qualifications for the Nation's emblem.

The call for a rising vote resulted as follows: Twenty-five in favor of the golden-rod, ten for the red clover, with a small scattering vote for other flowers.

A song by Rev. Geo. P. Wright, of Winfield, Kansas, closed one of the finest, most enjoyable meetings in the history of our Club.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Stella Westgate spent Saturday and Sunday here.

Supt. Hill went Monday on a visit to his former home at Bloomingdale.

Bert Selleck did not attend school last week on account of the marriage of his sister.

The number in the Senior class was increased to five at the beginning of last week by the entrance of Miss Susie Clarke.

Fred Hunt commenced a week ago to keep his horse here during the week. This makes it quite handy for him to go and come from home.

The Seminary was favored last Saturday by a visit from Prof. Hayden, of Hudson, and Prof. Kellogg, Miss Latson and Miss Monroe, of Tecumseh.

Miss Mary Edwards and Prof. White spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Fred Comfort, who goes this week to Ypsilanti to attend the Business College.

For some reason Rev. Kerridge was unable to deliver his lecture this week Wednesday, as was announced. We are not now able to announce when the next lecture will be.

Last Friday evening the election of officers of the literary society took place, and therefore was accompanied by considerable excitement. Will Beal was elected President, Lydia Hill Vice President, Violet Vaile, Secretary, Frank Fisher, Treasurer, Mary Edwards, marshal, R. L. Kelly, critic, executive committee, Clarence Burtless, Anna Rynd and Frank Hill.

I had a severe attack of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

The best medical authorities say the proper way to treat catarrh is to take a consitutional remedy, like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

BRITTON BUDGET.

John Exelby has moved to Detroit.

Get your money ready for the soliciting committee on sidewalk fund.

W. J. Helm has a fine line of winter blankets and robes. Give him a call.

Rehearsals for "Turn of the Tide" have begun. Look for further particulars next week.

Jimmie Shay accidentally rolled a log on his foot and consequently is taking a rest for a few days.

Burt Boise and Eugene Cheever are going south to spend the winter. They start about the last of the month.

Uncle Norm set up the candy to the boys who assisted him in breaking his colt the other day—that is, all the boys but one.

The saloon project was quite lively at one time this past week, but we understand that the "cold water" clause has completely annihilated the idea.

Messrs. Wm. Underwood, Geo. Getty and Warren Underwood left for the north woods Monday night for a week's hunt. We can have all the venison we can eat next week, so watch the meat market.

L. C. Hoagland entertained his young friends at his home Friday evening. He intends taking up his abode for the winter in the land of the Everglades. His friends all wish him a pleasant trip and a safe return.

December 9th the Ladies' Home Missionary Society will give at the hotel parlors a New England supper, the proceeds to help defray the expense of the new walk to be built to the church. The ladies have finally made up their minds to have a walk this fall and any contributions to aid them in their work will be most gratefully received. The society discussed the project of moving the present brick church nearer town, and although all were in favor of such a move no definite decision could be reached.

Our friend and neighbor, N. H. Ackley, was most agreeably surprised last Thursday evening, on coming home, to find about thirty young people in full possession. Miss Gertrude Kniffin, representing the young ladies constituting his Sunday School class, presented him with a very fine class Bible, in token of their esteem and in memory of his 55th birthday. All passed a very enjoyable evening, quite unconscious of the lateness of the hour, till the clock striking the hour of midnight reminded them that sooner or later friends must part.

A big man and a colt caused quite a commotion on Chicago street one day last week. Whether the big man thought he was commanding a regiment of zouaves armed with Colts repeaters or not we cannot say. Anyhow the command was given to halt, the colt halted, but the repeater kept going until a minister, coming forward, poured oil on the troubled waters and bade them cease their raging. This failing, however, a surgeon was next called, who in a very brief manner recalled the commandant to his duty and restored him to his proper equilibrium. "How vain we mortals be!"

ONSTED ODDS.

More rain last Sunday and Monday.

E. A. Taylor now drives a span of black colts.

Another lot of hogs was shipped from this station Monday.

The school here closed last week for a two weeks' vacation.

Last Saturday night the ground was whitened with the beautiful snow.

A number of pieces of wheat in this vicinity have been injured by insects.

The new hardware building is well under way and will soon be ready for occupancy.

Will Knapp has bought out Gene Groger and has gone into the saloon business. Bad for you, Will.

If our friend at Springville would keep sober while in our village he would not have any trouble in passing along our sidewalks.

Mrs. Chas. Taylor and children, who have been visiting relatives in this locality for the past few weeks, have returned to their home in Polk county, Wisconsin.

On the evening of November 4th a pleasant company of young friends and relatives gathered at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs A. P. Onsted to celebrate their daughter Mattie's 18th birthday. Each guest did his part in the festivities of the evening and in making the occasion an enjoyable one. A sumptuous supper was served, after which the evening was spent in a social way with vocal and instrumental music, speaking, etc. Many appropriate gifts were received. The evening was well spent when the company dispersed for their homes, leaving kind wishes for the future of their estimable friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Billington entertained about 75 or more of their friends last Thursday night with music and the mazy dance. Baker boys assisted by Frank Billington on the horn, and piano accompaniment, furnished fine music, hot coffee and other good things too numerous to mention were served and a good time was enjoyed by all.

An accident occured last Friday night which for a time caused a good deal of excitement in at least one family. Alton Whelan accompanied by Hoyt, went up to Frank Grey's to take his music lesson. When the boys started for home, the horse and outfit consisting of carriage, robe and harness, all new, and blankets, had vanished; search being vain the boys walked home and their father repaired to the place of disapearance and tracked her, as he supposed, to the north turnpike and gave it up for the night, it being so late. The mare however had not been stolen but had made her way into Fremont Leonard's yard where she aroused the family by smashing down the horse-block, up-setting the carriage in doing so, and breaking the whiffle-tree, the only thing that was damaged. The boys had tied her with a strong new strap and it is supposed that she picked the knot, a trick she formerly understood. Considering that she was a colt, quite lawless at ordinary times about keeping the road, had a bridge to cross and two corners to turn, it was a wonderfully lucky accident.

Church Dedication.

The Reformed Church of South Macon was dedicated on Sunday, November 15th, 1891. Rev. N. D. Williamson, of South Bend, Ind., offered the dedication prayer, the church joining in the ritual service. After the dedication a most beautiful, instructive and impressive sermon was delivered by Rev. Williamson.

The church was comfortably filled but because of the rain the congregation was not as large as it otherwise would have been. In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, most excellent and appropriate addresses to the Sabbath Schools of the three churches, Macon, South Macon and East Macon, were delivered by Revs. Borden, of Britton, Yager, of Ridgeway and Williamson, of South Bend.

The evening service at 7 o'clock was interesting. A short historical account of the church for 49 years (inasmuch as this church is now entering, this month of November, on its 50th year of organization) was given. In its earliest history it was known as the Reformed Church of Ridgeway, but in 1863 it was changed from Ridgeway to South Macon in order to be more appropriately named as the members were not now living in Ridgeway, but in Macon township.

The eclipse of the moon at just the hour of service served as an object lesson or foundation of a most beautiful address by Rev. Williamson.

The church was free from debt and not only was it dedicated without debt but the people made also a voluntary thank offering to be devoted to the benevolent board of the church. Thus passed a profitable day for the church, and one long to be remembered by pastor and people.

Yours Fraternally,
J. I. GULICK.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 19, 1891

The first week in October, 1892, is the time set for the National G. A. R. Encampment at Washington. That it will be an immense gathering is manifest from the fact that forty Posts have already engaged quarters for that week.

The Ohio Republicans are booming McKinley for President. They are certainly excusable for this. The Ohio verdict was a victory for the McKinley bill, and he represents that issue better than any other man in public life to-day.

Brazil is in the throes of another revolution. What the outcome may be is very problematical, causing business houses that are interested in Brazilian commerce no little anxiety. This constant turmoil is fatal to permanent trade.

The political storm wave now centers about the Speakership. Mills and Crisp are evidently the two leading candidates, but the contest between them may become so warm that both may be dropped and a new man chosen. In that event either McMillan or Springer is likely to be the lucky man.

The portrait of Ex-Speaker Reed, which is to beautify the halls of Congress, has been painted in London. Good American money taken from a depleted treasury will have to pay for it. It is a little singular that the party of Reed and McKinley shouldn't have patronized the home market and given it its order to an American artist.

The Democrats have no reason to feel discouraged over the result of the late elections. All the Democratic States have increased their majorities, the doubtable States are rendered more uncertain than before, and the strong Republican States have barely held their own. The case of 1892 is not won yet, by any means, but the Democracy start down the home stretch several lengths ahead.

Senator John Sherman is waging a red-hot campaign in Ohio and unless all signs fail, he will be his own successor. He has proven one of the ablest agents for Wall Street who has sat in the U. S. Senate since the war, and Wall Street cannot afford to let him be beaten. Nowhere in the Republican party of Ohio afford to put a disorganizer like the "Fire Alarm" in Sherman's chair.

The Democratic managers pursued a very wise course in the recent campaign. Instead of wasting their sinews of war upon Ohio and Pennsylvania, two States that are always hopelessly Republican on a full vote, they kept up a wonderful fire of blank cartridges to distract the enemy, and did their fine work in Massachusetts, New York and Iowa, where it would count. And it did count, too. Massachusetts and Iowa are thrown into the debit side column, and New York is made reasonably certain for next year.

Secretary Proctor has gone east, and it is said at the war department that he has practically retired, having turned everything over to Assistant Secretary Grant, and that he will probably not return to the department until it comes to turn it over to his successor, whose appointment is not looked for for several weeks, although it is certain that the man has been selected and that he has accepted, but his name is still a well-kept secret. Elkins continues a favorite with the guessers.

An incipient rebellion has broken out in "Old Virginy," that has escaped the attention of Ex-Speaker Reed. It should be investigated at once. Governor McKinney has a bright 5-year-old daughter. Her name is Frances. She was unruly at dinner. Her father warned her that if she did not become more circumspect he would send her away. The offence was repeated and she was ordered to leave the table. She toddled off, and as she reached the door she turned around, looking firmly at the Governor and the assembled company, and, waving her hand defiantly, said: "Hurrah for Mahone!"

Grace: Maud says she was born in 1872.
Ethel: Well, she could never remember dates at school, and of course her memory grows worse as she grows older.

WHAT IT COSTS.

What the Tariff on Tin Plate Costs the Consumer.

The failure of the crops abroad and the heavy demand for our breadstuffs resulting from it have greatly increased our exports of these products. Coming as this does directly after the imposition of higher duties by the McKinley tariff the supporters of this measure have renewed their old assertions that high tariffs do not restrict foreign trade. They have even gone so far as to put forth the claim that the McKinley tariff has caused the increase in our export trade. The absurdity of such a claim is too apparent to need a moment's attention.

The effects of European tariffs upon commerce furnishes undoubted proof of how high duties restrict imports and exports. Those nations which impose the least restrictions have the greatest commerce. To show this we have divided the leading European countries into the following classes according to the average rate of duty which they impose upon imports. The first class includes those countries which impose less than five per cent. upon the whole amount dutiable. The states belonging to this class are Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. Their combined rate is 4.23 per cent.

The second class consists of countries levying duties of between five and ten per cent. and includes Austria, Hungary, France and Germany. The combined rate of these states averages 7.85 per cent. of their combined imports. The third class comprises the countries which levy more than ten per cent. duty on imports. These states are Norway, Sweden, Portugal, Italy and Russia. Their combined rate averages 26.10 per cent. on their wheat imports.

The combined imports of all the states embraced in these three classes amount to $5,588,200,000 and their combined population to 307,900,000 souls.

The following table shows, in condensed form, the percentage of total population and imports belonging to each class. It also shows for each class the imports per capita and the average rate of duty levied on imports:

	Population	Per cent. of population	Imports	Per cent. of imports	Imports per capita	Average rate of duty
First class	163,535,000	53.12	$2,626,300,000	47.00	$16.06	4.23
Second class	112,465,000	36.52	1,747,900,000	31.28	15.54	7.85
Third class	31,900,000	10.36	1,214,000,000	21.72	38.07	26.10

Could any evidence more conclusively demonstrate the disastrous effects of high tariffs upon international trade? What but their free system of commerce can account for the fact that England, Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands, with only 16½ per cent. of the population, control over one-half of the total import trade of Europe? Do not these figures completely overthrow the assertion that high tariffs do not injuriously affect trade. What an answer is this to that policy which aims to restrict and pervert the development of our unparalled natural resources.

EUROPEAN TARIFFS.

What is a Fair and Moderate Protective Tariff—Tariffs of Nations Compared.

One of the stock arguments of the advocates of a high tariff is the assertion that the leading nations of Europe have discarded the policy of freedom of trade and adopted that of high protection. In proving their assertions they refer to France and Germany, which nations they claim have tried free trade, and have found it detrimental to their interests; in short, that this change on the part of France and Germany affords the highest possible indorsement of our present high tariff policy.

This assertion has so seldom been challenged that many who have no means of testing its validity have come to regard it as true. It is about time, therefore, that the truth should be known. The following table shows for each country the population, the gross imports, both free and dutiable, the receipts of the customs revenues and the ratio of receipts to imports:

Countries	Population	Imports	Customs revenue	Ratio of receipts to imports
Belgium	6,000,000	$ 360,000,000	$ 14,400,000	4.00
Switzerland	3,000,000	120,000,000	5,400,000	4.50
Netherlands	4,500,000	180,000,000	7,200,000	4.00
United Kingdom	37,000,000	1,966,300,000	78,652,000	4.00
Austria-Hungary	41,000,000	1,000,000,000	80,000,000	8.00
France	38,000,000	1,000,000,000	80,000,000	8.00
Germany	49,000,000	1,000,000,000	80,000,000	8.00
Norway	2,000,000	40,000,000	3,200,000	8.00
Sweden	5,000,000	100,000,000	8,000,000	8.00
Portugal	4,700,000	94,000,000	15,040,000	16.00
Italy	30,000,000	600,000,000	96,000,000	16.00
Russia	90,000,000	1,800,000,000	288,000,000	16.00
Total	307,900,000	$ 8,588,200,000	$ 765,892,000	8.92

A study of the above table at once raises the question, What constitutes a protective tariff? To this, happily, those who passed the McKinley tariff give an answer. They assert that the rate fixed by the McKinley tariff is a fair and moderate expression of the protectionist policy, and anything below it falls so far short of being rated protection. Previous to the passage of the McKinley tariff the general rate of duty was about 30 per cent., as shown in the above table. This rate was not considered a fair protective rate and was accordingly raised by the McKinley tariff to between 35 and 40 per cent. Judged by this standard the only countries enumerated above which can be considered as having protective tariffs are Russia, Portugal and the United States, and possibly Italy. Sweden and Norway would be considered partially protective, but where would Germany, Austria-Hungary and France be classed, the big rest of whose rates is less than a third of that imposed by our tariff before it was made moderately protective by the McKinley bill, and not a fourth of that which we now have?

If a tariff of over 35 per cent. on free and dutiable goods is but fair and moderate protection then the tariffs of 6.74 in Germany and 9.13 in France are free trade tariffs. But we are told that Germany and France have protective tariffs. If this is the case how can it be said that the McKinley tariff affords but fair and moderate protection?

Does this show that the progressive nations of Europe have adopted our policy? On the contrary, it is to such countries as Russia, Portugal and Italy, despotic monarchies, with down-trodden and oppressed people anxious but unable through poverty to leave their native land; it is to such countries as these that the advocates of high tariffism point as the progressive European nations which have adopted our policy.

McKINLEY PRICES.

How the McKinley Tariff Raised the Prices of the Necessaries of Life.

In a speech which he delivered at Lawrence, Mass., Gov. Russell made a list setting forth the prices of 122 articles of common use in September, 1891 and September 1890. All of these articles are sold in stores, and on all the duties were raised by the McKinley tariff, and prices were advanced accordingly. The list was prepared with great care by one of the largest houses in Boston. On the whole list the average increase in prices has been about 20 per cent. The following is a part of the list on glassware and crockery:

	Duty advanced—per cent.	Retail price advanced—per cent.
Glassware—
Common tumblers	15	12
Common goblets	15	6
Jelly tumblers, ½ pint	15	10
Jelly tumblers, ¼ pint	15	15
White hanging lamp shades	12	15
Pickle dishes	12	10
Bowls	12	16
Water sets	12	8
Two-quart pitchers	12	14
Four inch footed preserve dishes	12	7
Four inch unfooted preserve dishes	15	20
Crockery—
Cups and saucers	10	5 to 12
Plates	10	5 to 12
Platters	10	5 to 12
Vegetable dishes	10	5 to 12
Pitchers	10	5 to 12
Bowls	10	5 to 12
Mugs	10	5 to 12
Pickle dishes	10	5 to 12
Gravy dishes	10	5 to 12
Soup tureens	10	5 to 12
Salad bowls	10	5 to 12
Pudding dishes	10	5 to 12
Sugar bowls	10	5 to 12
Coffee cups and saucers	10	5 to 12

It will be remembered that the McKinley tariff increased the duties on glassware from 40 and 45 per cent. to an uniform rate of 60 per cent., and at the same time imposed this latter duty on the cost of packages and charges, adding about 10 per cent. more to the 60 per cent.

Immediately after the passage of the McKinley tariff the manufacturers of glassware met and formed a trust to take advantage of the increased duties and raise prices.

While the glassware trust was getting in its work the crockery trust cut down wages and increased prices. Does not this show for whom the McKinley tariff law was enacted; and does it not also show how those trusts which demanded its enactment have taken full advantage of it?

CRIME AND THE TARIFF.

A Knotty Question Suggested For Consideration By the Prison Congress.

Why does not the prison congress in session at Pittsburgh attack the real cause of the increase of the crime which it bewails—a protective tariff? It is like an Indian aiming at the smoke to stop a railway train for these so-called philanthropists to weary us with platitudes about "tendencies," "training," "home influences," "social customs" and so on. No teaching, preaching, charity or much else can avail with a protective tariff which drags the people down to crime. Gravitation is too much for the efforts of philanthropy or prison science. Reflection will show anyone that a heresy which takes from the many to enrich the few must increase crime. Whether they know it or not criminals are striking back at the false pressure of society. The rich have been given the money to tempt, and the sale of virtue is made easy because of the poverty that must follow the interference with natural industries. But to those disinclined to search for cause and effect, there is a fact which settles the matter beyond cavil. England, at the close of its protective period, had nearly 50,000 convicts. After forty years of free trade, in which the population has almost doubled, it has 8,000 or 9,000. In London, alone, eight prisons have been closed since 1864. When the remainder of class laws have been abolished England will have no criminals. The reverse of this is true in the United States because thirty years ago we left a practically free trade policy for one of protection. When the government stops interfering, nature will commence equalizing, and people will find it unprofitable to do other than honestly acquire a living. Until the inauguration of this change the deliberations of prison reformers are not worth a fig.—Charles E. Huckett, in St. Louis Republic.

Who Pays the Tax?

Marshall Field & Co. yesterday imported $1,400 worth of pearl buttons and paid $3,000 duty on the lot. These buttons are to be sold to the people of Chicago. Who will ultimately pay that $3,000 as a tribute to a mistaken economical policy?—Chicago Mail.

—Canada's surplus wheat crop will amount to at least 50,000,000 bushels, more than twice as much as last year. Should the price be a shade lower for it than for our own crop, American millers can afford to import it in spite of the McKinley "protection" of twenty-five cents per bushel, for, having made it into flour, they will be entitled to a drawback of 99 per cent. of the duty on exporting it. The McKinley "protection" to American wheat growers, therefore, in such cases amounts to only 2½ mills per bushel—a mere bagatelle.—Rural New Yorker.

—Thirty-one years ago the farmer exchanged his wool for cloth and at a home factory. To-day he exchanges more wool for the same quantity of cloth—but how about the cloth?

The Candidates for 1892.

If the National Conventions of the two great parties had to select their Presidential tickets at this time the candidates would be as follows:

PRESIDENT.

J. G. Blaine, R. | Grover Cleveland, D

VICE PRESIDENT.

Wm. McKinley, R | HORACE BOIES, D.

There is a single element of doubt as to the nomination of Blaine, and that is a very serious one. Those who know him best believe that his weakened physical condition will absolutely forbid his candidacy, and many fear that he may not live to see the National Convention meet. If he should be in condition to accept the strain of a national contest, the Convention would be specially careful to nominate a candidate for Vice President with the view of his probable succession to the Presidency during the term.

Governor McKinley would fill the bill, as he is in the full vigor of life, is well equipped for any contingency that could arise, and is the embodiment of the tariff issue that is to be the controlling factor of the contest. There is little doubt from the present outlook that, if Blaine's health shall not exclude him from the race of 1892, the Republican ticket will be Blaine and McKinley.

The Democratic national ticket seems to have been clearly settled by the people themselves. The obvious lull in the silver craze, the practical annihilation of the Farmers' Alliance as a political power, the logical prominence given the tariff issue, and the success of the Democrats where Cleveland's political theories were accepted, all point to Mr. Cleveland as the candidate, and there must be a revolutionary change in political sentiment if he shall not be nominated without a serious contest.

The success of Governor Boies in Iowa, carrying the whole Democratic State ticket with him, presents him as the most hopeful of all the candidates for the second place. His nomination would make Iowa debatable, while Cleveland's nomination would make Massachusetts doubtful; and a Democratic ticket that makes Massachusetts and Iowa uncertain States, could not be defeated.—Philadelphia Times.

Purify Your Blood

The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is heredited and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF VALUE.

The Journal of the Knights of Labor attributes a good deal of confusion of thought regarding the land problem to failure to distinguish between "the value of land as a means of actual production," its "value as giving special advantages of occupation and business opportunities," and "the purely speculative or fictitious value which results from a boom."

Advocates of the single tax usually distinguish between the first and the third kinds of value here specified, though it is only in certain aspects of the problem that the distinction is important. It is true, however, that they do not distinguish between the first and the second—between "the value of land as a means of actual production" and its "value as giving special advantages of occupation and business opportunities"—for the simple and all-sufficient reason that there is no such difference to be distinguished.

In illustration of what it means by the first kind of value, the Journal refers to farms, mines and forests; and in illustration of the second, it refers to the business streets of a great city. The writer asserts that city values do not result from land monopoly alone, but from land monopoly in conjunction with capitalism in its various forms. "The value of the best business sites," he says, "is not produced by the land in the same sense as wheat is produced by a farm, or coal by a coal mine." This last is quite true. City values are not produced as wheat or coal. But neither are any other values. Values merely measure the relation of one thing to another in exchange. When one man with a pair of shoes prefers a hat, and another with the hat prefers the shoes, they will, if free, make an even trade. We should say, then, that these shoes and this hat are of equal value. If the owner of the shoes, while preferring them to one hat, would rather have two hats than the shoes, and the owner of two hats would rather have the shoes than the hats, the men, assuming that they acted freely, would trade on that basis; and then we should say that the shoes were double the value of each of the hats. Or, if the man with the hat would rather have a particular piece of land (whether agricultural, mineral or building land, or whether in city or country, makes no difference), and the owner of that land would rather have the hat, they would, if free, trade the hat for the land; and then we should say that this hat and this land were of equal value. The introduction of money would not change the nature of the transaction. Money, in this connection, is only a medium of trade, enabling traders who do not know of each other's wants to come together. But if money were used, and the hat, in terms of money, was worth $5, we should say that the land was worth $5. This relation, which is indicated by the term "value," is, of course, not "produced" as coal and wheat are.

The Journal writer's confusion seems to be traceable to his misconception not alone of "value," but also of "production." He speaks of wheat as "produced" by a farm, and of coal as "produced" by a mine; whereas, though the one is produced from a farm and the other from a mine, both are produced by labor. We are not criticising our critic's rhetoric. He expresses his thought with accuracy, and it is his thought not his language that is wrong. He supposes that production is something very different from what it is—something that land actively puts forth. This is obvious, not alone from his use of a preposition that indicates action, and from his comparison of land value and wheat as products, but also from his statement that the portion of labor products claimed by landlordism "represents not the real value of the land, but a value created by the capitalistic system of exploitation," as if "real value of the land" and wheat or coal in the land, were exchangeable terms, instead of being the one an expression of relation in exchange and the other a natural element—part of the land itself.

"Production" describes not a putting forth by land of its natural fruits—wheat, coal and the like, but a drawing forth from the land to the consumer, by labor, of those fruits. In this process the land over which the fruits are transported, and that on which they are exchanged or finally delivered, play precisely the same part, in essence if not in degree, as the land from which the commodities are originally produced. In briefer terms, trade is but a form—an advanced form—of production.

Turn now to the value of land. It results from production in circumstances that secure exclusive possession of particular spots to particular people. Some spots are more fertile than others, though in other respects the same. These are more valuable; that is, they will exchange for more or better commodities than the others. Some, though equally fertile with others, are more conveniently situated with reference to a trading site; and these are more valuable on that account. Some are trading sites. They are useless, or at least not used for primary production at all; but they are more valuable than the outlying spots, because it is easier to trade—that is, easier to produce—where commodities are massed than where they have yet to be transported. Trading sites, therefore, are more valuable than primary production sites. And when we come to a great city, which, after all, is but a more perfect trading spot, because both in quantity and variety there is a greater massing there of the products of the world's labor, we find a still higher value attaching to the land. But from beginning to end, land value is in essence the same thing. It is the premium men are willing to pay for working on the more productive, or, in the language of commerce, the more profitable spots.

Though the Journal editor formally distinguishes between the value of agricultural and that of city land, he yields his whole case when he says that "the money out of which these enormous ground rents (city land values) are paid is extorted out of labor by capitalism in its various forms." This is only another form of stating what Mr. George has reiterated again and again, that no matter who robs labor in the first instance, landlords ultimately secure the benefit. And in selecting a rough illustration our critic is, for his purposes, exceedingly unfortunate. "Mountain passes," he says, "offer special advantages to highwaymen and brigands. There are elevations from which they can descry approaching travelers and naturally rocky fortresses behind which one man can defy a dozen in the defile below. It would be just as resonable to speak of the 'productive value' of one of these favorite resorts of robbers, estimating it on the basis of the thief's proceeds in plunder, as to calculate the productiveness of the area devoted to financial and commercial purposes in our big cities by the profits of the transactions carried on there."

If in the term "productive value" any stress is laid upon the adjective, the writer is shifting his terms. "Value" is one thing, and "productive value"—a very inexpressive phrase—is, whenever used intelligently, quite another. The one expresses the relation of things in exchange; the other is intended to mean productive capability or usefulness, and is better expressed by the term "utility." We assume, however, that our critic intends to express value only; for if he does not, he either wilfully or thoughtlessly aims to mislead. On this assumption the mountain passes would have value among brigands if they adopted the same land and tax laws that prevail among us. The brigand who secured the better elevations could dawdle in his cave while working brigands secured rich plunder and shared it with him for the privilege of using his elevation. This share would be land value.

If, however, by "productive value," "utility" is meant, and the Journal editor intends to show that the financial and commercial enterprises of great cities are mere looting institutions, and, therefore, not more useful than brigandage, he raises an entirely different question from the one with which he begins. Some modern financial and commercial enterprises are useful, some may not be, and some are more or less useful. But so long as they are profitable, a part of their profits attach as a premium to the land where it is most profitable to conduct them. This is land value; and it is precisely the same thing, economically considered, as the profits of wheat raising or coal mining, when they, in the form of premiums for location, attach to the better wheat and coal lands. All land value is really location value.—The Standard.

Unjust Ownership.

Some things are easier to see than others that are just as obvious. The Springfield Republican readily notes the injustice of securing by law the exclusive enjoyment of natural pleasure resorts to adjacent residents; but it is blind to the fact that the principle applies whether the natural resort is one for pleasure or for work. Nevertheless what the Republican says is sound as far as it goes, and altogether interesting:

There is no justice, whatever legal right there may be, for the fencing in of the Massachusetts coast by summer residents and hotel proprietors which is now going on. Nearly all Cape Ann is already in private hands, and if the public reach the sea at all, it is by sufferance, and they are often made to feel the fact. The Massachusetts coast is rapidly falling into the same condition in which Mount Desert has long been. The right of private ownership in land, for residence and cultivation, is not necessarily disputed when it is said that there can be no such exclusive right to the enjoyment of the beaches and the rocks. The state ought to possess its entire seaboard for the pleasure and recreation of its citizens, wherever they come from, as well as for purposes of public use and defense if necessary. It is not to be borne with content that to see such feature as Rafe's Chasm and the reef of Norman's Woe, the citizen should be dependent upon the permission of the local and transitory owner of a house near by. That is a degree of arrogation that ought not to be. What the trustees of public reservations can do in the way of securing holdings yet unencumbered does not yet appear, but they ought to be able to regain the freedom of the coast.

Penalty for Building.

To show that taxes may be laid upon real estate in such a way as to be unfair and burdensome, we need only relate the experience of a young mechanic of our acquaintance, who by industry and economy saved enough to buy a building lot and erect a home for himself and family upon it. He paid $650 for his lot, and the land owner, who still owned similar lots on either side of him, was assessed for taxation at $150 per lot, while our young mechanic was assessed on his lot, exclusive of the improvements, at a valuation of $500, and the vacant lot owner, continuing to pay taxes on a valuation of $150 for precisely similar lots, now holds them at $1,000, the increase in value being caused mainly by the erection of our friend's and similar houses. Thus that town is seen to be encouraging vacant lots, and discouraging the building of houses; and it works the same way with manufacturing or other enterprises, which build up the wealth of communities and increase the value of land for the benefit of the land speculator, who usually manages to escape paying anything like his fair proportion of taxation.—American Machinist.

What Makes Wages Low in England.

Labouchere says that the members of the house of lords alone own 14,258,527 acres of land in the British Isles. This is more than one-sixth of the whole area, which is 77,029,960 acres.—Bolton Hall.

BOUND TO FIGHT.

The Revolt Against Fonseca in Brazil Spreading.

The Dictator Preparing to Wipe Out His Enemies—More Provinces in Insurrection—Civil War Almost Certain.

UNHAPPY BRAZIL.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—There is no longer any doubt that Brazil is in a state of civil war and that Dictator Fonseca is confronted by a formidable insurrection. For the moment he is able, through his control of the telegraph lines, to prevent accurate news of any kind from reaching the outside world. What finds its way out is of a fragmentary character and in a difficult cipher, but that state of things cannot long continue. Enough has leaked out to show that the revolutionary movement is spreading all over the country and that several provinces are up in arms. It is also certain that a battle has been fought in which Fonseca's supporters were defeated. The interior provinces of Matto Grosso, Goyaz and Para have either already joined issues with the rest of the national party or else they are on the point of so doing. The plan of campaign of the national party is that each of the provinces of Rio Grande do Sul, Goyaz, Para, Pernambuco and Minas-Geraes, shall concentrate at a given point all the fighting men possible and make a combined forward movement upon the dictator's strongholds in Sao Paulo and Rio Janeiro. If successful they will then elect a president who will govern according to the people's laws.

Fonseca, from Sao Paulo, is dispatching some of the troops he has concentrated there to the assistance of Gov. Castillo, in Rio Grande do Sul, and the national party is said to be determined, if possible, not to allow the junction of those forces to be accomplished without a struggle. If Fonseca allows the nationalists time to gather themselves together his reinforcements will have to fight their way south, and the first important engagement of the civil war may then be looked for.

A later message says that Fonseca's reinforcements are to be embarked on war vessels and transports, and that they will be sent to Rio Grande do Sul by sea. The nationalists are credited with having already made arrangements to place a force of 7,000 men, horse, foot and artillery, in the field.

The forces of the new Brazilian junta, which is composed of Dr. Cassol Ribeiro, Dr. Assis Brazil and Gen. Osorie, are said to number now 40,000 men. They are reported to be well armed and filled with enthusiasm. Their leaders are said to be planning an immediate attack upon Porto Alegre, the capital of Rio Grande do Sul, which still remains loyal to the dictator. The garrison at Cassapava is reported to have gone over to the rebels. This makes the fourth garrison that has deserted Fonseca.

It is said that the deserters from the government army to the insurgents' ranks are armed with American rifles and four Krupp guns. Fonseca is reported to have 20,000 men concentrated at Rio Janeiro. It is the general feeling in Buenos Ayres that Fonseca will triumph over his enemies.

BURNED TO DEATH.

A Family of Five Persons Perish in Flames at Columbus, O.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—At an early hour yesterday morning fire of probably incendiary origin destroyed a row of cheap two-story business and residence buildings at High and Spruce streets, and Charles Bethers, aged 31, a laborer, with his entire family, consisting of his wife, two daughters, Carrie and Myrtle, aged 9 and 6, and son Johnnie, aged 3, were burned to death.

The Farmers' Congress.

SEDALIA, Mo., Nov. 13.—At the closing session yesterday of the Farmers' national congress resolutions were adopted recommending the passage of a national law requiring the stamping of artificial hog products; demanding the passage of a federal law prohibiting gambling in farm products, and indorsing the principle of reciprocity. A. W. Smith, of Kansas, was elected president.

Strikers Win.

FORT DODGE, Ia., Nov. 14.—The big strike among the coal miners of the Lehigh inaugurated last spring is ended. The Corey Coal Company has finally conceded every point demanded by the strikers, and the men have returned to work, signing a contract by which the men will receive one dollar per ton for mining all the year round.

Both His Eyes Blown Out.

CLINTON, Ia., Nov. 16.—A peculiar accident occurred in Lyons which may result in the death of Charles Babbett. He was sent to work in a rock excavation for a sewer where a giant powder blast had just exploded, when he struck a stick of powder and caused it to explode, blowing out both eyes and otherwise injuring him.

Failure in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Louis Adler, a wholesale cloak merchant, has failed. His stock with outstanding accounts he values at $300,000, or more than enough to meet his liabilities. The heaviest creditors are New York merchants to whom he owes about $100,000. Slack business is said to have caused the failure.

Killed by a Vicious Horse.

KENOSHA, Wis., Nov. 16.—James Hoye, 4 years old, was killed Saturday afternoon in his father's barn by the kick of a vicious horse. His grandfather, Oliver Hoye, tried to rescue him and was also kicked by the animal. He will die.

Death of Donn Piatt.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 13.—Donn Piatt died at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home at Maco-Chee, in Logan county, aged 72 years. He had been ill only a week with lung fever and his condition was not considered alarming.

Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such, that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 19, 1891.

The American Newspaper Annual.

Is published with a definite purpose. That purpose is to present as accurate a record of the Newspaper and Periodical Press of the United States and Canada, as it is possible to prepare. It is a record of current affairs in the newspaper world.

The indifference of some publishers and the numerous changes of others, make the difficulties of the undertaking very great. Several weeks are required after all revision ceases, to print, bind and distribute the book; and, as from 50 to 80 newspapers begin publication each week, (of which probably more than one-half consolidate, change location, or suspend); it will be readily seen that with even the most pains-taking care, and the greatest expedition, the statistics in some cases quickly become incorrect.

But, notwithstanding this inherent liability to error, we are confident that the Annual is far superior to all other works of its class, as to freshness and accuracy of information. This conviction is the result of a very careful examination and analysis of the best of its competitors, over which we claim superiority.

Because the entire time and energy of the editorial staff is given to the preparation and revision of its list, which occupy nine-tenths of its pages. Our time for this is all the time.

Because we exercise as to the character of the publications we admit to our list. Not everything that is printed is a newspaper, or magazine. Many are ephemeral, many intensely local, many absolutely without value to the general advertiser.

Because our lists mention more legitimate newspapers and periodicals than do any others; for, notwithstanding the fact that we exclude several hundreds others insert, our total number equals or exceeds theirs; proving conclusively that the American Newspaper Annual contains the names of a much larger number of useful advertising mediums than any other work of its kind.

Because we regularly receive and file away nearly 17,000 papers each week. We do business with a very large proportion of these, and business reasons therefore impel the publishers to advise us promptly of any changes they may make. When a newspaper begins or consolidates, the publisher advises us and solicits business. When it moves or suspends, the surviving competitor promptly does the same. Beside this, a frequent examination of our files is made with the same purpose in view. Finally, every publisher is requested (for the second or third time if necessary), to give us the facts concerning his publication.

Because the Annual is the only work of the kind which is based on statistics gathered during the year of its publication.

Because the circulations in the Annual are plainly given. We claim, that for the clear and quick expression of numbers, nothing has yet been found to equal plain figures. The Alphabet has its uses—and its limitations also. We can conceive of no more ingenious way to incommode readers in the search of information to which they are entitled, than to lock it up with a key—and frequently change that.

Because the elaborate state headings of the Annual give much valuable and varied information, of a sort rarely found in one volume; all of great interest as showing the wonderful resorces of our country; and of great practical utility to the business man who realizes that such knowledge is power.

Because the county headings are a most valuable aid to the intelligent placing of advertisements; while the town headings not only subserve the same purpose, but give, at the same time, particulars as to railroad, telegraph, express and banking facilities.

Because its lists of Editorial and Press Associations are of self-evident value to all newspaper men.

Because its lists of religious, agricultural and other class publications are fresh, full and reliable.

Because the advertisements which it prints are those of mediums worthy of notice, and willing to pay cash therefor. No system of swapping opens its pages to countless advertisements; while regard for the rights of those who purchase the book, forbids the insertion of numerous advertisements of our own. In short, the insertion of advertisements is incidental to the publication of the American Newspaper Annual, instead of its publication being incidental to the circulation of advertisements.

Because in form, printing and binding, as well as in the arrangement of its contents, the American Newspaper Annual is made in a manner becoming a standard book of reference, worthy alike of the important profession which it represents, and of the intelligent public to which it appeals.

The 12th (1891) edition is now ready—better than ever. Price $5.00, carriage paid.

14 MONTHS IN BED. "Mrs. Kelly requests me to write you in regard to what S. S. S. has done for her son, who has been sick so long with an abscess. She had two physicians, and they did everything for him that they could and he didn't improve. For fourteen months and five days he was in bed and not dressed. Some one recommended your S. S. S., and after he had taken two or three bottles he began to improve. He continued until he had taken eleven bottles, and to-day he is as well as ever. The boy is fourteen years old, and Mrs. Kelly lives next door to me, and I am well acquainted with the facts of the case." C. W Hodgkins, Postmaster, East Lamoine, Maine. Swift's Specific has a wonderful effect on children and young people. It should be given to every child who has any blood trouble or blood taint. It drives out the poison and poisonous germs, and enables nature to develop the child. Our treatise on the blood and skin will be mailed free to all applicants.

IN HYMEN'S BONDS.

A happy social event transpired last evening at the home of Mr. Jerome Cleveland, at which time his daughter Stella became Mrs. James A. Boyd. The party was a private one, but few guests aside from family relatives being present. Promptly at the appointed hour, half past five, Rev. W. H. Babbitt pronounced the marriage formula, by which two hearts were linked together for life. The usual congratulations followed and a wedding supper was served in keeping with the occasion. The parlors were neatly decorated with flowers. The arrangements were skillfully planned and the affair thoroughly enjoyed by those present. The bridal gifts were many and beautiful, comprising articles both useful and ornamental in character. Dr. and Mrs. R. B. House of Springfield, Ohio, lent their presence and best wishes to the happy gathering. It was a modest but home-like wedding, exactly in harmony with the good taste and sterling character of the contracting parties.

At the conclusion of the festivities the bridal pair drove to Adrian and took a late train for Toledo; thence they intend going to Chicago, where they will spend a brief honeymoon. Upon their return they will begin the realities of housekeeping at once, in the groom's own home, which has been elegantly fitted and furnished for their reception. Neither the groom nor bride need any introduction to our readers. Both have lived here from childhood and both have hosts of friends who will bid them God-speed as they embark on life's voyage together. Not as a mere formal compliment, but as a personal friend knowing their genuine worth, the HERALD wishes them a long and happy life, filled to the brim with health, wealth, and prosperity.

OBITUARY.

Catherine J., wife of James Jackson, was born in Cayuga county, N. Y., in 1819, and died in Tecumseh Nov. 8th, 1891. The funeral was held at the family residence, in this village, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 11th, conducted by Rev. O. J. Perrin, and was largely attended by sympathizing friends of the bereaved family. She was married to Mr. Jackson in 1839. Their happy union of fifty-two years was blessed with nine children, eight of whom are now living. In her own home Mrs. Jackson became conspicuous as the ideal wife and mother, wise, prudent and industrious. She conducted the affairs of her home in a manner greatly endearing herself to the family. She was very zealously devoted to her duties as a wife and mother. Who can measure the value of such faithfulness to society? If we could estimate the healing, comforting, purifying and elevating influence, which is ever flowing forth from this fountain, then we would be able to understand the sacred ministry of the home to the higher culture of mankind. It is the central force which continually widens the orbit of life, while every unselfish endeavor to lift and bear the burdens of the dear ones around fills the very atmosphere with music of light and joy. Those who have conscientiously filled this sacred mission will be sorely missed when they die. Heaven may gain, but earth will suffer an irreparable loss. May the consolation of Divine grace rest upon the stricken family.

Editor Field, of the Tecumseh News, was in town and visited the public schools a few days since, but failed to call at the Courier office. She was smart and she was pretty, and her elders thought her witty, and she tripped the "light fantastic" like a fay; she could read both French and Latin, she looked sweet in print or satin, and it made your heartstrings throb to hear her play. But in single life she tarried and she never, never, never married, and she'll doubtless be a spinster till she dies; for she bade a proud defiance to the culinary science, and she never learnt the mystery of pies

About seventeen men and two boys entered the hallway adjoining a Main street saloon, within the space of one hour, last Sunday afternoon. Is the law regarding the closing of saloons on the Sabbath observeds in this city? Many young boys are well supplied with cigarettes. Who furnishes them in violation of the law?—Adrian Messenger.

The November number of the Coil Spring Hustler, issued by the Page Woven Wire Fence Co., in the interest of their justly celebrated fence, is on our table. While the usual features are up to the standard, the third page is given up to an illustrated parody on "The House that Jack Built," which is the most unique bit of advertising yet seen from this enterprising firm.

The entertainment given by Leland T. Powers is unique, of a type entirely original with himself, and in which he has no rival. He takes some dramatic play and personifies all the characters himself in succession. The public is quick to appreciate anything of unusual merit and has given its approval to this talented young artist who can offer something out of the ordinary fashion.

Joseh Keppler has a forcible cartoon in Puck of November 18th, entitled: "Rally Round The Flag, Boys!" The leading Democrats of the country are raising the grand old flag of Tariff Reform, preparatory to the campaign of 1892. There is no question but that Tariff Reform is to be the issue in the next campaign, and Puck will undoubtedly do the subject full justice during the coming twelve months.

College day will be observed at the M. E. Church next Tuesday evening, Nov. 24, under the auspices of the Epworth League. The music will be under the charge of Miss Grayson, assisted by Miss Anderson, organist. The committee on literary exercises has prepared a choice program for the occasion. A general invitation is extended to all who would enjoy a delightful and instructive evening's entertainment. Admission free. Concert to begin at 7:30 p. m.

A course dinner with numerous illustrations showing a modern dinner-table beautifully decorated, a diagram of how to set it, and also each course separately, and describing in a charming and explicit way every detail of appointments and service and the thousand-and-one "little" things that are essential to the success of such an entertainment, is one of the attractions of the December number of Demorest's Family Magazine, which will be of interest to all women, and invaluable to inexperienced housekeepers. The numerous departments are, as usual, replete with seasonable ideas, and over 200 illustrations enhance the attractions of the splendid reading matter.

The Sabbath School Institute of the Lenawee Baptist Association, held here on Tuesday, was somewhat sparsely attended, owing to the inclement weather. However, the meeting lacked not in able speakers and new ideas and was one of interest throughout. The program as printed in last week's Herald, was carried out with few exceptions. Mrs. J. Carpenter was not present and Mrs. E. H. Porter's place was filled by Rev. E. D. Rundell, of New Buffalo. The Babtist Association is always in the front rank in Sunday School work and the papers read on this occasion were replete with new ideas and aggressive measures for advancing and improving the efficiency of a cause which effects so materially the education and training of our youth. The five minute talks on the relation of the Baptist Young Peoples union to the Sunday School were ably contributed to by Albert Howard, who evinced new ideas and some original thinking in this direction.

Robert Boyd, M. E. Conklin, Harry Dunn and Walter Burridge took advantage of the low rates for the Fat Stock Show by going to Chicago Wednesday evening. On Wednesday evening of last week Addison was visited by the most disastrous fire in the history of the village. A livery stable and several other buildings were destroyed, the loss aggregating over $6,000. The best brick block in town caught fire and it had a close call. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp in the livery stable.

WHISKY'S FOES.

The World's W. C. T. U. in Session in Boston.

Some of the Resolutions Adopted—Election of Officers—Formal Opening of the Convention with Delegates from All Over the World.

LOVERS OF WATER.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—In the World's W. C. T. U. Thursday resolutions requesting the board of managers of the Columbian exposition to prohibit the sale of intoxicants upon the grounds at any time; to close the exhibition on Sundays, and to require purity in the art exhibitions were adopted.

The election of the officers of the World's Women Christian Temperance union followed. Miss Frances E. Willard was chosen president; Lady Henry Somerset, vice president-at-large; Anna Gordon, of Boston, secretary; Mrs. Williams, of Canada, treasurer.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—A short but early service of praise and prayer preceded the formal opening of the convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance union. The gathering is being held in Tremont Temple, and the immense edifice was crowded to the doors. The delegates from foreign countries to the world's convention occupied seats of honor upon the platform and in the front rows on the main floor. In addition to the foreign countries every state and territory in the United States was represented.

Miss Frances Willard, the president, opened the proceedings by presenting her annual report. The president's address was so long that only its salient points were read, but copies of the Union Signal containing it were distributed to the audience.

The report of the treasurer showed the receipts of the year to be $25,259 and the expenditures $25,217. The report of Mrs. Caroline J. Bull, of Connecticut, the corresponding secretary, showed the progress of the work since its inception. At the first convention in Cleveland in 1874 seventeen states were represented. At this convention fifty-one states and territories and the district of Columbia are represented. At the time of the second convention there were 4,458 members in the union. This year the membership is 153,402, a gain over last year of 10,369 members.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—The pulpits of many of the churches of this city and suburbs were occupied yesterday by visiting delegates to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention now being held here. At Tremont Temple Lady Henry Somerset delivered the annual sermon.

Many Crooks Caught.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Nineteen safe-blowers, burglars and jail-breakers were captured by the police of the Desplaines street station Saturday night. The raid in which these criminals were arrested was one of the largest in the history of Chicago police captures, and it is thought a well-organized and successful gang of crooks, which has been committing many depredations in this city and surrounding towns, will be broken up.

A Good Record.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—J. A. Dumont, supervising inspector general of steam vessels in the treasury department, reports that during the past fiscal year there were thirty-three accidents, in which 336 lives were lost. It was estimated that 600,000,000 passengers were carried during the year, making one life lost to each 1,755,457 passengers carried.

The Next G. A. R. Encampment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the council administration of the Grand Army of the Republic held here Wednesday afternoon at which Gen. Palmer the commander-in-chief, presided, it was decided to hold the next annual grand encampment in Washington, September 20, 1892.

Austria to Receive American Pork.

VIENNA, Nov. 16.—A decree will shortly be issued revoking the prohibition of American pork in the Austro-Hungarian empire. Minister Grant has been notified that his efforts have been successful and that the custom houses will soon be opened to American salt meats.

The American Bankers.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 13.—The American Bankers' association devoted Thursday's session to listening to interesting papers on various topics. Officers were elected, Richard M. Nelson, of Selma, Ala., being chosen president and Hon. John Jay Knox vice president.

Fell Nineteen Stories.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—James Charleston, a terra cotta worker, fell nineteen stories from the top of the masonic temple building, at State and Randolph streets, Saturday morning, and was crushed into an unrecognizable mass of flesh.

Piano Company Fails.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 16.—A special from Council Bluffs, Ia., says: The Mueller Piano Company has failed with liabilities of $80,000. It is thought that the assets will cover this. Slow collections and poor trade is the cause.

The Failure Record.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 291, as compared with a total of 226 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 266.

Fell from the Tenth Story.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Late Saturday afternoon Herman Weise, a drug clerk employed by Gates & Co., fell down the elevator shaft from the tenth story. When picked up he was dead, his neck being broken.

Its First Shut-Down.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Nov. 13.—Ryerson, Hill & Co.'s lower sawmill, which has been in continuous operation since 1847, shut down Wednesday.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

Extracts from the Annual Report of Commissioner Mason.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The annual report of John W. Mason, commissioner of internal revenue, shows that the total receipts for the last fiscal year from all sources were $146,045,416, an increase of $3,440,719 over the receipts for the previous fiscal year. The cost of collection for the last fiscal year was $4,210,604, or 2.88 per cent. of the receipts, against 2.82 last year. The estimated expenses for the next fiscal year are $4,522,350. During the year 698 stills were destroyed and ninety-seven were removed, involving the arrest of 378 persons. The aggregate amount of taxes collected from tobacco during the last fiscal year was $32,796,270. The decrease is $1,162,720. The tax on cigars and cigarettes was not changed and the collections therefrom was increased $1,386,650 during the last fiscal year. Tables in regard to the production of oleomargarine show during the year ended June 30, 1891, an increase of production over any former year, but a decrease for exportation. The total production was 44,892,400 pounds.

In a chapter on sugar the commissioner details the action of the bureau in providing for the payment of bounty as authorized by the tariff act. The number of sugar producers who have applied for license is 4,906, and their estimated production is 613,376,380 pounds, of which 572,408,380 pounds is sugar cane. The amount of bounty to be paid for the production of the year ending June 30, 1892, will, it is estimated, be as follows: On cane sugar, $8,912,500; on beet sugar, $500,000; sorghum sugar, $40,000; maple sugar, $176,250; total, $9,628,750. In the last fiscal year we imported 3,483,442,325 pounds of sugar of the value of $105,661,431, and produced 512,261,530 pounds. The amount of sugar produced in the United States is about one-eighth of the amount consumed.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

The President Issues a Proclamation Fixing Thursday, November 26, as the Date.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—President Harrison has issued his Thanksgiving proclamation fixing November 26 as the day. The full text is as follows:

"BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. A proclamation: It is a very glad incident of the marvelous prosperity which has crowned this year now drawing to a close that its helpful and reassuring touch has been felt by all our people. It has been as wide as our country, and so special that every home has felt its comforting influence. It is too great to be the work of man's power and too particular to be the device of his mind. To God, the beneficent and the all wise, who makes the labors of men to be fruitful, redeems their losses by His grace, and the measure of whose giving is as much beyond the thoughts of man as it is beyond his deserts, the praise and gratitude of this favored nation are justly due.

"Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November present, to be a day of joyful thanksgiving to God for the bounties of His providence, for the peace in which we are permitted to enjoy them, and for the preservation of those institutions of civil and religious liberty which He gave our fathers the wisdom to devise and establish, and us the courage to preserve. Among the appropriate observances of the day are rest from toil, worship in the public congregation, the renewal of family ties about our American firesides, and thoughtful helpfulness towards those who suffer lack of the body or of the spirit.

"BENJAMIN HARRISON."

"By the President:

"JAMES G. BLAINE,
"Secretary of State."

WOULD HURT THE FAIR.

Chicago Warned Not to Allow the Anarchists Too Much Rope.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The anniversary of the execution of the Chicago anarchists was celebrated by their sympathizers throughout Europe in various clandestine ways, but the meetings were pounced upon and broken up whenever intelligence could be had that they were to take place and many of the participants were arrested. There was much curiosity here to know how these demonstrations would be treated in the United States, especially in Chicago. The British press comment very freely on the conduct of the Chicago police, and the opinion is expressed that the meeting should not have been permitted, and those who took part in it should have been arrested at once and not allowed to make speeches threatening public order. The consequences of the toleration of a disorderly and dangerous element on the future of the Chicago fair are pointed out. The Globe warns Chicago to take measures for repression in time, for if anarchy is allowed a free hand very few foreigners will care to visit her wonderful exhibition. Leniency toward these avowed disturbers of the public peace could not but check the tide of success which the fair has been enjoying in this country.

Daring Work of Masked Thieves.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 14.—Four masked men entered the store of the Farmers' Trading Company Thursday and, driving the clerks into a corner at the point of revolvers, robbed the store of sixteen gold and eight silver watches and took about $2,000 in cash from the safe. They mounted horses and departed. A posse is after them.

Allen G. Thurman's Birthday.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—Allen G. Thurman on Friday celebrated his 78th birthday. On account of the recent death of Mrs Thurman the banquet of the Thurman club was omitted. Mr. Thurman is in good health, and the stories of his illness are without foundation.

Has Lived Under Every President.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Mrs. Hannah Mosher, of Glens Falls, is 102 years old. She has lived during the term of every president of the United States. She is as active as a woman of 60, and her mental powers are unimpaired.

Will Visit Scotland.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the famed American evangelists, have agreed to make a tour of Scotland. They anticipate a period of considerable spiritual success among the Scots.

GOOD WILL TO CHILI.

President Harrison Receives Senor Montt's Credentials.

The Latter Says His Mission Is to Preserve Peace Between the Two Countries—The President Makes a Friendly Speech.

A CORDIAL MEETING.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The United States officially recognized the new congressional government of Chili. The ceremonies incident to recognition occurred in the blue room of the executive mansion at 11:25 o'clock, a. m., Saturday when President Harrison formally received Senor Don Pedro Montt, the new minister of Chili to the United States, and the secretaries of legation.

Senor Montt, upon being presented, said his mission was to cultivate and maintain the relations of peace and friendship between the United States and Chili which have ever been close and cordial. For the accomplishment of this purpose he relied upon the kindness and good will which the United States government has always manifested for the representatives of Chili. He expressed Chili's sincere wishes for the prosperity and welfare of this country, which is so highly favored by Providence, and for the president's own happiness.

In response President Harrison said: "The presence of a representative of the government of Chili at the capital we hope will tend to promote a good understanding between the two governments and the early settlement, upon terms just and honorable to both, of the diplomatic questions now somewhat urgently awaiting adjustment. The government of the United States, as well as the people, particularly desire and rejoice in the prosperity of all its neighbors in this hemisphere. Our diplomatic relations with them have always been and will continue to be free from intermeddling with their national affairs. Our people are too just to desire that the commercial or political advantage of this government should be sought by the promotion of disastrous dissensions in other countries. We hear with sorrow every fresh tale of war or internal strife, and are always ready to give our friendly offices to the promotion of peace. If these are not acceptable or do not avail it is our policy to preserve an honorable and strict neutrality, as was done during the recent war in Chili. Tempting commercial and political advantages may be offered for our aid or influence by one or the other of the contending parties, but this we have not deemed to be consistent with obligations of international honor and good will.

"This government was quite as determined in its refusal to allow a war vessel of the United States to carry to a neutral port, where it could be available for war purposes, the silver of Balmaceda's cause to give aid to the forces opposing him. The questions involved were Chilian questions, and this government endeavored to observe those principles of non-intervention upon which it had so strongly insisted when civil war disturbed our own people. I cannot doubt that this policy will commend itself to those who now administer the government of Chili, nor can I doubt that when excitement has given place to calmness, when the truth is ascertained and the selfish and designing perversions of recent incidents have been exposed, our respective governments will find a basis of increased mutual respect, confidence and friendship.

"Mr. Minister, this government and our people rejoice that peace has been restored in Chili and that its government is the expression of the free choice of its people. You may assure your honored president, who has been chosen under circumstances which so strongly testify to his moderation and to the esteem in which he is held by the people of all parties, that the government of the United States entertains only good will for him and for the people of Chili and cannot doubt that the existing and all future differences between the two governments will find an honorable adjustment."

The presentation occupied about fifteen minutes and at its conclusion Secretary Blaine escorted the new minister and secretaries to the door of the executive mansion and shook each cordially by the hand.

GOOD FOR THE CONVICTS.

Foster on Bank Failures.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Secretary Foster says that the recent bank failures do not prove that the system is defective or that Comptroller Lacey has neglected his duties. It is impossible, he says, to have a banking or any other system perfectly proof against fraud. Mr. Foster says only about ten banks have failed during the past year out of 4,000, which he considers a small percentage.

A Parson Goes to Prison.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Fifteen years' imprisonment in Clinton prison was the sentence passed on Rev. Henry W. George, ex-pastor of the Reformed church at Leeds, who had been convicted of manslaughter in causing the death of Lotta Townsend by a criminal operation in January last.

FISHING FOR SHARKS.

Terrific Struggle with a Ferocious Man-Eater.

The cool, dim shadows of early dawn still clung to the leeward side of things as old Cap'n Joel made sail on the little sloop. A mild breeze came up from the southward and stirred into lazy life the vagrant patches of mist that hung here and there on the surface of Great South bay. Away out in the solitude of water the lighthouse on Fire island loomed faintly against the rosy sky.

"Tide's on the change now," said the old man, as he let the sloop's head pay off. "We're mebbe a little late for the first run, but we'll get 'em further along, and mebbe one or two on the turn. Never can tell about shark's ways, though. Mebbe won't get a bite all day."

"Don't croak, Cap'n Joel," said I, as I trimmed in the jib sheet, with that elaborate attention to detail which so plainly suggests that time is a burden on one's hands. "We may get a whale before night."

"Mebbe so, mebbe so," admitted the old man, "but the chances are agin it. I don't believe in raisin' no hopes, an' sharks is mighty uncertain. I remember one day last summer I had a city man out after sharks, and we sailed and sailed and never a bite did we get."

"Had you hired by the hour, I suppose."

Cap'n Joel looked hurt. I always manage to hurt the old man's feelings early in the morning, so that he will be tractable for the rest of the day. When I fish for sharks I want a skipper who will obey like a Chinaman. In return for hurting the old man's feelings I invariably make it up to him in some other way at the close of the trip.

"Man-eaters plenty this year, Cap'n Joel?" I asked, cheerfully and briskly.

"Not so darned plenty," the old fellow grumbled, making a pretense of squinting carefully under the boom, as though he was calculating the danger to be feared from two other sloops about six miles off.

"Anybody caught any?"

"Not as I know on." He was still grumbling. "'Taint many folks as fish for sharks. Most people's got something better to do." For Cap'n Joel this was very severe, but I had hit him in a very tender spot. "Where'll I head for?" he asked, almost sullenly.

"For the inlet, to be sure. Seems to me that you forget things very quickly." I was still brisk and cheerful. The old man muttered to himself. He knew well enough where to go, but his feelings were hurt, and when the old fellow's feelings are hurt he acts like a boy.

As we went along close-hauled for the Fire island inlet I made ready my new shark tackle. Cap'n Joel had never seen it before, and in ordinary circumstances he would have been as curious and as eager about it as a child, but he said never a word. When I had last fished with the old man I had used a heavy trolling line, one end of which was made fast to the boat. When I hooked a shark I simply hauled in hand over hand by main force. This year I decided to put a little more skill into shark fishing, and for that purpose I prepared an extra strong bass rod and reel, and fitted to it as stout a line as I could find that would run readily on the reel. I intended to play the shark as I would play a bass. Old Capt. Joel sniffed contemptuously, but silently, as he took note of the new-fangled shark tackle, but I let him alone in his shell.

It was my purpose to meet the incoming flood tide at the inlet, and to reach back and forth across it until I was satisfied with the day's sport. Sharks follow the smaller fish into the Great South bay with each tide, and sometimes a big one will come along and stir up the bathers on the beach at Fire island. The fun that a shark can have with a lot of women and children along a bathing beach is something out of the ordinary run of American humor. The shark probably enjoys it, and it never does the bathers any physical harm.

The wind came in a little fresher with the flood, so that the sloop had good working headway. She would jibe quickly, and not too hard, while at the same time she could be luffed up in a twinkling. I baited the large hook with a plump mossbunker, which the old man had provided the day before, and threw it overboard.

"Slack away and stand off and on across the flood," said I. The sloop filled away with lifted sheets. The long line trailed astern with constantly increasing pressure. Away off on the lee quarter there was a slight commotion on the surface of the water, and in a minute or two I fancied that I could catch a glimpse now and then of a shark.

"Do you see any sign of game?" I said to Capt. Joel, as he came about and stood back toward Fire island beach.

"There's one or two sharks about," he answered, but he did not explain where they might be found. Then we stood off and on again without catching sight of the triangular fin.

Suddenly there came a tremendous jerk on the stout line, the reel gave a wild scream and began to revolve like a buzz-saw, and the stiff rod bent like a whip. I had struck big game. I put on the check very quickly, and as the velocity of the line lessened I thought of the pain that the big hook was causing in the mouth of the ferocious sea devil. The pain would stop him if the line would not. Presently the line slackened and I reeled in furiously.

"Ease off and run for it," I shouted, "or he will be on us."

The little sloop gathered headway and darted off before the wind, but still the line was slack. The shark was trying to see what held him. In about two minutes I had the line tight again, and then I had the sloop brought up into the wind. The shark then took a notion that he would go across the bay on his own account, but before he had made away with half of the line the lively little sloop was chasing him. All the time I kept up a steady pull on the line, now holding fast and then slacking away, as the necessity of the situation seemed to require. The shark was getting vicious. Suddenly he made a lunge and changed his course.

"Jibe over! quick!" I called out. "He's after us again." The nimble sloop turned like a top and went racing away toward Babylon, with her lee rail awash. I reeled in as fast as I could turn my hand. The shark came on like a race horse, dragging the slack line after him. He made straight for the boat.

"Luff lively," I shouted; "luff, or we lose him." The sloop came into the wind shaking and fluttering. It may have been the change of course or it may have been the pull of the line, but whatever it was, the shark just missed the rudder. If he had fouled it, we should have lost him. I saw him plainly as he darted past, and in my perspiring and panting condition he looked to be the living incarnation of devilish ferocity. The sloop bore away, and in a moment more I had the shark towing by jerks at the end of the line, and the line well in the reel at that.

The shark was by no means subdued, however, for he led us a lively chase for fully half an hour after that. The nimble little sloop ran, and reached, and luffed, and came about, and jibed, and spun around like a crazy thing, and all the while old Capt. Joel said never a word. He was kept nearly as busy as I was, for it is no small task to keep a sloop dancing about on the water like a monkey on a hot brick. The old man was perspiring freely, but he worked to perfection. He knew as well as I did what to do, and when I gave an order he was already to obey it instantly. He could have done it all without an order, but on board ship nothing is done without instructions from the man in charge.

"What do you take this 'ere sloop for, anyway; a top?" he grumbled, as he filled away for the twentieth time. "Been a dancin' about like a looney for the past half hour." I knew by this that he was warming up to the excitement of the occasion. His sullen and resentful feelings had oozed out of him as he began to perspire over his work.

At the end of three-quarters of an hour I was about to give up the fight as hopeless, but I resolved to keep it up until I fairly dropped down from sheer weariness. I never had been so completely tired out in all my life. The shark was altogether too heavy for this sort of fishing. A smaller shark would have been sport, but this was something like hard work. After a time, however, I noticed that the big fellow on the end of the line was becoming less ugly and energetic. He made a dash now and then, but he did not keep it up. By degrees I reeled him in toward the boat. I did it all very slowly and cautiously, for I did not wish him to make a particularly desperate break for liberty and get away from me. I felt that I had not enough strength left to resist him. After some trouble I got him within a short distance of the boat.

"Stand by with the lance, Cap'n Joel," said I. The old man dropped the tiller and took up a lance made of a bayonet fastened to the end of a bamboo fishing-rod. He knelt on the deck beside me, with the lance poised over the water and with his toes braced against the standing rigging. I gently coaxed the shark alongside directly under us.

"Stab him," said I, and almost before the sound of the words had died away the keen bayonet had flashed into the shark's head and out again twice. The third stab went into the unresisting water, for the shark thrashed the water into foam with his great tail and tore off across the bay. The reel screamed again and again as the wounded thing, crazed with pain and rage, darted here and there. Wherever he rushed he left a thin trail of blood. Although I was no longer so heavily oppressed with weariness I took my time about checking him, for I knew that I had him then.

When the wild creature's fury was spent I reeled him in again to the boat. He was weak, but still game to the last. Capt. Joel stabbed him four times, but even with that the fish made a desperate struggle for life. Capt. Joel put a noose around under his forward fins, and we hauled him aboard by means of tackle already prepared for that purpose. We let him hang in the rigging while we bore away for home.

When I was rested a bit I started to measure him with a tape line. As I fussed about him he made a lurch and gave a vicious snap with his ugly jaws that caused me to fall headlong on the cabin roof. His razor-like teeth missed my left arm by barely six inches. Old Cap'n Joel grinned like a fiend and chuckled to himself all the way home. It must have been the shark's last death spasm, for when I took the lance and prodded him with it he made no further demonstration. He was dead beyond all recall.

On the way home I put the tape line on him. I found that he was a little more than five feet long. This is not large for a man-eater; in fact it was merely an ordinary sort of Great South bay shark. While I was cutting off a fin he slipped out of the noose and fell overboard, and that was the last we saw of him. He might have been a man-eater for all that I could tell to the contrary. If he were not, it was solely through lack of proper opportunity.—N. Y. Times.

A Little Girl's Experience In A Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich. and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a with a dreadful Cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones".—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., - - NOV. 19, 1891.

Mayor Hoch, of Adrian, was in town Wednesday.

The stores close at 8 p. m. this week, instead of 7:30.

Mrs. M. Rose is moving into her new house this week.

J. B. Hause was in Chicago last Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Kate Fox and Henry Fox spent Sunday with friends here.

David Woodward is moving into his new residence this week.

Mrs. George Kies, of Elkhart, is making Clinton friends a visit.

Ed Parker and wife moved into John Machen's house last week.

Mrs. Solomon Parker is visiting her son Charles in Eaton Rapids.

Allen Bartlett and wife give a large pedro party Thursday evening.

George Kies was here the first of the week, but left Wednesday for Boston.

Mrs. McConnell, of West Toledo, has been visiting friends here a few days.

Miss Mary Sanford, of Port Huron, was a guest at Rev. Wastell's last week.

Quite a number came up from Tecumseh last Friday night to hear "Gilded Age."

There is some talk among our young people of organizing a dancing school here.

Horace Bartlett expects to put a hot water heating apparatus in his new residence.

C. D. Keyes is making a trip for C. S. Burroughs in the interest of the gum business.

E. F. Muir returned last Thursday from Eaton Rapids, bringing a wife with him.

George Wright, of Winfield, Kansas, is making an extended visit with friends here.

Fred Wright and wife, of Hayfield, Minn., arrived here last Friday for several weeks' visit.

Miss Cora Ames, of Ypsilanti, came here last Friday to visit her sister, Mrs. H. D. Niblack.

Charles Keyser and wife have moved into Thomas Matthews' house, one-half mile west of town.

Three young men passed through town early Sunday morning on bicycles, en route for Jackson. They left Toledo Saturday at 5 p. m.

The ladies of St. Johns church have sent for a manuscript play and will put it on the stage the first part of December, the proceeds to be used toward erecting a tower.

We overheard a scrap of conversation among some ladies the other day, in which they expressed their satisfaction that next year will be divisible by four. If their plans are carried out things will "hum."

The entertainment given by the Kellogg Concert Co., of New York, last Friday evening, did not give general satisfaction, though the company undoubtedly did their best to please. We have had too many entertainments of a higher order to be satisfied with anything below par.

If another circus should appear here this season there would not be a boy in town who would be content to walk on his feet. As it is, the air in the vicinity of small boys is full of legs, while their owners are turning cart wheels, walking on their hands, and doing other equally astonishing tricks.

The necessity for new heating apparatus in the town hall is now more apparent than ever. It would be an impossibility to give a hop there and have the old round oak stove occupy the center of the hall, to say nothing of the inconsistency of the thing. It is to be hoped that measures will soon be taken towards remedying this condition of affairs.

A CHALLENGE.

I hereby challenge Alex Kennedy to run a foot race with Chauncey Ogden, 100 yards, for $25 or $50 a side. Race to be run this month.—Clinton Local.

WEALTH—Is something which most people seek, and which but few are indifferent to, no matter in what form it presents itself. The word "pecuniary," which is often used in speaking of a man's riches, comes from the Latin word pecus, which means cattle, and shows that formerly a man's wealth was reckoned by the cattle he possessed. Abraham is said to have been "very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold." But no matter in what a man's riches may consist, it is all vanity and vexation of spirit, unless in connection therewith he has health. Emerson fully understood this when he said "the first wealth is health," and we have no doubt if he had known the virtues of S. S. S. that he would have recommended its use to all persons suffering from the diseases for which it is recommended.

SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

He held the audience spell-bound, and there is no ground for wonder that in so short a time he should have gained a place among the first of the younger men before the American public.—Albany Evening Journal.

The entertainment was one of the best ever given in Norristown. As an impersonator Mr. Powers has no superior. The different characters which he assumes make a wonderful performance, and his acting is perfect.—Norristown, Pa., Herald.

ITS EXCELLENT QUALITIES

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

THE BEST AUTHORITIES,

Such as Dr. Dio Lewis, Prof. Gross, and others, agree that catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It therefore requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effectually and permanently cures catarrh. Thousands praise it.

HARPER & BROTHERS, New York.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know: I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the-way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household; father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

Free mail delivery is "ripe." The Postmaster General has set the ball a rolling, claiming that by recent experiments the increase in the sale of stamps will pay the extra cost of free delivery. All that is necessary to insure success is for farmers and others, not favored with free delivery, to circulate petitions in every school district and forward the same to their respective members of Congress, asking for such service, and it will be granted. Farmers living isolated and remote from postoffices and telegraphs, need free delivery far more than residents of a city, who live within stone's-throw of these necessities. Next in order will be the postal telegraph, whereby everybody can send messages at cost. The people collectively can do this business cheaper and more of it than individual corporations. The same with money matters. Away with our bogus national banking system; with a pretended gold base, which in fact is based on Government bonds, for the people to pay interest on, and controlled by individual corporations. The hue and cry over free or limited coinage of silver proves the system wrong, because the supply cannot be regulated, from the high price of the commodity and liability to shrink or swell and be shifting to different parts of the globe, under control of corporations. Money should be made of the cheapest, most suitable and inexhaustable material; then the supply can be regulated by statutes. Postal savings and loan banks are what we want, where people can safely deposit and loan money at reasonable rates—an automatic system, based on national law. We understand that the Postmaster General favors free delivery, postal telegraph and postal savings banks.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Thursday evening, Nov. 12th, the Farmers' Social Club met at I. H. Schreder's. The program was carried out as arranged.

The Question Box brought out the fact that the gentlemen members at least had burnished up their knowledge of history, and were prepared not only to answer but to prove the truth of the answers. The question for discussion brought out the opinions of the men and the majority thought that while they would not advocate the right of franchise for released prisoners, they also thought there were many criminals outside who should also be disfranchised.

The next meeting will be held at R. B. Gillespie's, Dec. 10th:

Than cure, and those who are subject to rheumatism can prevent attacks by keeping the blood pure and free from the acid which causes the disease. For this purpose Hood's Sarsaparilla is used by thousands with great success. It is the best blood purifier.

BEST OF REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPERS.

The Tribune for 1892.

ROSWELL G. HORR ON THE TARIFF.

The Republican party, triumphant in 1891, wherever national issues were at stake, renews, aggressively and bravely, the fight for 1892. The New York Tribune, the ablest, most reliable, and best of Republican papers, leads the way.

During 1892, Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, the witty orator, will continue in the Tribune his remarkable articles on the Tariff, Reciprocity, Coinage, and the Currency. These topics are all understandable; the Republican policy with regard to all of them is right, patriotic and impregnable; but dust has been thrown in the people's eyes, and the air has been filled with fog by lying and tricky Tariff Reformers. The Tribune prints from one to five exceedingly entertaining articles every week explaining these questions.

Mr. Horr begins at the beginning of every subject, and makes it so clear that everyone can understand and no one can answer him. Ask any neighbor what he thinks of Mr. Horr's writings. He will tell you that they are genial, clear, entertaining and perfectly unanswerable. A specialty is made of answering all questions, asked in good faith, on the Tariff, Reciprocity, Coinage, the Currency, and the projects of the Farmers' Alliance. The Tribune is the best national Republican paper to supplement your local paper during 1892.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN LIFE.

The Tribune will also continue the series of articles to young men and women, penned by men who, beginning life themselves with few advantages, have nevertheless succeeded honorably and brilliantly. It will also reply to questions as to what young men and women should do to succeed in life, under the particular circumstances in which their lot in life is cast. The replies will be written under the direction of Roswell G. Horr, whose familiarity with American life and opportunities and whose deep and cordial sympathy with all who are struggling under adverse circumstances, make the replies practical and satisfactory.

VITAL TOPICS OF THE DAY.

Many special contributions will be printed from men and women of distinguished reputation. Among the topics are: "Silver Coinage, the latest views;" "Proper Function of the Minority in Legislation," to include one paper each from a Democrat and a Republican, prominent in public life; "Harmful Tendencies of Trusts;" "Arid Lands of the United States;" "Millionaires of the United States;" "Free Postal Delivery in Rural Communities;" "Better Pay for Fourth Class Postmasters;" "Importance of the Nicaragua Canal;" "Village Improvement;" "Our German Fellow Citizen in America," and many others.

AGRICULTURE.

In addition to the regular two pages a week of how to run a farm and make it pay, there will be, during 1892, special papers on "Hot House Lambs," "Model Farms," "Tobacco Raising," "Sugar Beets," "Fancy High Priced Butter Making," "Care of Bees," "Market Gardening," "Live Stock," and a variety of other equally important branches of American farming.

FOR OLD SOLDIERS.

For Veterans of the war there will be a page a week of war stories, answers to questions, news and gossip. Mrs. Annie Wittenmyer will supply an interesting column of news of the W. R. C.

The Tribune's War Stories of the past year have never been surpassed for thrilling interest.

FOR FAMILIES.

Families will value the pages devoted to "Questions and Answers," "Household Decoration," "Home Interests," "Cooking" "Knitting and Crochet," "Young Folks," and the Fashions.

A great editorial page will be printed, and fiction, foreign letters, book reviews, travels, checkers, chess and fun abundantly supplied.

What a Magazine Costs.

A very good idea of the amount of money it costs to successfully conduct one of the magazines of to-day is aptly illustrated in some figures regarding the editorial cost of The Ladies' Home Journal of this city, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The Journal is edited by Mr. Edward Bok. For shaping the thoughts of his 750,000 women readers each month Mr. Bok is paid $10,000 per year, and has an interest in the business besides which nets him fully twice his salary. He has a staff of sixteen salaried editors, which includes men and women like Rev. Dr. Talmage, Robert J. Burdette, Palmer Cox, Margaret Bottome, Isabel Mallon and Maria Parloa. The combined salaries of these editors exceed $20,000 a year. The Journal spends each month $2,000, or about $25,000 per year on miscellaneous matter not contributed by its regular editors, and the working force in the editorial department means at least $6,000 more in salaries, making over $60,000 a year, and this represents but a single department of the magazine; and I question whether any periodical is conducted on a more business-like and economical basis than is the Journal. No wonder that J. B. Lippincott, when asked by a friend why he did not keep a yacht, replied: "A man can only sustain one luxury—I publish a magazine."

State Sunday School Association.

The thirty-first annual convention of the Michigan State Sunday School association will be held in the Central M. E. church, Muskegon, December 1, 2 and 3. B. F. Jacobs and Prof. H. M. Hamill, of Chicago, will be present. Music conducted by Mrs. E. A. Hough of Jackson. Gospel hymns No. 6 will be used. Each county and township organization is entitled to two delegates besides their officers, and every Sunday School in the state should send their superintendent and one delegate. The citizens offer free entertainment to all accredited delegates provided that on or before Nov. 28th, they send their name and address to E. J. Latimer, No. 10 Jefferson street, Muskegon. The committee have also secured low rates at hotels and boarding houses for all who wish to avail themselves of such accommodations. All railroads sell round trip tickets for one and one-third fare. Tickets must be bought Nov. 30th or the morning of Dec. 1, good to return until Dec. 5, inclusive.

Lenawee Teachers' Association.

The first meeting of the Lenawee Teachers' Association of the school year of 1891-2 will be held in the High School Room, at Adrian, on Saturday, December 5, 1891. Program—10 A. M. NO HABITATION.

There can be no habitation in the blood or body for poisonous microbes when Swift's Specific enters the system. It changes the character of the blood so that the germs must either perish or get out, and of course they leave. S. S. S. also forces out the poison which the microbes have left behind. If there is a sore or ulcer the poison comes out through that, otherwise through the skin.

"Having suffered much from contagious blood poison, after using half a dozen bottles of Swift's Specific I was restored to perfect health, and all eruptive sores disappeared. You are at liberty to make any use of my statement that you wish.—J. Crosby Byron, 208 Third Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.

I had a severe attack of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1,000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. Newman, Grayling, Mich.

MOTHER'S FRIEND,

is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and and worth the price for that alone.

GRATIFYING TO ALL.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are abundantly gratifying to the California Fig Syrup Company.

THE MAJOR'S SPREAD.

How the Good Old Soul Entertained Enemies Unawares.

"LOST! Lost!"

"Teddy!"

"If you'd only have helped me—"

"Did you approach him as I advised you? Did—"

"Approach him? How can a fellow approach a man that meets him at the first sally with the sword of ridicule, and then follows his thrust with a cannonading of vituperative epithets—"

"If you hadn't allowed those fellows to run poor old Sultan—"

"Oh, Sultan be hanged! They didn't hurt him any—"

"He might have overlooked past offenses, and mightn't—"

"Look here, Kittie McCalligan, what's the use of your 'mights' and your 'mightn'ts'—Uncle Mac detests, abhors, abominates, despises, hates and loathes the college boys—"

"For which I am painfully aware he has, too often, just cause. Who ties cats to his window shutters? Who puts turtle eggs under the hen? Who smuggles howling dogs into the cellar at dead of night, fills Sultan's mane with burs, and paints the front fence red, white and blue? You may use all the telling synonyms you care to—"

"If he didn't hate 'em they wouldn't do it—"

"'They'—with Teddy McCalligan, ring-leader, left out?"

"Oh, I say, Kit—"

"You fellows don't do much to make him love you that I have ever seen. Great, grown boys like you, at that, not a soul among you under seventeen—"

"Nor one of us over twenty. Twenty's awful young for a boy, Kit, and all the fellows so far from home, and that, and half-way homesick, the most of 'em, and not one allowed to go home at Thanksgiving, with the Don kicking up such a dust about it all—"

"You can go home, at any rate, and as for being homesick, I'll wager that Jim—"

"Oh! Jim Junior—'beautiful Jim'—he's the rummiest cove of the lot, if you like—and you needn't roll your eyes around in such an indignant manner, either—you're not the only girl living."

"Teddy!"

"Well, you are, then; but I happened to see a photograph in Jim's chest pocket—"

"Teddy!"

"Stunning picture—eyes like stars, mouth like—well, what you crying about?"

"Did you—did—did—did you ever hear Jim say he wa—was homesick?"

"Think the fellow's a blubbering idiot? S'pose you imagine he's going around dampening handkerchiefs with the brine! Oh, I say, Kit, that was your photograph I caught on to—help a fellow out, won't you?"

When a man in impecunious circumstances acts in a manner somewhat unusual, he is straightway dubbed a crank; if, on the other hand, a man of means is guilty of the selfsame actions, he is termed merely eccentric. Maj. McCalligan's bank account was large enough to allow him to be called by the longer and more euphonious appellation, and persistent enough in his oddity to keep the sibilant word continually upon the tongues of the people unluckily obliged, by stress of circumstances, to dwell inside the corporation of the populous college town. The major had settled there long before any great barracks of a school building had been erected, before the noise and confusion consequent upon the arrival of hundreds of manner-less youths within the town—youths who laughed law and order to scorn, and had since filled the major's nights with a hideous unrest. That he, the hero of a hundred battles, should be routed by such an enemy to his peace, that he should pull up stakes and fly before so puling, so inane a foe was as far from his thoughts as that the major's ire was that adversary's chief joy. In every way possible, innocently or maliciously, these tormentors sought to arouse the major's wrath, desisting only when they had won for themselves the dear delight of seeing his quick Irish blood fly to his scowling brow, and hearing his quick Irish tongue berating them with the choice invective he had, with seeming forethought, gathered for such occasions as these in his native land.

In the college town, therefore, the major had remained, pestered and enjoyed by youths who grew to manhood, graduated, and, as the years flew by, began sending on second editions of themselves to their beloved Alma Mater.

During this passage of time the major's sister—the sole idol of his heart—had married and, after several years of married bliss, had found herself a widow, with two little children to care for. Although she realized their great need of her, and fought bravely to live for their sakes, her efforts were of no avail, and each day saw her more and more the shadow of her former self. In vain her brother tried to comfort her—the fond heart was broken, and before the winter frost had melted above the grave wherein lay all her hopes, there was another mound to be covered by the soft white mantle of the snow, and the major, filled with that mournful tenderness felt only by lamenting Irish hearts, led the two little ones back to his own fireside, accepting them as a sacred legacy. He gave them his name and his undivided care and attention, and joyed in the sense of his ownership of two charming children, who were now as much his own as though he had suffered sleepless nights during their infancy, and been fretted by a wife of his choice—for the major was not a marrying man, and the thought of an outsider—a woman at that—coming into his irresponsible bachelor existence, and laying down any sort of law, or chalking any sort of mark for him to toe, was a maddening one.

But even sacred legacies can be, at times, trying. Not that the major had had the fact borne in upon him, as it were, until the children were well grown. Teddy had started to college and joined the rabble, and Kittie had shown a decided and unblushing preference for a certain sophomore whom he had caught on his way back from a stolen visit to Teddy's room sliding down one of the pillars that supported his (the major's) porch, and whom he had thereafter forbidden the premises.

Granted these children tried him, and that he made them aware of the fact by the use of language peculiar to the major, for all that they felt that their uncle loved them as dearly as they loved him, and when Teddy preferred his request—rash though it had been considered at the first blush, they were quite confident that he would not refuse them so innocent and eminently praiseworthy a desire. They had talked it over together so often, this sister and this brother, that it had, by degrees, because of the increasing familiarity of the idea, lost its first impossible aspect. It did not occur to them that what they had talked and dreamed over until it had grown to seem almost a thing accomplished might burst upon their fond uncle with all the unexpectedness of a thunder clap out of a clear sky.

The very moment poor Teddy had chosen was unpropitious; the major had but just discovered fresh traces of collegiate usurpation upon the person of his beloved war horse, Sultan, and his rage, in consequence, was at a pronounced pitch.

"Invite your college friends to eat a Thanksgiving turkey, is it?—a Thanksgiving divil! I'll tache them to give thanks in my house! Would ye pour wine for the murtherers of your uncle, and shtir sugar in it to their liking? Tare an' ouns, but you're a cool-faced lot, wid the chake of a grinning chimpanzee! Invite the bloody beggars, say you—oh, no, ye'll not! I believe I'll reserve the right to do what invitation's done in me own house, or know the raison why! And, I'd rather have the company of tramps of'ye mind—that—the—poor, miserable, abused, misunderstood tramps, that niver lift a finger to do anyone a mean turn, thorough, honest, daycint min, that lave a citizen in pace, lave the gates on their hinges, the shingles on the roof—here the major's anger roars amain—"and the roof on the house! No, sir! To perdition wid your college monsthers—but ye may ask ivery tramp'ye mate in the shtreet to come and dine, wid Maj. McCalligan—say that he is their friend, and that turkeys shall be roasted in honor of them—that the deserving hungry shall be fid at the ixpinse of Maj. McCalligan, and that bread and wather's too good for the likes of"—here followed untranslatable, but unquestionably vigorous, Celtic epithets—"college companions."

Poor children! Teddy's notion of doing the hospitable was nipped in the bud, so green that there was no means of determining just how rich in hue or how beautiful a flower it might have become; and Kittie's little dream of a period of bliss whereon a most enchanting gown of peach blossom tinting shared equal honors with the figure of a tall and rather awkward youth known to the college world as "Jim Junior"—this delightful dream vanished in the miserable dawn of her uncle's tempestuous mood, and the wretched sun of a day of disappointment shone through mists of big unshed tears.

"Uncle, you haven't forgotten your proposition concerning Thanksgiving—in other words—to-morrow?"

"Eh, Teddy? Bless me soul, me boy, what?"

"To fetch a pack o' tramps on Thanksgiving day to dine with you. I've met thirteen in the interim—sorry it's thirteen—such an unlucky number; but since I told each one to fetch all the scarecrows he could scare up along with him, I wouldn't wonder—hello, uncle, what's the matter?"

"Noth—nothing, Teddy—nothing, me boy!" The laugh shouldn't be on him, he'd be bound. What an ass—what a long-eared, deep-mouthed, braying ass he had been to give that boy Teddy (and, if Teddy! others, of course, others who were his arch-enemies and especial abominations) such a grotesque, such an absurdly ridiculous hold upon him!

"Had you forgotten about it, uncle?"

"Forgotten? D'ye think me mimory's failin' me? We'll have a regular faist—turkey enough for twinty, and oyster dhressing to confound the natives! It's Maj. McCalligan that can taich the benighted world the rale maning of hospitality. Faith, it shall be a beautiful shprid!"

And it was. The great oaken table, pulled out to its last joint, with the company napery covering its polished surface, groaned with the burden it bore. There was no half-heartedness about Maj. McCalligan; the glitter of his best silver, the sparkle of his finest crystal, the glowing hues of the brightest flowers from his hot house, the aroma arising from well-cooked viands—all these awaited in due time the coming of the guests.

By ones and twos and threes they came—a motley crew—an unkempt, unwashed lot of hungry men, knocking at the side door, knocking at the back door, ringing at the front door—each and all cordially welcomed by Maj. McCalligan, who stood bowing (foreswearing, however, the shaking of dirty paws held out to him now and again), and seeming really to enjoy the revenge he felt confident Teddy, the rascal, had thought to take upon him. It actually warmed the good old Irish heart within him to see the hungry, gaunt-eyed men put away the delectable provender with which he had provided them, and the thought that for one hour at least these outcasts were appeasing their seldom-satisfied appetites and were drinking in, together with their fragrant Mocha, a glimpse of life among the lofty and refined, touched his heart with the warm finger of self-satisfaction, and he beamed benignantly upon his indigent guests.

The clatter of dextrously-handled knives (which weapons were favorite conveyors of food from plate to mouth) and forks, the loud swoop and gurgle caused by the swallowing of coffee cooled in saucers, the noisy crunch of teeth upon rapidly-disappearing edibles, the half inaudible grunts accompanying the pointing of an unwashed digit toward some desired viand, together with the major's good-naturedly encouraging and voluble chatter, made a cheerful hour of it all. At times the host cast furtive glances toward Teddy, to mark his chagrin at the turn affairs had taken, but Teddy, too wily for his uncle, caught each glance upon a countenance so expressionless that it bounded back and was lost somewhere between the chicken salad and the cheese.

At last the hungriest man among them desisted with a sigh—even he could eat no more. Silently the guests arose, and, with an attempt at a bow, and a gutteral something meant for thanks, filed slowly and slouchily toward the kitchen door.

"THAT'S DESSERT, DARLING!"

The major, after calling Kittie from the parlor to witness the triumphal exit, passed into the library to enjoy a quiet smoke and a retrospection of the heart-warming scene.

A tall, awkward man brought up the rear; a lean, lank, cadaverous fellow, with black eye-sockets, and beard of a weeks' growth covering his unprepossessing lineaments. As the major disappeared, and Kittie, beaming with a smiling curiosity, brought all the bright beauty of her girlish years into the now deserted room, this hulk of a rag-tag, the most repellant, most uncleanly and altogether obnoxious tramp of them all, turned, and, as if overcome by her dainty charms, clasped Kittie in his long, lank arms, and left a very dirty kiss upon the pretty bloom of her rounded cheek.

"That's dessert, darling," whispered the man. "Ted's a brick—brick? he's a whole pavement." We boys are positively stuffed—kiss me good-night, love—sh—there!"

"O Jim!"

A Barren Victory.

Gov. Campbell's failure of re-election in Ohio can scarcely be regarded as a defeat—it is rather a drawn battle. Ohio is a republican state, yet after a campaign in which all the resources of republicanism, financial and otherwise, were lavishly marshalled, the republicans were barely able to retain their lead of last year.—St. Louis Republic.

In Ohio McKinley wins a barren victory through the defection of democrats caused by the injection of a false issue into a campaign that should have been fought on the lines of opposition to the policy represented by the republican candidate. Contrasting the result in New York, Massachusetts and Iowa with that in Ohio, and there will be seen under conditions which it will be impossible for republicans to make even a showing for their presidential candidate next year. Had the democrats of Ohio entered the campaign as thoroughly united as their friends in New York and Massachusetts they would to-day be rejoicing with them in the downfall of protection.—Chicago Times.

The great democratic victory in New York cannot fail to consolidate and reassure the party in all of the states. There, as well as in Ohio, the republican campaign was cowardly and contemptible. In the one state republicanism practically confined its energies to a prolonged anti-Tammany bawl. In the other, although the high priest of monopoly taxation was himself the candidate, it dodged the infamous McKinley law and made the fight on the silver question. The sweeping democrat victory in New York, a pivotal state, would in any event have been more than an offset for the triumph of McKinley in Ohio, and its significance will not be lost upon those republicans who are capable of perceiving the difference between the Dutch taking Holland and the Dutch taking London. The result in Ohio is not properly to be taken as measuring the sentiment of the people on the subject of monopoly tariffs. It will not be doubted that McKinley and his following will make the most of it, chiefly with reference to his appearance as a presidential candidate next year, but while Ohio contains an unusually large amount of ignorance and wrong-headedness on financial and economic questions, the triumph of McKinley is due as much to local causes, chief among them being the democratic split in Cincinnati, as to the popular liking for financiers and stupid economists.—Chicago Herald.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

SINGLE TAX THESES.

1. Lowering the margin of production, other things being equal, raises rent and lowers wages, besides lessening production.

2. Holding valuable land out of use lowers the margin of production, other things being equal.

3. Land speculation involves the holding of valuable land out of use.

4. Land speculation is unavoidable so long as land owners receive the increase in value created by the community.

5. The single tax would make the holding out of use of valuable land unprofitable, and would thus throw open for use that which is now so held, either from speculative motives or from no motive.

6. The single tax would thus raise wages, thereby being a help to laborers. It would also help capitalists, by relieving capital from taxation. It would hurt no one but landowners, and them only in so far as they were neither laborers nor capitalists.

7. The landowner, as such, is of no use to the community.

8. All men have originally an equal natural right to land.

9. There exists theoretically no way in which this right can possibly be alienated.

10. A landowner can require another to pay him any price he asks; if this other must use his land.

11. Every man must use some land.

12. Therefore (10 and 11), where all land is in the hands of owners, they can force the landless to give up a certain amount of property to them. (And they do it.)

13. There is no sufficient reason for giving the increase in value created by the community to the landowner. It belongs to the community, and no one suffers a hardship when the community takes it.

14. Movable or producible property tends to go from a place where it is heavily taxed to a place where it is lightly taxed, or is permitted to escape taxation. Therefore the abolition of taxes on such property in any nation, state or town would be a means of attracting such property, while the strict and impartial enforcement of laws for its taxation is a means of driving it away.

15. Income and succession taxes likewise tend to drive away the rich.

16. A tax on property which is the result of labor, or which has been saved by thrift, lessens the inducement to such labor and thrift.

17. A tax which increases the cost of owning or using any implement or carrying on any process of production or trade, hinders such production or trade; except that sometimes such a tax concentrates the business in the form of a monopoly, whose power may be a superior advantage.

18. Such a tax always tends to monopoly and to the crushing out of small producers by increasing the amount of capital necessary for carrying on a given amount of business.

19. Such a tax, entering into the cost of the goods, is paid by the consumer in his purchase, and falls on consumers in proportion to their purchases. But in general, the larger a man's income is the smaller is the proportion of it which he spends for his own consumption. Therefore, among those who pay any such tax it falls heaviest on the poorest.

20. Such a tax takes from the consumer an unnecessary amount beyond what it gives to the government, because the tax enters into the cost of the goods, and thus the trader must charge a profit on the tax as well as on the other cost in order to get the usual profit on his whole capital. The effect of the tax in encouraging monopolies may make production cheaper, and thus neutralize this, but the monopoly is more likely to involve an additional tax on the consumer.

21. Such a tax, by its interference with private business, give private parties a direct pecuniary interest in having it laid or removed, not necessarily coinciding with the interest they have in the well-being of the community as a whole, and thus increases the inducement to corruption in government. This is especially true where it falls on one particular industry, as with each of the multitudinous special taxes which make up our tariff.

22. The increase in the price of land, occasioned by land speculation (see Nos. 1-5), is in effect such a tax on the holding and use of land, and as such is especially obnoxious to the objections of Nos. 17-19.

23. A tax laid on land by the State would not increase the cost of holding or using land unless the tax were greater than the present rent of the land, because whatever is added to the tax is subtracted from the rent or purchase price.

24. The advantage given to an American manufacturer by a tariff on his product, enabling him to sell it at a higher price, is in the nature of a bounty paid by an indirect tax (see Nos. 17-21) collected by the private manufacturer from the consumer. Granting, for the sake of argument, that a protective tariff is an effectual encouragement to American industry, and supposing that the abolition of taxation on capital under the single tax would not be a sufficient equivalent for any benefit which the tariff can be supposed to confer, it would yet be every way more desirable to pay a bounty from a direct tax collected by the government.

25. The imposition of a tax for the purpose of restricting a business supposed to be harmful to the public is an ineffective makeshift, as has been strikingly shown in the experiment of high license.

26. The single tax could be collected more easily, and at less expense to the government than any other tax from which it is seriously proposed to raise a large revenue.

27. It is impossible wholly to prevent the evasion of taxes on personal property and on incomes. The possibility of such evasion acts as a discrimination against the following classes: (a) Those who are too honest to dodge the tax; (b) those whose taxable property is so small that it is not worth their while to take the trouble necessary to secure a legal exemption; (c) those who are unfamiliar with business and do not know the methods used for escaping taxation; (d) property in the hands of trustees who have no personal interest in saving the tax, i. e., property belonging to orphans and charitable institutions.

28. The imposition of taxes on the improvements of land, while personal property escapes taxation partly (as it does) or wholly (as it should), is a direct discouragement to the improvement of land.

29. A succession tax would be fluctuating in amount, and not perfectly free from evasion. It has no pretense to be anything but a makeshift, except in the minds of those who hold that the right of property terminates at death.

30. The value of good local government appears as an increase of land value, and is paid for by the tenant to the landlord. Therefore the landlord should pay the expense of furnishing it to the tenant.

31. In the same way the existence of local taxes, other than the tax on land, decreases the land value of the place, and their abolition would increase it, thus compensating the landlords for their loss by this change.

32. With regard to the loss which would be caused to landowners by the establishment of the single tax limited: (a) It would be no loss, but a gain to those whose proportional interests as owners of taxed personal property and improvements exceeded their proportional interest as landowners, including working farmers in general (as shown by statistics), and probably a numerical majority of all landowners. (b) Of those who did lose, the majority would have interests in other taxed property so nearly equal to their interest in land as to make the loss slight. (c) The general increase in the prosperity of the community would cause a rise in land values, further compensating land owners. This is especially true as to the single tax for local purposes. See Nos. 30-31. (d) In all cases the loss to the landowner would be measured, not by the whole increase of his land tax, but by this increase minus the decrease of his other taxes. This amount would be so small compared with the whole range of taxation affected by the change that any difficulties arising from it are properly mere matters of detail. Compensation could be given for it without laying a very great burden on the public treasury; though it is not probable that this would be done. (e) In the above considerations no reference is made to the destruction of the purely speculative element in land values, about which it is not probable that any reliable estimate could be made. But it is not supposed that any one will make the abolition of this a serious objection. (f) Landowners would participate in the increase of general prosperity equally with others.

33. The proposition to compensate landlords for the loss caused by the single tax would be open to the following practical objections: (a) It would be the object of much speculation and fraud; (b) since it is not customary to give compensation to those who lose by any change in tax laws, the unusual proposition in this case would cause confusion and possible obstruction to the reform; (c) the increased public expense of paying the compensation could not be met by an increase in the land tax, since this would at once call for further compensation; it must then be met by maintaining some one of our other taxes, all of which (see Nos. 19, 21, 27) are practically attended with more or less injustice.

34. Government has no right to continue taking from individuals the product of their labor, when it can obtain its revenue by taking once for all that which is the product of no individual's labor, and periodically collecting the rental value of this.

35. The single tax, when once permanently in operation, would be in effect the abolition of all taxation, which would be the most certain cure for all the evils of taxation.

36. When the difficulties attending its first establishment were past, and it had become the settled policy of the country, the single tax unlimited would be a tax system of absolute theoretical perfection, in the practical carrying out of which there would be involved no evils but such as necessarily arise from the imperfect human nature of assessors and collectors.—Stephen T. Byington.

Justice of the Single Tax.

The tax upon land values is, therefore, the most just and equal of all taxes. It falls only upon those who receive from society a peculiar and valuable benefit, and upon them in proportion to the benefit they receive. It is the taking by the community, for the use of the community, of that value which is the creation of the community. It is the application of the common property to common uses. When all rent is taken by taxation for the needs of the community, then will the equality ordained by nature be attained. No citizen will have an advantage over any other citizen save as is given by his industry, skill and intelligence; and each will obtain what he fairly earns. Then, but not till then, will labor get its full reward, and capital its natural return.

WERE all taxes placed upon land values, irrespective of improvements, the scheme of taxation would be so simple and clear, and public attention would be so directed to it, that the valuation of taxation could and would be made with the same certainty that a real estate agent can determine the price a seller can get for a lot.—Progress and Poverty.

THE reason why, in spite of the increase of productive power, wages constantly tend to a minimum which will give but a bare living, is that, with increase in productive power, rent tends to even greater increase, thus producing a constant tendency to the forcing down of wages.—Progress and Poverty.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 26, 1891.

THE NEW FRIENDS' CHURCH.

The Inception, Progress and Completion of the Enterprise—Dedication Services Last Sunday.

For some time the Society of Friends have felt that the best interests of their Church organization here in Tecumseh demanded a better Sabbath home in a more central location. This feeling finally ripened into a conviction and the conviction soon led to practical results. When their present minister, Rev. D. J. Lewis, was called last winter, he stimulated and encouraged the new project, and the necessary arrangements were perfected to erect a new meeting house during the past summer. The first requisite, of course, was a suitable lot. This was provided for by the donation of a most eligible location. Miss Anna H. Sutton, a sister of N. M. Sutton's, who is a maiden lady of means and generous impulses, donated the lot at the south-east corner of Pottawatamie and Van Buren streets, excepting $300 paid by the Society. The lot is six by twelve rods in size and one of the finest lots on west Pottawatamie street.

A committee appointed to circulate a subscription paper met with a most liberal response and early in April last a building committee was appointed and active work begun.

The main audience room is 32 by 42 feet in size, with an annex or projection facing the street north, which is 16 by 25 feet. In the northwest corner, between the main room and annex, is a porch and vestibule containing the main entrance. In the northeast corner is a closed vestibule containing a hallway leading to the basement. Solid stone foundation walls are constructed beneath the whole building. The structure above the foundation walls is of wood. The work on this was begun about the first of July and was nearly completed by the first of the present month. The exterior is painted in tasty shades of drab and the interior is elegantly finished in light-colored tints, the woodwork and pews being finished in hard oil to show the natural grain of the wood. A large furnace is placed in the basement, which warms the building thoroughly. On three sides—the west, south and north—there are large triple windows with transoms over them, the latter being glazed with panes of colored glass. In the east end are two single windows between which the pulpit platform is located. This is a plain rostrum about ten or twelve feet long and eighteen inches high. It contains a neat pulpit desk finished in the natural wood and five pulpit chairs. The annex is separated from the main room by windows, hung on weights. These can be elevated into a recess in the partition, thus throwing both rooms into one and enlarging the seating capacity of the church fully one-third.

The house is lighted by twelve incandescent lights fixed in electroliers. The main room and annex are both carpeted with a beautiful carpet. The main room is seated with pews of neat design, which will be cushioned. The annex is provided with sixty chairs. The pews will accommodate about three hundred people. The cost of the structure, exclusive of lot and furnishings, was $2,700, and the latter will absorb about $300 more when the cushions are completed, which are now making. James D. Wood had the contract for the entire work above the foundations, and he hired the different branches done by different persons. The ladies of the society raised the funds for the carpet and other furnishings, and the gentlemen footed the bills for the meeting house itself. One of the best features of the enterprise is the fact that the entire cost has been fully paid. Not a single dollar of indebtedness has been incurred, and the dedication services were not marred by any appeal to meet arrearages. Although every member of the society did his or her full part to complete the work, still we think especial mention and credit should be given to the building committee, consisting of A. C. Taylor, T. G. Mead and J. N. Satterthwaite, for their untiring and disinterested efforts.

Last Sunday afternoon, at three o'clock, was the hour appointed for the dedication. Could the Friends have foreseen what the weather clerk had in store for that day, some future date would doubtless have been chosen. But the appointment had been given out and there was no postponement on account of the weather. As early as two o'clock people began to gather at the new edifice from all quarters and when three o'clock had arrived every seat was occupied, camp chairs filled the aisles, and even standing room was at a premium. The services were about two hours in length, but they were deeply interesting throughout and held the entire congregation to the close. About half-past four, as the shadows of nightfall approached, the janitor "touched the button" and lo! there was light. Every light in the building was simultaneously turned on. The congregation was shocked—not exactly with electricity—but with delight, and the services proceeded as smoothly as though nothing had happened.

THE RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Our space will not permit a verbatim report of the services, but we present a synopsis of them, which will give our readers a general idea of their purport.

The exercises were opened by a fervent prayer by the pastor, Rev. D. J. Lewis, which was followed by a brief address by Rev. Delia Rees, on the "Idea of God in Work and Worship," using 2 Chron. 2:5-6, as her text. The speaker in fine said: "Solomon had a great God, and would build no other than a great Temple for his worship, summoning all hands to contribute, and from all sources brought finest gold, purest silver, and the best of all needed material to rear a fit place of worship for the great God. Solomon could contrast his God with the Gods worshiped by his heathen neighbors, and his heart rejoiced to do and dare for Him." The speaker alluded to the gods of worldly men and their ideas of the true God, as a sufficient comment upon their lives. Solomon could see God's greatness in His deliverance of Israel from bondage in Egypt, leading them through the sea, the wilderness and the Jordan, over into the land of promise. The christian sees all this, and added the manger, the cross and the tomb; the resurrection, ascension and intercession of God manifest in the flesh, and dedicates his heart, the greatest of all temples, to be the house of God, the place of His abode. God to-day wants hearts in which to live, and lives in which to labor. God's greatest desire, the world's greatest need, is a reproduction of the life of Christ.

Rev. D. J. Lewis spoke of the unity and glory of the church, basing his remarks upon Heb. 12:22-24. He dwelt briefly upon the bible cymbols of the church as an expression of its essential unity, and referred to Christ's promise to be with his deciples; the progress of God's plan; the christian's prospect as the glory of the church, contrasting the religion of Christ with those of the nations. The speaker said they could all raise the cry of the five foolish virgins, "give us of your oil for our lamps have gone out." Allusion was made to the christian love and unity existing between christians, of the hearty goodwill manifested between churches, and the general liberality shown in the erection of the new house of worship, that enabled them to open it without any debt upon it, and without any contribution from the company assembled. The pastor closed his remarks with a request to have sung, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Others present spoke appreciatively of the work the society was doing, and with many warm words of good cheer, the meeting closed by singing, "God be with you 'till we meet again."

The December Arena.

The December Arena opens Vol. V. of this powerful and progressive review with an array of attractions so strong, brilliant, and attractive, that it emphasizes afresh the opinion expressed before that it steadily improves with each issue. Full page portraits of J. G. Whittier and Edgar Fawcett are the artistic features. Amoung the leading contributors on serious problems are Camile Flammarion, Hon. David A. Wells, Prof T. Funck-Brentano, of the Paris Academy of Science, Edgar Fawcett, Rev. C. A. Bartol, and Helen Campbell. Mrs. Campbell also contributes a powerful novelette of twenty-four pages, dealing with hypnotism and insanity, entitled "In the Meshes of a Terrible Spell." Hamlin Garland appears in a delightful Western sketch. In order to give the usual space for serious essays, the publishers have enlarged this issue sixteen pages, making one hundred and forty-four pages. The Arena has long since forged its way into the front rank of the world's reviews, and is now recognized as the ablest exponent of liberal progressive thought in America. The popular features peculiar to it are giving it a constantly increasing circulation.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Michigan's Crop Reports.

The November crop report issued by the secretary of state shows that the area seeded to wheat this fall is slightly in excess of 1890. The area harvested this year, including spring wheat, was 1,573,671 acres. In condition the growing wheat averages 91 per cent. in the state, as against an average of 105 per cent. last year. The corn crop is a full average. The area of clover seed harvested is about four-fifths that of 1890, and the average yield per acre is 1.45 bushels. Potatoes average 96 per cent. for the state. Live stock is in good condition.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by forty-four observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 14 indicated that membranous croup, pneumonia, influenza and intermittent fever increased, and inflammation of the brain, typhoid fever, cholera infantum and erysipelas decreased in area of prevalence. FOR THANKSGIVING DAY.

The day of Thanksgiving draweth nigh,
And scores of Turkeys soon must die,
Get one that's young and sweet and fat,
And stuff it full of this and that.

And add [prese]Rves and pies and cake.
Ask friend and Kindred all to come
And spend Thanksgiving at your home.
Let not the cares of life distress,
But fill each guEst with happiness.
Revive the joYs of youthful days,

The December number of Lippincott's Magazine is a special Southern number; all the contributions are from well-known Southern authors. The complete novel is written by T. C. DeLeon, author of "Creole and Puritan," "The Puritan's Daughter," "Four years in Rebel Capitals," etc., and is a stirring tale of the Civil War, entitled "A Fair Blockade-Breaker." It is well known that some of the most daring blockade-breakers during the war were Southern women. Mr. DeLeon makes one of these women, a beautiful, brave, and captivating girl, the heroine of his story. The tale is replete with exciting adventures, and has a dash and go about it which insures its success.

Harper's Weekly for November 25th will contain a variety of interesting matter especially appropriate to the Thanksgiving holiday. There will also be an article on the Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio, very fully illustrated, and a short story by Thomas Hardy, entitled "On the Western Circuit," also illustrated.

The N. Y. Tribune is without exception the leading Republican newspaper now published. It is the best authority on protection and is doubtless the ablest exponent of a high tariff in this country. People who believe in a protective tariff and wish that kind of a newspaper will find the Tribune exactly to their liking. Read the prospectus on another page.

Harper's Magazine for December will be a superb Christmas number. The illustrations will include a large number of full-page engravings representing some of the best work of some of the best modern artists. The fiction is of a character especially adapted to the holiday season, and many of the articles and poems are appropriately suggestive of Christmas memories and the good cheer and hallowed influence of that occasion.

Secretary Dickinson has sent out notices to the governors of the various States asking them to choose two members of their World's Fair boards to come to Chicago December 9th to attend a big World's Fair convention. The object of the convention is to have the delegates meet the Board of Control, Department chiefs and other officials, and to devise uniform plans for State work. Mrs. Palmer adds to the invitation a statement that she wants all women who are members of the various State boards to be present and learn about the plans for promoting the work women are doing.

In speaking of the sudden death of a farmer, who was found dead in his stable, where he had to go to milk the cows, the Manchester Enterprise says: "His body was yet warm and there was a little milk in the pail, which would indicate that he died of heart trouble." Now, what the public want to know, is, did the milk in the pail or his body being too warm cause heart trouble?"—Adrian Times.

Much misapprehension has existed in the public mind relative to the great statistical investigation by the Senate Finance Committee regarding the effect of tariff laws upon the industrial condition of the country during the last half century. A full statement will be published in the December number of the North American Review by the Honorable Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, who has had charge of the investigation.

Three Hudson hunters flushed up a flock of quails near Posey lake, says the Gazette, and one of the sportsmen, a "long" fellow, fired into them. Immediately they observed a man jump in the air and utter a most distressing yell. Investigation revealed the fact that instead of hitting the quail he had administered several stinging shots in the back of a man husking corn in the field. It took considerable talking to convince the injured man that it was an accident, but after the stinging sensation had abated he cooled off, and the two escaped without the assistance of the farm dog.

The personation given by Leland T. Powers last Saturday evening was the finest exhibition of that kind ever witnessed in Tecumseh. People who had read David Copperfield discovered new beauties in the story, while strangers to it were initiated into its peculiar mysteries, which render all of Dickens' novels so enticing. The rapidity with which Mr. Powers changes from one character to another is wonderful. He appears in full dress, and without the aid of scenery or special costumes, presents the thirteen characters of Copperfield, all true to the life. The big hearted Peggotty, the manly David, the bombastic Micawber, the satanical Heep, all live and move before the audience. Mr. Powers has struck a "new thing" and his entertainments will always draw a crowded house.

Our political page is devoted to Thanksgiving reading this week. A change of diet occasionally is a good thing, especially about Thanksgiving time.

Have you seen the merry-go-round in the show window of Fritz's Bazaar? What makes it go? That is a question for the boys and girls to investigate and decide.

Wolc Marsh is bound to keep at the head of the procession. He has lately placed in his market a new five horse boiler and engine and a new sausage grinder. He has an outfit now second to none in town.

In the list of what may be termed the "solid magazines" of this country, the old North American Review stands at the head. It is at once the oldest and newest, the ablest and best of them all. We call attention to the prospectus elsewhere. It will be clubbed with the HERALD at reduced rates.

Mrs. John J. Adam, who has been quite ill for several weeks, died at her home in Cambridge last Sunday. The funeral services held on Tuesday were largely attended. During her residence in Tecumseh the deceased endeared herself to many friends, who will learn of her demise with sincere regret.

The lecture committee had a narrow escape from a serious disappointment last Saturday. At 3:30 in the afternoon they received a telegram from Mr. Powers at Battle Creek stating that he had missed connection there on account of a recent change in the time card. They telephoned him to secure a special train if possible and come without fail, as 800 people would be disappointed by his non-arrival. After some delay he secured the special on the Mackinaw. He left Battle Creek at 5:45 and reached Tecumseh at 8:05, standard time. The train cost $75.00. About 60 people came down from Manchester and Clinton and a large number were in from the country also. Happily they were not disappointed. Although the program began late, the audience were very good natured, as they appreciated the necessity of the delay.

Tuesday evening the young people observed College Day at the M. E. Church. The house was well filled and all enjoyed the exercises. The object of College Day is to assist the Alumni of Albion College to raise sufficient funds to endow a professorship. The following program was observed:

THE RANKS BROKEN.

The Sub-Treasury Scheme Causes a Split in the Alliance.

They Call a Convention to Meet in Memphis, December 10—The People's Party Issues an Address to the Nation.

WILL GO IT ALONE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 21.—Chairman W. S. McAllister has issued a call for a national convention of all anti-sub-treasury alliance men to be held at Memphis, Tenn., December 10. This is the first move to organize an opposition to the alliance-F. M. B. A.-people's party combine, and is the direct result of the refusal of the alliance to hear the protest of the McAllister faction.

The people's party men are the best satisfied of all those who have gathered here. They claim to have secured all they came for and even more. Friday night the national executive committee issued an address to the people of the United States. It is in part as follows:

"There is no longer any doubt that candidates for president and vice president will be in the field before June 1, 1892, nominated by the people's party. It seems to us very plain that the time has come when no influence of the old political organizations and no power of aggregated capital can prevent the hearty and unanimous coming together and cooperation of all the labor forces in the United States, whether employed in the workshop, or in the mine or on the farm.

"This is an important event in the history of the nation and of civilized man. There has been no precedent for it in any of the past ages. The producing classes have hitherto remained impoverished in the midst of the very plenty which they created; those who toiled not have possessed the wealth of the world while those who toiled have too often suffered for the necessaries of life. But the advance of civilization and universal education have flooded the minds of the multitude with an ocean of light and taught them the supreme necessity for cooperation in defense of the inborn rights of humanity.

"We have seen the shadow of plutocracy spreading steadily over our land. We have seen the railroad corporations grow from humble beginnings, the mere servitors of the people, into a vast and powerful conspiracy which, for the protection of its bogus capitalization, controls our elections, corrupts our legislatures, debauches our juries and casts the slime of its rottenness over the very judges of our courts, the last resort of justice on earth. We have seen the banking associations, from being at first mere conveniences for the accommodation of the people, swell into a lordly confederation, holding all business in its grip able to make or wreck, as their own interests may dictate, the prosperity of all classes, while not a dollar of currency is able to find its way to the people from the government that does not represent a dollar of debt to the money manipulating class. We have seen the daily newspaper press instead of being as it should be, the exponent, champion and defender of popular rights against all comers coerced by its business necessities into becoming the ready instrument to bind the shackles of serfdom on the limbs of a free people, to confuse their minds by sophistry, to fill their ears with falsehoods, to uphold everything that is destructive to public good and to crush everything that would help the people.

"We confidently appeal to every honest man in the United States to come forward and help us bury this monster, plutocracy, so deep that he will never rise again to trouble the children of liberty. Do not wait to be summoned to action. This fight is every man's fight, it is a fight for the roof tree and the babe in the cradle; it is a fight to determine whether our prosperity shall be reduced to old world conditions or shall advance along the line of the declaration of independence and the constitution to greater prosperity and higher civilization."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 23.—The most spirited fight that has characterized any of the executive sessions of the supreme council of the Farmers' Alliance occurred Saturday afternoon over a resolution asking congress to pension only honorably discharged and indigent soldiers and to provide for the payment of all pensions by issuing sub-treasury notes for that purpose. The council at once divided on political lines, Jerry Simpson and Gen. Weaver leading the opposition and Congressman Livingston, President Polk and others from the south favoring its adoption. When put to a vote the resolution was carried by a decided majority.

The supreme council of the Farmers' Alliance adjourned at midnight. The most important action was a resolution pledging the alliance to stand by the decision of the February conference of the Federated union. As it is a foregone conclusion that that conference will declare for independent political action, this resolution practically pledges the support of the alliance to the people's party.

Notwithstanding the representations of the leader of the people's party the officers of the alliance maintain that the organization is still in a neutral position politically. Secretary Tillman said: "We have held the alliance intact as against partyism. The members are not bound by any action that has been taken to vote either for or against any party."

Given His Father's Place.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 23.—An election was held in this, the Second congressional district, Saturday, for a member to succeed L. C. Houk, deceased. The candidates were John C. Houk (rep.) a son of the late L. C. Houk, and Gen. J. C. Williams (dem.). Gen. Williams carried Knox county by a small majority, but Houk carried every other county, and his majority will probably be 7,500.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

Treasury Officers Disturbed Over the Circulation of a Bogus Gold Note.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 23.—The secret service officers have been notified that one of the most dangerous counterfeits ever issued is in circulation. It is a photographic counterfeit of a $20 gold certificate, check letter A, B. K. Bruce, register, and James Gilfillan, treasurer. Its department series is A 3729-5. The notice describes the counterfeit as photographically perfect in all its lines, but in its color it is distinguishable from the genuine. The back of the counterfeit bill is light brown, while the back of the genuine is orange. The counterfeit is one-half inch shorter and one-eighth inch narrower than the genuine. The paper is of good quality and contains the threads which so long baffled the skill of counterfeiters.

SHOT BY A POLICEMAN.

Testimony as to the Killing of the Sailors of the Baltimore.

VALPARAISO, Nov. 23.—The testimony of the Baltimore's sailors was completed Saturday, with the exception of that of those physically unable to appear. Judge of Crimes Foster is seemingly impressed with the clearness of the testimony that Regan was killed by a policeman's bullet, but it cannot be proved whether it was by accident or intentionally. Patrick Shields, a fireman of the Keeweenah, has filed a claim with the United States consul for $5,000 damages for injury received from the Chilian police.

A COAL FAMINE.

Consumers Suffering from a Lack of Coal.

Serious Effect of the Strike in Indiana—Scarcity of Miners Another Cause of the Shortage—The Situation Reviewed.

URGENT APPEALS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—W. P. Rend has returned from the meeting of eastern coal operators and looks upon the local famine in soft coal as more far-reaching in its general effects than at first credited. He says there is a great scarcity of soft coal here and elsewhere throughout the northwest. Figuratively speaking, manufacturers, railroad purchasing agents and large coal consumers are begging and imploring on their bended knees the bewildered coal operator and coal dealer to let them have a supply of coal that will keep their industries and interests from suffering serious loss and injury. Railway general managers in many cases are sending dispatches urging forward fuel and expressing fears that unless shipments are increased at once their trains will be forced to stop. In fact there is not bituminous coal enough at present to satisfy the enormous and phenomenal demand.

The causes of this condition of things are numerous and complex. The general scarcity of coal affects most of the northwest, but in our local market this is greatly intensified by the strike in the coal regions of Indiana. A vast quantity of this coal is sold in Chicago. The late sudden strike in the extensive coal-producing region of Brazil, Ind., shuts out the shipment of that coal from this market and forces those who have been using it to purchase Illinois and other coal in its stead.

In Ohio and western Pennsylvania there is now a home market for nearly all that can be produced in those sections, and little of this eastern coal can be spared at present for the west. The failure of gas, or its greatly diminished supply, in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana has forced its abandonment by manufacturers in Pittsburgh and in fact almost every place in Pennsylvania, and in such places in Ohio as Dayton, Columbus and Springfield, and in Indianapolis and almost all the manufacturing towns of Indiana. The coal required to take the place of natural gas amounts to a vast tonnage. The stocks of coal in Cincinnati laid in last spring and summer from shipments down the Ohio and Kanawha rivers from Pennsylvania and West Virginia are about depleted and that city has not now a week's supply ahead. The Ohio river has been low for months, and no coal has been or can be floated down its stream to Cincinnati, Louisville and other places getting their supply in this way. The railroads everywhere are taxed to their utmost limit in moving the crops of the country and other merchandise required for general use.

This vast traffic requires vast quantities of coal for locomotive purposes. Cars for the transportation of coal are insufficient, and, as a consequence, almost every colliery in the country is unable to get the full complement of cars required to keep it in full operation or that will enable its operators to take care of the orders pouring in upon them. There is in most places also a scarcity of miners. During the last two or three years comparatively few miners have come here from Great Britain or from the continent of Europe. In England, Scotland and Wales during the period named the hours of labor have been reduced and rates of wages have been greatly increased. As a consequence the inducements offered to miners to immigrate to this country are not what they used to be and the supply of skilled miners from abroad has of late grown less for the coal fields of this country.

FOUND WATERY GRAVES.

Two Score Men Go Down on the Bay of Bengal with the Pilot Brig Culdoon.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A telegram has been received here from the marquis of Lansdowne, viceroy of India, stating that no doubts are entertained that the pilot brig Culdoon foundered during the terrific hurricane which recently passed over the Andaman islands and the bay of Bengal. The Culdoon had a crew of six British officers and thirty-five natives, and it is believed that all were drowned.

The Green-Eyed Monster.

ELKHART, Ind., Nov. 23.—Saturday night Harry Eves, a painter, shot his wife, making a flesh wound, shot William S. Cooper, a railroad fireman, probably fatally, and then killed himself. Mrs. Eves had applied for a divorce and attended the theater with Cooper. Eves encountered them on the way home and the shooting occurred.

Suicide of a Minister.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

RARA AVIS.

WHEN the voice of our Thanksgiving turkey
Rolls, spouting and bubbling cochug
Against the November tide murky—
As water leaps out of a jug—
No wonder with drooped, abashed pinions,
Columbia's eagle gives way
Irate, and throws up his dominions
To the popular fowl for a day.

What glory to reign on the platter,
Proud creature, while greatest and least
Of tongues of all peoples bespatter
Thy form with their praises; what a feast
To feel you're the real inspiration
Of every sharp, scintillant thing
That falls from the mouth of a nation—
'Rise, bird sacrificial, and sing!

For think, you're the actual power
That pushes the big social car
Up heights where our souls for an hour
Their promised lands view from afar;
Where, ringed in a holy day splendor,
On top of the mountain of Self,
Our hearts can find time to grow tender,
Away from the lowlands of pelf.

The whole of our future you're storing
With food of gay laughter and song,
O'er moments unseasoned are pouring
The gravy of mirth, rich and strong.
At memory's hearth we will taste you,
We vow, as we taste you to-day,
While blest recollections will baste you
And turn you forever and aye.

JULIA H. THAYER.

IN NO form of religious sentiment do so many minds meet as are wont to join in the simple prayer or worship of Thanksgiving. The average condition of man is one of happiness. Wherever the mind reaches intelligence enough to make a fairly good use of life, and therefore to appreciate its wonderful powers and mysteries, then the heart reaches a happiness which can at times cry out: "I bless, Thee, oh God!" Many times in each season, or year, the mind not dull or wicked says to itself: "Thank God." It need not define its God. It need not be a Christian or a pagan. Out of the two simple facts—an intelligent mind and the world of a Creator, comes the religion of thanksgiving. It is the simplest form of piety, and is therefore the most universal. It sweeps over the whole arena of intelligent manhood and womanhood—the atheist alone being silent.

Many religious minds have doubted whether they should ask the Maker of the universe to grant them some blessing. It has seemed to them only an outburst of egotism to ask the Deity to confer upon their mind or body or business some special favor, but no religious nature has ever hesitated to breathe forth the audible or silent prayer of gratitude. To ask for favors might be a form of egotism, but not to thank the God of life would seem to be inhuman.

It has been the reasonableness of this day of piety that has made it outlive the years which saw the early fathers of our country assemble in the name of gratitude. It was soon seen that the Heavenly Father was not a special friend of those who landed upon Plymouth Rock. His love and care touched alike all years, all places and all men. The fall of the first generation into its grave did not terminate the history of the Thanksgiving day, because the Divine goodness never ends at a human tomb. It passes over graves like a morning sunbeam and follows the living race. The day once seen and once established could not but travel on, because the kind Providence which created the day traveled onward and was as active and beautiful in the eighteenth century as it had been in the seventeenth.

The Thanksgiving day stands forth in our time in the same light as that in which it stood in the days when Miles Standish walked upon the Atlantic shore. There is not a patriot in our nation who is not as dear to Heaven as was each soul in the Mayflower. Once started upon its career Thanksgiving day can end only by command of a national atheism. The mind may be slow in discovering a truth or a duty, but when it has reached such a sentiment as that which comes out in bloom each November it can never recall the noble sentiment and close up its account.

As the seasons come and go the nation grows greater in all the dimensions of merit. Behold the growth of our country! The days of Plymouth Rock are left far behind. The people move in more millions, and in more of education, wealth, art, science and goodness. The scene has become so vast that the hearts in this land to-day should be bowing before God's altar in a love and joy greater far than the sentiments which expressed themselves so solemnly when our state was young. Our prayer of thankfulness should expand in fervor and gladness to meet the new greatness of the republic which once was carried on the sea in a little ship. A great nation should whisper a great prayer.

TRULY THANKFUL.

Just Try to Feel Like Brother Hood and You'll Be Happy.

I always liked Thanksgiving day. Coming, as it does, at such an appropriate season just before the long hard winter, I am in better shape, so to speak, to have a soul filled with gratitude, than I would be along about, say, February, when the buckwheat flour is running low and the grocer doesn't wait upon me with the same alacrity that he did when I first opened the account with him early in the season.

"DON'T YOU GIVE ME CREDIT FOR HONESTY?"

I once intended giving my patronage to a certain grocer. I went to him, in perfectly good faith, and, as is usual with me, asked for a little time.

He coughed about thrice in a peculiar way, to sort of prepare me for the worst, and said:

"Eh—well, you see, Mr. Hood, we couldn't do it. Have to draw a line somewhere, you know."

I was mad in a minute. You know how the Hoods are, fly off the handle in a jiffy and say things they're likely to be sorry for afterwards. I blurted out indignantly:

"Don't you give me credit for honesty?"

"Why certainly, Hood," he said, "but—eh—couldn't for anything else, you know."

Still that is alien to my subject. Thanksgivings in general, and Thanksgiving dinners in particular, will always touch a responsive chord when the itton is pressed in my vicinity.

We are such good eaters, we Hoods. There are so few things that we don't like. Light meat or dark meat, it's all the same to us. A little of the breast, the neck, a drum stick or the wishbone will do us nicely, thank you, and if they are all gone we can get along beautifully with the gizzard and plenty of gravy and stuffing.

It is very seldom that you hear a Hood say: "I never eat that, thank you," or "None of the so-and-so for me, please."

We are not gormandizers, but what other people eat and like, yea, verily, can we also.

And that's one of the things that Charles Newton Hood, familiarly, "Newt" Hood, has to be thankful for to-day—his appetite. Rising at a moment's notice to Pate de foi gras, quail on toast and blue points, or happy with stewed grocery-store codfish and boiled potatoes.

If I don't particularly like a viand, I just eat a little more to make up.

Why, if I should happen along in an African forest upon a pleasant party of cannibals enjoying a Thanksgiving dinner of stalled missionary and contentment therewith, and I was hungry, and they should ask me to sit by and take pot luck with them, it would be just like me to squat right down on the log nearest the barbecue, and send my order up for more spareribs as often as did the big chief with the ring in his nose.

Why should we blame the poor, hungry cannibal for loving his fellow

"WHY SHOULD WE BLAME THE CANNIBALS?"

man, even if he prefers him "well done?"

It is right that we should be thankful and eat much turkey on Thanksgiving day, for yea, that which we do not eat will be warmed over for us the rest of the week.

We have much to be thankful for. The world's fair is bound to be held sometime, new states have been added to us, and baby's teeth have come through well. Next year we will have politics. Let us be thankful that it is not this year.

If we are sons or daughters who have fled or been kicked from our father's home in days gone by, let us remember that Thanksgiving day is the dandy time to waltz home and have all forgiven, unless the standard Thanksgiving day story is wrong.

If we are rich, let us be thankful that we know not the pangs of poverty, and if we are poor, let us be thankful that we do not have the care and responsibility of great wealth.

Let us be thankful anyway.

CHARLES NEWTON HOOD.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

When We Should Put Out of Sight Everything Disagreeable.

Three thousand years ago Moses instructed the Israelites to keep a feast after they got established in the Holy Land. They called it the feast of the tabernacles, and for eight days following the close of the harvest they dwelt in booths made chiefly of green boughs, and feasted on corn, wine, oil and fruits.

The Greeks had a nine days' feast of similar character, and the Romans also had one in honor of Ceres, goddess of grain.

The Saxons had a harvest home, and after them the English. Our Thanksgiving comes from the Puritans, and it will be noted that, like all its predecessors, the observance bore special reference to the harvest, and, if the harvest failed, there was no Thanksgiving. We have outgrown that narrow view of the day, and it is safe to say that Thanksgiving day will never be omitted again, no matter what calamity falls on the country.

We have discovered that there is always something to be thankful for. Sorrow and disappointment come to all, but there is no life so dark that it is without one ray of sunshine. If you have nothing else, you are to be thankful for life itself.

Did you ever think what it is not to have a single friend in the world? There may be such persons somewhere, and can you not be thankful that you have friends and relatives?

Life is mostly struggle and strife, and that is why we should look on the bright side as often as possible.

Thanksgiving day is the period when we should put out of sight everything that is not bright and joyful. It is the day when, if any of your friends or relations are estranged from you, it is your duty to hunt them up and effect a reconciliation. Bid them to your Thanksgiving feast and forgive and be forgiven.

True philosophy means to make the best of everything. Give thanks for what you have and forget what you have not. For one day only look on the bright side of life and give thanks with all your heart and soul, and you will have your reward in a feeling of happiness that will remain with you for many a day.—Golden Days.

He had quite a number of physicians to treat him, and also took other medicines, without any permanent benefit. A friend told him to try S. S. S. He did so, and used only four bottles, which cured him sound and well. He recommends it to all who suffer from rheumatism. Rheumatism has been conceded to be a trouble in the blood, and we have numbers of reports from the most reliable people in the country that it has cured the most aggravated cases. We certainly recommend every sufferer to send for our treatise on blood and skin diseases, which will be mailed free. Adress,

OBITUARY.

I have not seen a notice of the death of Mr. G. V. Osgood, of Macon, in any of our county papers. The death of such a man is worthy of more than a mere passing notice, however.

His death occurred on the first day of October, 1891. He had suffered from a distressing disease for over a year. At times there were symptoms of improvement, only to be disappointed. He did all that was possible to prolong his life to his family and friends, but all in vain. His death was a sad loss to the entire community. He was to all a friend, and all shared in the expressions of sympathy for the bereaved household. The large attendance at his funeral attested the high esteem in which he was held.

His life has been mainly spent in Michigan. Coming to this State from Seneca County, N. Y., in an early day, he assisted his widowed mother, who still survives him, in clearing away the primal forest and making themselves a home. On a portion of the old homestead he lived the latter years of his life. For a few years he resided in Illinois but returned and took up his residence near the early home. His success as a farmer is well known, and his Christian character is known and acknowledged by all. He leaves a widow and three children—a son, living in Toledo, and two daughters—to mourn his departure. The Church of Macon, of which he was an active Elder for many years, has sustained a heavy loss.

His counsel and advice were sought by his brethren, who deeply feel this sad affliction. His mother, now in her 86th year, has buried her first child, her other sons and daughters still living near enough to her to meet each year on Thanksgiving day. This year the first chair will be vacant. His faith in God was an unwavering faith, always and at all times the same steadfast assurance and hope. A triumphant faith and a calm and triumphant death. It was no leap in the dark when death called, but a ready waiting for the call to come to a better, brighter world. He was in his 57th year.

"His works do follow him." G.

The St. Louis Republic.

The coming year will be crowned with events of absorbing interest. Congress will be in session, with a large democratic majority in the House, and a republican majority in the Senate. The National Conventions will meet to nominate canidates for President and Vice-President, followed by one of the closest and most hotly contested political campaigns in the history of the country. During this time, every citizen must take some live and progressive newspaper. Any of the metropolitan weeklies may be had for $1.00 a year, but why subscribe for one of them when you can get The St. Louis Republic twice every week, for the same price. It is issued every Tuesday and Friday, and gives the news half a week ahead of any weekly in every State of the Union. Subscribe now, get it from the beginning of the pending session of Congress, until the election of 1892. Sample copies will be sent free on application to The Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

THE BEST AUTHORITIES,

Such as Dr. Dio Lewis, Prof. Gross, and others, agree that catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It therefore requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effectually and permanently cures catarrh. Thousands praise it.

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know; I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household: father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

Enterprising Young Man: True & Co. instructed and started me. I worked steadily and made money faster than I expected to. I became able to buy an island and build a small summer hotel. If I don't succeed at that, I will go to work again at the business in which I made my money.

True & Co.: Shall we instruct and start you, reader? If we do, and if you work industriously, you will in due time be able to buy an island and build a hotel, if you wish to. Money can be earned at our new line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. We furnish everything. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This entirely new lead brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment—we teach you FREE. This is an age of marvelous things, and here is another great, useful, wealth-giving wonder. Great gains will reward every industrious worker. Wherever you are, and whatever you are doing, you want to know about this wonderful work at once. Delay means much money lost to you. No space to explain here, but if you will write to us, we will make all plain to you FREE. Address,

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as I ever did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. "Well it's gone, give me another," was what one of our busy landlords said the other evening as a bottle containing Duffy's bitters went crashing to the floor. We cannot say whether the mixture was so powerful as to break the bottle, or that our busy friend was somewhat excited and missed his pocket. Anyhow, the boys had the laugh on him for once.

The big hunting match on Thanksgiving day, came out with Wesley Exelby only 175 counts behind, if he did count sparrow heads up to 7c. Osgood's side counted a three months old weazle skin to beat him. They say they are to have another hunt Christmas, then Wes. says somebody will have to spend some money if they beat him. That's right; nothing like plenty of grit.

Let all the young people get their suits ready for the masquerade supper at the hotel, next Wednesday evening. All parties desiring to mask will choose their partners at the hall, and unmask at the table. Let every one take an interest in this and turn out. Thanksgiving Day.

Thanksgiving Day was duly observed, enjoyed and improved by the Osgood family, of Macon, Mich. According to a well arranged progam, the entire afternoon was spent in a very enjoyable and profitable manner.

For forty-six years in succession have the children of Grandma Osgood met at some one of the children's homes to celebrate with her the Thanksgiving Day. This year it was at her own home and 36 guests sat down with her to a bountiful dinner at half-past 12 o'clock. After dinner another variety of refreshment was given, led by a "Greeting" by Master Clarence P. Osgood, a grandchild, living in St. Johns, and son of James Osgood; after this a song; then reading of Scripture and prayer, followed by music, declamations, essays, selections, etc., closed the arranged program of entertainment.

It is worthy of notice that this aged mother is now in her 86th year, strong and healthy and quite vigorous, both in mind and body. She was among the earliest settlers of this part of Michigan, has always been an active and earnest worker, and has brought up a family of children to be honored and useful. Her early instruction of strictly Christian principles has been honored and blessed of God, and her children all are among the very best of the families that constitute the citizens of Michigan, and they rise up to call her blessed, proving the truth of God's word,—"They that honor me, I will honor."

All the sons and daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, with only two exceptions,—(George V., who died the 1st day of October, 1891, and his son, living in Toledo),—were present to join in the 46th annual reunion of the Martha Osgood family. Very few, if any, bear such a record of so many years, and so large a number of sons and daughters, with their families, thus meeting yearly. Hence a notice is not out of place. G.

WITHOUT KNIFE OR FIRE.

Mr. S. E. Carmichael, a prominent citizen of Henrietta, Texas, writes: "I wish to tell you what Swift's Specific has done for my wife. Several years ago there appeared a splotch on the corner of her nose which gradually increased in size, and became quite painful; on washing her face it would frequently bleed. The doctors called it cancer, and advised that it be removed by the knife or burning, stating that it never would do to neglect it. My wife refused to have it cut or burned, but at the same time it continued to grow worse. After a time she commenced taking S. S. S., which effected an entire cure. She used a half dozen small sized bottles. We both think there is no medicine in the world that will equal Swift's Specific, and we would like for all sufferers to know the benefit she has received from it."

S. S. S. cures blood diseases of this character by forcing out the poisonous germs and the poison also. A valuable book on blood and skin diseases will be mailed to all applicants free. Address, SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

If the silver dollar now coined is a "cheap dollar," who made it so?—It is the product of Republican legislation. The demonetizing act of 1873 and the present silver coinage law were both Republican measures.

The new Governor of Indiana is Ira J. Chase. He is a minister of the gospel and conducted the funeral ceremonies of the late Governor Hovey, in Indianapolis. No other such instance in the history of the States is recalled.

The Democrats of Iowa are organizing Horace Boies clubs, and they purpose to push their favorite for the presidential nomination next year. If the Democracy should deem it advisable to go west for a candidate "Uncle Horace" would be a prominent man in the race.

Membership in the "Sisters of Ruth" is the latest political fad among Democratic women. The organization was recently started at Harrisburg and is spreading rapidly in all the larger cities of the land. The leading object of the organization is to send Frances and Ruth to the White House at the close of Harrison's term.

November 30th has been set by the Supreme Court as the day to argue the case involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act, and the case involving the right of the Speaker of the House of Representatives to count a quorum. These cases, although brought in the name of business firms, are regarded as political; but that does not lessen the importance of the decisions, in fact it rather adds to it.

The extraordinary falling off in the establishment of tin-plate works since election is the most noticeable thing in the world. Before the ides of November set in it was a poor day that, by telegraph from some part of the union or another, the establishment of tin-plate factories was not heralded to the world. The election of Major McKinley seems to have paralyzed the business.

The Republican party which has just lost both Massachusetts and Iowa for the second time in succession, is the Republican party of "Tom" Platt, "Mat" Quay, and James S. Clarkson. The party which has won is the party of Horace Boies, William E. Russell and Grover Cleveland. The leadership of the Platts and Quays and Clarksons is fixed upon the Republican party. The late elections insure the continued leadership of the Democracy by such men as Boies and Russell and Cleveland.—New York Evening Post.

The Boston Herald contains this sensible suggestion, which is entitled to the favorable consideration of all school officials. "Is it not time that the typewriter was admitted into the public schools? It has made its way everywhere else, and it has come to stay. Hundreds of those who are trained in the public schools are to earn their living typewriting, and no teaching has ever been invented that carries the same unique demands upon the intelligence, the culture and the general education of the person who runs it."

Wire pulling must soon give way to votes in the Speakership contest. None of the candidates, aside from Mills and Crisp, will give any figures showing the votes they expect to get. Crisp claims to have 114, but the claim is stoutly disputed by his opponents, who maintain that he has not more than 83. Mills claims to have 90 and the claim is generally conceded. Since Bynum withdrew he has become a valuable assistant to Mills. Although it is denied, there are good reasons for believing that McMillan is prepared to withdraw in Mills' favor the moment it becomes apparent that such a withdrawal will result in Mills' nomination.

The Journal is agitating itself because Democratic papers approve what Congressman Walker said as to doubling his fortune in five years if he can have free trade. The Democracy has been howling, it says in substance, because the monopolists made fortunes under protection and what will it do if they made double fortunes under free trade? It does not seem to occur to the Journal that under protection monopolists make their fortunes out of their own countrymen, while under free trade they will cease to be monopolists and if they make double fortunes must do it out of the foreigner.—Detroit Free Press.

HOW TRUSTS OPERATE.

Mild Arraignment of the Table Glassware Trust By the High Tariff Boston Commercial Bulletin.

The following article on the glassware trust from the Commercial Bulletin is interesting:

"When the United States Glass Co. was formed in July it issued a circular to its customers all over the country stating its policy, and among other things announcing that it did not intend to advance the price. Of course the combination was formed for the express purpose of increasing the profit on their goods, but this was to be done by economically operating their factories. This was to be effected by having each factory make a special or several special lines; for instance, one could make goblets and stem ware and so on. The sets of molds would also be limited, the saving amounting to considerable, as each set cost from $3,000 to $5,000. The number of high salaried officials could be reduced. Again there would be no danger of accumulating stock, as a factory making a certain line could shut down if there was a surplus on the market, and the manufacturers joined in one strong association could be more independent of the union of glass workers, with which they have in the past been unable to cope. Thus by gaining these advantages the association proposed to make greater profits than in the past.

"Four months have not passed yet, but prices have already been pushed up on staple lines from five to ten per cent., and on some specialties, such as cologne bottles and similar goods, the advance has been fully fifty per cent. Jobbers look for a greater advance than this before the year is out. What its limits will be is hard even to surmise, but judging from the low basis on which goods sold before the combination was effected, the advance will be considerable.

"The increase in the price of novelties and new patterns has not come yet. What are called new patterns have been on the market now since last January, and no newer ones are expected until the advent of the new year. When they are put on the market the jobbers say they will most likely be obliged to pay comparatively more than in past years. The advance is very likely to be considerable also, as the making of new patterns entails the risk of not having the goods take with the purchasing public, a point which competition in the past did not admit being fully taken into account.

"By the way, prices have been advanced of late on table glassware, it is natural to suppose the United States Glass Co. has practical control of the market. There are in this country about twenty-six factories in all that make table glassware, and when the association was first formed it included fourteen of these. Most of the powerful concerns were secured, yet several remained outside. Since July two or three more companies have entered and of the ten or so left but two or three are large concerns that have the power to harass the combination.

"These two or three concerns, it is understood, have agreed to be friendly with the new United States Glass Co. and follow the policy of the latter in putting prices up or down. There are some who expect to see these outsiders yet immerged in the combination, so friendly has been their attitude in the past."

SHALL HIDES BE TAXED

Secretary Rusk Favors a Duty on Hides to "Get Even" With the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers—Real Animus of His Recommendations.

When the news of the election in Massachusetts reached Washington, Secretary Rusk was the only man in the gloomy group around the White house who betrayed his conviction that national issues were involved in the Massachusetts fight, and he did it by a silly threat. According to the New York Tribune the purport of his remarks was as follows:

"Secretary Rusk declares that the elections went as he expected, and he was not at all surprised. The only comment he had to make was that he would be in favor of restoring the tariff on hides, as the Massachusetts shoe manufacturers, for whose benefit hides were put on the free list, had voted with the democrats. He believed it a good idea to make them pay more for their hides."

The secretary would punish the boot and shoe manufacturers for voting in their own interests by "taxing hides." The question arises would the boot and shoe manufacturers be the worst sufferers? Hardly. The tax would have to be paid by the people who buy boots and shoes. There is, however, another view of the question. According to the doctrines taught by McKinley, the foreigners who sell us hides, not the boot and shoe manufacturers, would have to pay the duty. Secretary Rusk does not agree to this doctrine, for if he did he would not recommend a tax on hides as the best way of "getting even."

Secretary Rusk's plan has a deeper meaning. He never overlooks the interests of the "Big Four" of Chicago; he never looses an opportunity to put in a word for the benefit of this group of millionaires, although he pretends to be the farmers' friend.

In 1890, during the debate on the McKinley bill, the New York Tribune showed clearly how a tariff on hides would operate. It said: "It can hardly be believed that the home producer will be benefited by the imposition of a duty which would apparently help nobody so much as the rich combination of beef packers in Chicago."

Col. Bayne, one of the high tariff members of McKinley's ways and means committee, showed more clearly still for whose interests a duty on hides was being advocated when he said during the debate: "As a matter of fact, the business of hides is largely in the hands of such men as Phil Armour (one of the 'Big Four') who can consign to a tannery a hundred or several hundred hides at once, and it is they who will be benefited by this duty, rather than the farmer, who has only one or two hides to sell at a time."

What the real effect of a tariff on hides would be is shown by the following statement made by Thomas E. Proctor, of the Proctor Leather Co., of Boston. Said Mr. Proctor: "The only effect it would have would be to increase the price of shoes and curtail our foreign trade in leather. There is no surer way to make New England solidly and reliably democratic than to put a tax on hides, as contemplated. Let me show you how it would work. The trade offered would be that with the Argentine republic and Brazil. The leather made from American hides is that used in the uppers of the shoes. Very little, I may say no sole leather is made from American hides. To put a tax on hides brought from South America, if it had any effect at all on shoes made for our home trade, would be to increase their price. On the other hand it would materially hurt the business of our tanners. Very much of the leather imported from South America is tanned here and shipped to England. Now, if these hides are taxed it will make it impossible for our tanners to compete with those of Canada, who get their hides from the same source without tax and with the advantage of an unlimited supply of hemlock bark. Canadian tanners would derive the benefit, our own tanners would suffer the loss under such a tax. With us hides are an industrial product. If the hide was not sold at all there would be just as many cattle raised as there are now, as the beef and tallow form the main product. We do not, however, export any of our own hides. Of the sole leather tanned in this country fully one-fourth is sent abroad. To place a tax on this leather would wholly ruin this trade, as Canada, where hides are free, would absorb it all."

A duty on hides under Rusk's plan to "get even" would, as shown above, establish a big tanning industry in Canada at our expense, just as the duty on silver lead ore has built up smelters in Mexico. Are we really to repeat this unwise action?

A SAMPLE CASE.

How the Tariff Increases the Cost of Carriages and Wagons.

The carriage and wagon industry of the United States may be considered to be fairly well established. We not only make our own, but furnish carriages to every civilized nation of the earth. England herself buys annually of us more than a quarter of a million dollars' worth of wagons, while her possessions in Australia invest $400,000 more with us on this account. But our export trade is but a tithe of what it would be with free raw material and with better facilities for shipping, such as we might have if there were no restrictions upon shipping or commerce. The carriage and wagon manufacturers begin to realize this themselves, all but one of them (republicans and democrats alike), in Cortland, N. Y., the carriage center of eastern United States, signed a petition protesting against the duties on material proposed by McKinley. But the major was deaf to their appeals, and increased the duties on many materials for carriages.

The duties on materials for carriage trimmings—English broadcloth, plush corduroy, etc.—increases the cost of a $75 carriage about $2. Not a yard of corduroy is made in this country, and the greater part of the broadcloth used has been imported at about 100 per cent duty. A leading manufacturer of Cortland says: "Over $250,000 worth of cloths are used in this place, seven-eighths of which until recently has been imported. Not a thing that goes into a carriage is untaxed by the tariff except lumber, which is also probably higher because of the tariff."

The duty on carriage hardware is 45 per cent. It serves no purpose except to enable the national association of carriage hardware manufacturers to keep up prices, which it raised materially when it was organized a few years ago. Nearly all wheels are purchased of the wheel trust. The duty on iron and steel adds something to the cost of these, and also to the cost of axles, many of which are made of imported steel. It is safe to say that the cost of carriages is increased 10 per cent. by tariff taxes. What an impetus would be given to both our home and foreign trade if prices could be reduced 10 per cent.

THE AMERICAN HOG.

The German Tariff Offsets the Removal of Prohibition on American Pork.

In his recent letter to the editor of the Bucyrus (O.) Journal Mr. Blaine said:

"Germany, without negotiating a formal treaty, has removed the prohibition on pork, and our government in consideration thereof has left her sugar on the free list. This opens to us an entirely new market, and $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 of American pork will be consumed per annum where not a pound has been taken for ten years."

Before Germany prohibited the importation of our pork our exports to that country were as follows:

	1880	1881
Bacon and hams	$1,736,491	$1,670,338
Pork	79,408	108,215
Total	$1,815,58	$1,778,514

Had the prohibition not existed we would have exported to Germany in ten years about as much pork as Mr. Blaine claims we shall hereafter export to her each year.

It will be noticed that Mr. Blaine forgot to say anything about the German tariff on our pork. The reason he did not was because Germany still imposes a high duty which will keep out our pork about as well as the prohibition of it has done. In effect, there is no difference whether the prohibition is effected directly or indirectly by high duties.

But what becomes of Mr. Blaine's assertion that the removal by Germany of its prohibition law was a triumph of reciprocity, when President Harrison declares through his private secretary: "The removal of the pork restriction has nothing to do with any question of reciprocity, but is based upon the acceptance by the German government of the inspection of meats by this government under the law of the last congress."

Mills for Speaker.

In reply to a letter from Congressman J. D. Warner, asking his views on the speakership, Senator John G. Carlisle gave his views as follows:

DEAR SIR—Your favor of the 17th inst. is just received. The charge that Hon. Roger Q. Mills is "unfitted by temperament to make a dignified and effective presiding officer of the House" does that gentleman very great injustice. Mr. Mills is earnest and courageous in the maintenance of his opinions, but he is just and impartial in the discharge of his public duties and always accords to his opponents the same consideration he claims for himself. Before his appointment as chairman of the committee on ways and means in the Fiftieth Congress the same objection to which you now refer was urged against him, and there were many who expressed the fear that his views were too extreme for the position and that he might recommend legislation upon the tariff of such a radical character that the party would be unwilling to indorse it; but the provisions of the proposed bill and the manner in which it was managed in the committee and in the House showed conclusively that all these apprehensions were unfounded. His bill was a very conservative one, and his advocacy of it was able and judicious from the beginning to the close of the discussion. If elected Speaker, I am sure that the same spirit of moderation would characterize his administration of that office and that no one would ever have just cause to complain of his demeanor while presiding or of his general course on political questions.

Having answered your inquiry perhaps I ought to say more, but I will venture to add a word upon another subject to which you incidentally allude. It is unfortunately true that there is a disposition in some quarters to subordinate the question of tariff reform to others which are, in my opinion, far less important to the people and far more dangerous to the harmony and success of the Democratic party. Upon the tariff question we are practically united, while upon the silver question, and perhaps upon some others, there are wide and honest differences of opinion among members of our own party—differences which can be reconciled by patient deliberation and the exercise of a liberal spirit of forbearance and toleration. Why should we, on the eve of a great national contest, when victory is almost within our grasp, abandon or ignore a vital issue upon which we are united and waste our strength in a fruitless controversy among ourselves over questions which can be better adjusted after it has been determined what part of their own earnings the people shall be permitted to keep. Let us do one thing at a time and all things in their proper order. The first duty of the Democratic party and of all who sympathize with it is to change the laws under which the earnings of the people are taken away from them by unjust taxation for private purposes, and whoever proposes to postpone the performance of this duty in order to inaugurate a war among ourselves over the silver question, or any other question, is not a wise counsellor and would not make a safe leader.

Yours truly,
JOHN G. CARLISLE.

King of Medicines

Scrofulous Humor—A Cure "Almost Miraculous."

"When I was 14 years of age I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and after I recovered had to go on crutches. A year later, scrofula, in the form of white swellings, appeared on various parts of my body, and for 11 years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed years. In that time ten or eleven sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. I feared I never should get well.

"Early in 1886 I went to Chicago to visit a sister, but was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July I read a book, 'A Day with a Circus,' in which were statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine that I decided to try it. To my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better and in a short time I was up and out of doors. I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the disease that I went to work for the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since then on account of sickness. I believe the disease is expelled from my system, I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to the loss of bone, and the sores formerly on my right leg. To my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous, and I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, 9 N. Railroad St., Kendallville, Ind.

HAVE NOT LOST A SINGLE DAY

TECUMSEH HERALD.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

OUR HOLIDAY GREETING.

The month of December has opened gloriously in this year of grace, 1891. A nice run of sleighing immediately after Thanksgiving is quite an unusual event in this latitude. It braces up both young and old, and injects the spirit of enterprise into our business firms. The tingle of sleigh bells is heard on the streets, and the jingle of the yellow and white metal on the counters of our business houses.

The HERALD has caught the inspiration like all others and sends forth its holiday greeting to its numerous patrons in Northern Lenawee, with the hope and expectation that the present year may close with a business boom without a parallel in the history of our village. To bring about this happy consummation the HERALD intends to do its full share. This extra sheet, which will be issued four weeks during the present month, contains important business announcements, which will interest every family within the radius of its circulation. It will be found not only ornamental and entertaining, but decidedly useful as well, and we invite a careful perusal of its columns, with confidence that the time thus spent will yield an abundant harvest. Do you always read the advertising columns of your home newspaper? If not, you are behind the times. The farmer is interested in knowing where he can buy his family necessaries to the best advantage; the house-wife wishes to ascertain where her own new gown and the "little fixins" for the baby are coming from; the boys and girls wish to learn the names of those firms that enjoy direct trade relations with Santa Claus; and all feel interested in preparing for the proper celebration of Christmas and New Years with the least expenditure of cash. To accomplish these results there is no source of information which can possibly compare with that furnished by your home newspaper. The city daily is now a visitor in most households, every farmer takes one or more agricultural journals, a monthly magazine is found in nearly every family, and few center tables are destitute of a childrens' paper. But the home journal occupies a place that no other newspaper can possibly fill. It chronicles the local happenings in your own neighborhood; it feels the throb of joy over your successes and of sorrow over your misfortunes; it sends greeting to those who embark on matrimony's uncertain sea and condoles with those who follow their friends to the tomb; it booms all public enterprises gratuitously and keeps mum about the old fogies who are continually blocking the wheels of progress; it talks up new manufacturies and fair associations; it receives dead-head tickets to shows without a pang of regret; it accepts pay on subscription in either gold, silver, or greenbacks, elmwood, pumpkins or potatoes; it lives on faith and skimmed milk and its owner is expected to be the happiest and richest mortal in the community.

The paper we send out this week, comprising both the regular sheet and supplement, is a fair representative of Tecumseh's business houses. Nearly every firm is, or will be, represented in some manner in these columns, and it is no idle boast to say that a better class of business houses cannot be found in any town of its size in Michigan. Tecumseh has always been peculiarly fortunate in the stability and good character of her business men. A business failure is a thing of rare occurrence here. Our leading firms are well established and seldom change. They are composed of capable, experienced, and enterprising men, whose credit in the eastern markets is of the gilt edged kind. They can make their purchases on the most favorable terms. But few larger towns are more favored than Tecumseh in this regard. Hence it is that our stocks of goods are very full and complete, prices low and bargains plenty. It is no unfrequent thing for residents of towns ten and twenty miles away to make large purchases of our merchants, and a customer who trades here once generally comes again. Would you avail yourself of some of these bargains? Most assuredly you ought to. Then peruse the advertising cards in this issue. Herein you will find everything mentioned, which man woman or child, may wish to eat, drink or wear; furniture, carpets and hardware for the house; ulsters for the husband and silk dresses for the wife; nobby suits and hats for the boys and girls; crockery and china ware for the table; furnishings for the young gent and perfumery for the young ladies; jewelry and silver ware for the rich and cheaper bric-a-brac for the poor; nick-nacks without number for Christmas Eve: all to be had at rock bottom prices and on easy terms. If you don't believe it, come and see.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well knowr. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver any paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Our premium offers for the coming year are more favorable than ever before and the club list is the best one ever issued from this office. Examine them carefully and make your selections early.

A SOMEWHAT TARDY RESCUER.

Voice (from the well)—Help!
Sheehan—Is anny wan down there?
Voice—Oi am!
Sheehan—Pfwhat's yure name?
Voice—Halloran!
Sheehan—Well, Halloran, yez musty fall a mile t' mek a hole like thot in th' ground phin yez shtruck.—Judge.

New York's Weak Point.

Mr. Gotham—We intend that New York shall be fitly represented at the Chicago exhibition. We shall put up some grand structure in which to place our exhibits, though exactly what form it will take has not been decided.

Mr. Lakeside (of Chicago)—Whether you give us a Vanderbilt palace, a suburban villa, a twenty-story flat or a monster warehouse, we shall be thankful; but for mercy sake don't—don't attempt to build a monument.—N. Y. Weekly.

To Lead Either Way.

Two boys were observed leading home a cow. One boy had hold of a rope tied around her horns, while the other had hold of her tail. A gentleman asked him why he kept hold of the cow's tail.

"Well," said the boy, "when she walks along all right John leads her by the rope, and when she walks backwards I lead her by the tail."—Boston Courier.

Mercantile Item.

"Now, then," said a New York merchant to one of his traveling salesmen, who was packing for his journey, "let us see that you sell more goods on this trip than you did before. Our firm is more generally known now."

"In that case," said the drummer, looking dubiously up from his sample cases, "I am a little afraid it will be uphill work."—Texas Siftings.

Contracted a Prejudice.

"No, Mrs. Van Twilken will never cross the water," said a lady to her caller.

"Why not?"

"Well, you see her husband rescued her from drowning. That was what led to their acquaintance, and she has had a violent prejudice against the ocean ever since."—Washington Star.

The Unreliable Sex.

Gus De Smith—The young ladies of the present day are no good. They can't be relied on.

Kosciusko Murphy—What makes you think so?

Gus De Smith—I am engaged to three young ladies, and they all flirt with other men.—Texas Siftings.

Obliging.

McJunkin (in the barber's chair)—Look here, you butcher, you've cut a piece out of my left ear!

Barber—Yes, sir, I see; but I'll cut a piece just like it out of your right ear, sir, and thus make them uniform.—Harper's Bazar.

That Is Rather Heavy.

"I understand that Mr. Fangle is one of your heavy depositors," remarked Jaysmith to Banker Scadds, in an effort to pry into Fangle's business.

"Well, I should say Mr. Fangle weighs 230 pounds," replied Scadds.—Brooklyn Life.

Case of Necessity.

Mamma—Dora, didn't I tell you I should have to punish you if you put your fingers in your mouth again?

Two-year-old—I couldn't help it, mamma. I dess had to do it. My teeth itched dreadful!—Chicago Tribune.

Moving Out.

Jones—It is said that it is impossible to witness unmoved the acting of Mr. J. Lawrence Sullivan.

Adams—Yes, I saw a good many people leaving after the first act.—Kate Field's Washington.

Sermons in Stones.

Jimly—Shakespeare speaks of sermons in the stones.

Bimly—Now I understand why women pay so much attention to one another's jewels when in church.—N. Y. Herald.

Amour Propre.

Husband—Caroline, you know you were in the wrong about that lawsuit you lost. Come back to me and let us be happy once more.

Wife—No; I won't do it until you admit that I was entitled to a divorce.—Judge.

No Weakness There.

Snively—Old Mr. Gildersleeve always strikes me as a very weak man.

Snodgrass—You are mistaken. He carries life insurance amounting to $250,000.—Philadelphia Press.

Not Entirely Useless.

He (hopeless, but seeking consolation)—Now that you have met Tom Walkover, you have no further use for me.

She—Oh, yes I have. I need you to make him jealous!—Life.

A Mean Advantage.

Jack—How did you manage to get rid of your rival?

Harry—I got him appointed an umpire, and took the girl out to witness his first game.—Puck.

Theatrical Note.

McReady—How long a run did you have in Schenectady?

Keane—Oh, just from the hotel to the station.—Judge.

Arithmetic and Dresses.

Teacher—If your mother had twenty-five yards of stuff, and made a dress requiring but eighteen yards, how much would she have left?

Little Girl—Mamma can't make her own dresses. She has tried often, and they are always either too—

Teacher—Suppose she sent it to a dressmaker, how much would the dressmaker send back?

Little Girl—Depends on which dressmaker she sent it to. Some wouldn't send back any.

Teacher (impatiently)—Suppose she sent it to an honest one?

Little Girl—Some of the honestest ones cut things to waste so that there is never anything left, no matter how much you send 'em.—Good News.

Vengeance!

"And now," whispered the dying wife, "when I am gone, John, dear, don't grieve at my loss, but get married again, for the children need some one to look after them, and—"

"O, don't, May, don't" pleaded the sorrowful husband, "don't speak of it!"

"But I must," said she. "And if you get married, marry Miss Mayberly."

"I will, May, if you think she would make me a good wife."

"That's not it," she said, and her breath came fast and faint, "but when she won the prize for making the best bread, I swore I'd get even with her and make her life unhappy, and—and you can do it, John'"—Boston News.

Not That Kind of a Relic.

The widow of a distinguished professor was visited by a rather shabby-genteel sort of a gentleman, who expressed great admiration for her deceased husband and who finally said:

"I would like very much to have the memory of your husband some relic to keep and cherish."

"The only relic I can offer you," replied the disconsolate widow, sighing heavily, "is myself. If you will love and cherish me, for his sake you may, for I am of an affectionate disposition and—"

But the relic hunter had silently stolen away before she could finish the sentence.—Texas Siftings.

He Didn't Lie.

Father—Look here, young man, give an account of yourself. What kept you out so late last night?

Son—I was attending a class in ethnology, and of course I didn't want to leave till the session was over.

"What do you want to lie, for? I have positive knowledge that you were at the bicycle tournament. Good deal of ethnology about that, eh?"

"Certainly. That comes under the head of 'the races of man,' don't it?"—Boston Courier.

HOW HE GOT IT.

Famished Flunegan (politely)—Young lady, would yer please ax yer mother if she can't give a poor man a bit of cold luncheon?

Miss Witherupp (aged thirty-eight)—Sit right down here, poor fellow! I'll get you some myself.—Judge.

A Give-Away.

Judge—Officer, you say this woman, when locked up, was dressed in men's attire?

Officer—Yes, sir; but I didn't suspect her sex until this morning, when she was buttoning her shoes.

Judge—How did you detect it then?

Officer—She asked me for a hairpin!—Puck.

Dressed in Style.

Western Stage Robber—Hold up y'r hands!

Scared Passengers—Yes, yes, yes, of course.

Robber (gallantly)—Beg parding, lady; you needn't hold yours up. Put 'em down again.

Lady—My hands are not up. Those are my shoulder puffs.—N. Y. Weekly

Right, After All.

Codling—Look here, Mawler, you pretend to be a realistic painter and yet in this picture you have a stream in oil colors instead of putting it in water colors.

Mawler—That's all right, Codling The stream in that picture is Oil creek, in Venango county, Pa.—Brooklyn Life.

In the Snake Ward.

Dr. Burridge—How do you feel this morning?

Snoozer (the tramp)—Pretty comf'table, doc.; but I wisht you'd let science have a rap at me.

Dr. Burridge—How?

Snoozer—Jest try that oppyration fer th' transfusion of beer.—Judge.

Horizontal Longevity.

"Are boa-constrictors remarkable for longevity?"

"Indeed they are. Some of them grow to be thirty or forty feet long."—Brooklyn Life.

"Comrades! Comrades!"

"Comrades! Comrades!"—she sang in the eventide.
The lights were low—I dealt him a blow,
And "he died right by my side."
—Puck.

Faithful Unto Death.

She—Has she treated you falsely and broken off the engagement?

He—No; that's the trouble. She keeps her engagements—all of them you know.—Judge.

HISTORY.

As It Might Have Been.

When the intrepid voyager, Christopher Columbus, returned to Spain after his first voyage across the Atlantic, he made haste to pay his respects to King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, through whose generosity he had been enabled to undertake his daring enterprise. He felt in duty bound to make his first report to these, his royal patrons, and he took care in the meanwhile to keep out of the way of the newspaper interviewers, who were, of course, laying for him. Without waiting to change his linen or even to have his boots polished, he proceeded to the castle and rang the visitors' bell. The king answered the door personally, apologizing for not having sent Isabella, as that lady was in her boudoir at the moment taking out her curl papers. After shaking hands heartily with the distinguished sailor, Ferdinand showed him into the parlor, and begged him to be seated. Just at this moment Isabella appeared, and most cordially greeted Columbus, gushingly observing that it was "awfully nice to have him back again." Columbus expressed his thanks, and was about to begin his narrative, when the king stopped him with a gesture.

"Before you say a word, Chris," put in his majesty, "permit me to hand you a little present, as a testimony of esteem from myself and the queen."

So saying, he, with courtly grace, handed the great navigator a parchment roll, neatly tied with red tape.

"Don't mind examining it just yet," said the king. "Be so good as to proceed with your report. How did the scheme pan out?"

Columbus at once entered on an interesting account of his voyage, detailing his many hardships and the glorious reward of his perseverance and heroism. Incidentally he mentioned, with pardonable pride, that he had made the fastest Atlantic trip on record.

"Ho! ho!" exclaimed his majesty at the conclusion of the recital, "and so you discovered a continent, hey? Bully for you, Chris! I knew your head was level and so did Bella here, although everybody else called you a crank. I presume you planted the flag of Spain upon landing?"

"I did, your majesty—I may even say, you bet I did," answered Columbus, with a low and courtly bow.

"Which act, according to international law," said Ferdinand, "constituted the crown of Spain the owner of the property by right of discovery."

"Precisely so, your majesty," replied Columbus.

"You're a positive old duck, that's what you are," exclaimed the emotional queen.

"We will not detain you longer just now," said the king, "as we are due at the opera in half an hour; but I trust you will find our appreciation of your services adequately expressed in the little present I have given you. Good evening, Mr. Columbus."

Columbus, having taken a formal farewell of the queen, proceeded to his home, where he greeted his wife and children with great cordiality. Of course, after tea he gave them a full and particular account of his adventures, winding up with his visit to the castle. "And now," said he, in conclusion, "let us have a look at this present; I am really curious to know what it can be."

"Boodle, I'll bet," exclaimed his eldest boy, a shaver in his teens.

"Bring the scissors, missus," said the great commander, and they were brought at once. The red tape was quickly severed, and the parchment unrolled. "A title-deed from the crown!" said Columbus, holding the document open, "signed, sealed and delivered!"

"For a building lot or what?" asked Mrs. Columbus, anxiously.

"Building lot nothing!" roared her husband. "Listen. Granting to Christopher Columbus, his heirs and assigns forever, all that parcel or tract of land, whatever it may be, that he has discovered as the agent of Spain.'"

"Gracious!" ejaculated Mrs. Columbus. This means that you are the owner of —"

"Of the continent of America. Exactly," continued her husband, "and a very handsome little estate it is, too."

"Oh! isn't that splendid, Chris, my dear," said the overjoyed woman. "Just think what we can make selling off lots when the boom sets in!"

"Sell off nothing!" said Columbus, with unusual warmth. "Look here, madam, I believe with the editor of the Christian Guardian, that forethought and prudence are admirable qualities which deserve to be rewarded, and I'm going to display them. I will never sell an inch of this land. My title to it is straight and clear, and I'm going to keep it in the family. No Columbus from now to the end of time need do a stroke of work if our fellow-men want to use the continent of America as a place of residence."

"True!" said Mrs. C. "I see the wisdom of that."

"We won't sell an acre of it; we'll only grant leases," said Christopher, thoughtfully, "and I'll put a condition in my will absolutely prohibiting any future Columbus from departing from this policy. Just think what a position our family will be in in the nineteenth century, when there will be about 100,000,000 people living in America."

"You bet there'll be boodle for our folks!" exclaimed the eldest boy.

And that night before the family retired, Columbus, who was a pious man, returned thanks to the bountiful Creator for having made a beautiful continent for the exclusive benefit of the Columbuses.—Toronto Grip.

Land in itself has no value. Value arises only from human labor. It is not until the ownership of land becomes equivalent to the ownership of laborers that any value attaches to it. And where land has a speculative value it is because of the expectation that the growth of society will in the future make its ownership equivalent to the ownership of laborers.—Protection or Free Trade.

Celestial Currency.

It was in the fall of 1865, and Uncle Cephas' first year of freedom was drawing to a close. His little crop of corn had been hauled up and shucked, and was now ready to go in the crib. Just then Mr. Speed, his landlord and former master passing by caught sight of the corn, and rode up to the pile where the old man was just beginning to toss the first ears in at the crib door.

"Mawnin', Unc' Ceph," called out the newcomer, by way of greeting.

"Sarvut, marster," was the old man's humble response.

"Gethered your crop, I see, Unc' Ceph."

"Yes sah, whut HIT de crows en de squir'ls er mongst um lef' me, sah."

"Where's my share?" asked Mr. Speed.

"Sah?" was the surprised inquiry.

"Where's my share?" repeated the landlord.

"Yer sheer er whut, marster?"

"My share of your crop, of course."

"Yer sheer er my crap! Al' seed it, sah. D'at but one sheer in dis hyere crap, en dat un's mine—hot yone, sah."

"But didn't you make it on my land, and with my horse?"

The humor of the situation was too much for Mr. Speed, and the last grain of that corn, saving what the dogs and rats got, was duly converted into celestial currency.—David Dodge, in Kate Fields' Washington.

The Curse of Machinery.

The Los Angeles Workman begins to see clearly that machinery should be a blessing to workmen instead of a curse.

Machinery does not properly throw men out of employment. It should be looked upon as relieving them from such labor as a machine can do better than a man, and freeing them to do other labor which a machine can not do. All laborers should share the benefit of machinery in the reduction of hours and increase of pay. The more labor-saving machinery there is the better off the people should be, but now the rich get all the benefits; the poor have to work just as hard as ever. It is not the fault of the machine, it is the fault of the robbery which appropriates the earnings of the machines and the men.—Los Angeles Workman.

ON THE MOVE.

The Grain Blockade in South Dakota Is Raised.

The Railways Making Every Effort Possible to Provide Cars to Transport the Grain—New York Canals Kept Open.

EMPTYING THE ELEVATORS.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Nov. 28.—The grain blockade has been raised in this state, temporarily at least, but another is expected at any moment. The railroad commissioners have returned from their trip to Chicago and St. Paul, where they interviewed the officials at the head of the various railroad systems, and were assured that everything would be done within the power of the companies to relieve the stagnation which existed in the transportation of grain. This week the Milwaukee has sent 200 extra "empties" daily into the state, while the Northwestern and Omaha lines have done equally as well. Buyers, who had stopped buying grain for lack of cars, have gone to work again and are filling the empties by shoveling the grain from the wagon while their elevators are groaning with the heavy weight they have to carry. C. E. McKinney, of the railway commission, states that by the figures of the board the Milwaukee and Northwestern each day hauls out of the state 1,000 cars of grain, and with the Omaha and the Great Northern 1,500 cars would be a small estimate of the grain shipped daily. The recent snowstorm did not clog up the railway. Should a severe storm prevail and anything like a snow blockade exist purchasers of grain would be compelled to close down immediately. The commission believes it will be three weeks before the elevators can be emptied.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The official order that the state canals close November 30 has been modified so that the Erie will remain open until December 5. This extension was brought about by the request of shippers and the chambers of commerce of Buffalo and New York to enable the movement of some of the great accumulation of grain in Buffalo. Never before in its history as an intermediate shipping center has Buffalo had such an amount of grain in its harbor and elevators. It is estimated that there are 8,000,000 bushels. The railroads cannot furnish enough cars to move the grain as it should be moved and the canal authorities had to be appealed to to help in the matter.

THANKSGIVING SERMON.

Delivered by Rev. W. H. Babbitt at the M. E. Church on Thursday, Nov. 26, 1891.

Text—Ps. 92:1. "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

Two legalized holidays stand forth prominent and peculiar in our American calendar. One of them is the 4th of July, or Independence Day. The other is our annual Thanksgiving day. There are no such days as these on the calendar of any of the other nations of the earth. The 4th of July is simply and strictly patriotic in its character. It had its origin in the signing of a document by members of the Continental Congress, on the 4th of July, 1776, declaring that the American Colonies represented in that Congress were, and of right ought to be, free and independent. We have started as a free and independent people on the second century of this day's observance. Long may it continue to be fittingly observed, that the hearts of young Americans may be inspired by it with fresh emotions of patriotism and with fresh appreciation of the value of liberty.

Thanksgiving day, though partly civil in its character, is at least semi-religious, for it calls on the people to assemble themselves for the worship of God. It had its origin long before Independence day was ever dreamed of—in the times when settlers on this western continent still spoke, reverently and affectionately, of England's king as their sovereign lord. The first public Thanksgiving was appointed by Governor Bradford, of the province of Massachusetts, in 1621. From this time on Thanksgiving day began to be a common observance in New England. Our National Thanksgiving of to-day is the legacy of those colonial times. Whether we should ever have been a nation at all, or if a nation so prosperous and powerful as we have come to be, if those early Thanksgiving days had not been observed, is more than doubtful. There is a God of nations and our 4th of July would never have become a day of annual rejoicing but for his blessing on our efforts to be free. The inhabitants of the earth early lost their knowledge of God and sank into sorrowful degradation, because, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful. In this degradation a large portion of the earth's inhabitants continue to be sunken. It is worthy of our attentive notice and of our careful thought, that the peoples who have risen from that degradation are the ones who have learned how to glorify God and be thankful to Him. The testimony of history makes it plain, that while a thankful spirit brings down a blessing from Heaven, an unthankful spirit brings down a curse. What the Psalmist says in the text always has been, and always will be, true: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord." That person or that nation stands very much in its own light, that loses sight of the duty of Thanksgiving. This day, imperfectly as it has been observed, has been, I verily believe, of immense benefit to the people and the Government of these United States. Incidental benefits have sprung up from its observance, apart from the principal end of its establishment.

1st. For example: The busy toilers of the land get out of it a pleasant holiday. And I am sure these toiling ones have not any superabundance of such days in this busy and pushing land. Of the benefit of God's blessed rest-day very many of them are deprived, and those who are not entirely deprived of its rest work so hard through the week and so close up into Sabbath hours that they have not time on that day to recover themselves and are still weary when the Monday morning's light appears and bids them take up their rounds of toil once more. For the sake of mind and body both there ought to be more days set apart from the working days of the year, when the intellectual and the social nature can both receive cultivation, when innocent and improving recreations can be enjoyed. There will always be some who will abuse such opportunities by unlawful indulgence of their appetites and by engaging in dissipation. But could we look into the humbler homes of our land to-day I feel sure we would find a large proportion of them wearing an unusual aspect of brightness and content, because thanksgiving time has come again.

2d. Another incidental benefit of this day is that, when it approaches, the thoughts of the rich and well-to-do are turned away, as if by common consent, from themselves to a consideration of those who feel the pressure of poverty, and who have all, and sometimes more than all, that they can do to keep the wolf of unsatisfied hunger and of pinching want from the door. We have such persons living in our highly favored country and some of them are worthy of all, and more than all, the consideration they get. They are hidden away in the packed tenement houses of the city and in the little bare brown cottages of one or two rooms in the country. Oftentimes they are overlooked. But, as the successful man arranges for the comfort of himself and family on this attractive day, generous thoughts enter his heart and he says: "Now, before I eat my own full meal on this Thanksgiving, I must remember this poor widow, and that suffering invalid, and those helpless orphans. The thought that they are supplied will help me enjoy with a keener relish the rich bounties which a kind providence has bestowed on me." And thus it happens that many sad hearts are cheered by appropriate remembrances at this time, and the gathering hardness melts out of many a soul, and faith in the existence of any real goodness in the world that was fast dying out, is revived. The orphan asylums, the houses of refuge, the infirmaries, the old people's homes, all have loads of good things sent to them and are relieved, for a few hours at least, from the dull monotony which too often settles down on such places. Even the criminal behind the bars is not forgotten; and the lines in his face relax and his stern heart softens as he partakes of a diet more generous than usual, and he is touched because even he is not left out of the general remembrance. Ought we not to keep fast hold of a day that wakens our land, by its coming, to such deeds of thoughtful kindness as these?

3. Then there is the strengthening of family ties and the intensifying of the love of home. Thanksgiving day is serviceable in this direction. This is emphatically a home-bringing day. Father and mother expect their children, who have made other homes for themselves, to gather at the old homestead on Thanksgiving. The children respond to the call. They come from every direction, often bringing their children along with them. There are joyful greetings mingled with tears under the old roof-tree. Some are not in the circle because they are too far away to come, though they are still in the land of the living, but they are remembered. Others are not there because God has called them hence, and they too are remembered. Who can estimate the value of these tender reunions in promoting domestic peace and purity? The blessing pronounced by the Christian father at the well-filled board—how that sets the son or the daughter that has grown cold-hearted and forgetful of religious obligations to thinking and resolving! If there be anything that tends to strengthen family ties or to discourage the thoughtless forming, or the speedy undoing, of the marriage bond, I am sure that we as a people need to cherish the home-helping influence.

4th. There is one more incidental benefit attending the observance of this day. Christian unity is promoted by it. All over our land assemblies are gathered this morning, composed, as this one is composed, of persons belonging to different Christian denominations. They come to thank God together for common blessings granted them. They, however, at the same time, in thanking God together, furnish valuable testimony to the fact that all the different divisions of Christians ought to be one, and that in truth they are one in Christ. There are few things that hurt the cause of religion more than jealousy and strife between the different denominations that hold essentially the same faith and are working with the self-same object in view. There needs to be a great amount of good done to counteract the evil influence of this stumbling block in the minds of those that are without. That separate denominations should exist may be all right and proper. But it would not be all right for them to maintain an unfriendly attitude, or exercise an unchristian temper toward each other. This would be to oppose themselves to the fulfillment of the Saviour's prayer—"that they all may be one." One cause for thanksgiving to-day is that Christians of different names are steadily gaining in friendliness and unity of feeling. Union services like this one have had something to do in bringing about this better understanding and in lowering the height and lessening the strength of separating denominational walls. Is there any good reason, my brothers, why we should not respect each other's ministerial characters, or why we should not labor side by side in perfect harmony? Is there any good reason why there should not be a pleasant intermingling of our people as they engage in the work which their and our common Master and Savior has given us all to do? I think not. And as we move on in our appointed work we will let the world see—nay, we will make the world see—how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

But let us turn now from surveying the incidental benefits arising from the observance of this day to dwell a little on the duty and advantage of doing the thing it calls on us to do—give thanks to God.

1. It is a good thing to give Him thanks because it is a right and a proper thing,—because it would be a sin not to be thankful to Him. * * *

And not only is the giving of thanks to God a good thing in that it is a right thing, but it is a pleasant thing to do. It cheers the heart to call to mind the goodness and the loving kindness of the Lord, and fills it with sunshine. If we are in search of comfort, there is more comfort in numbering up and dwelling upon our mercies than in turning our thoughts in gloomy reflection on our afflictions. Mrs. Browning has described a certain class of unhappy people, in saying of a sad-hearted Christian woman: "She thanked God and sighed—some people always sigh in thanking God." Let us try to render our thanks to-day with the sighs left out. If God has given to you a thankful heart—a disposition to rejoice on account of what has been bestowed, instead of a disposition to complain over what has been withheld—then praise Him and bless Him for giving you this thankful heart. * * * If we do not appreciate our mercies we cannot be suitably thankful for them. It is good to recognize them, dwell upon them, contrast them with the hardships of other times, in order to see how great they are. Modern inventions and discoveries have brought a large amount of health and comfort to us, which the most favored ones—even nobles and kings—of other days did not enjoy. Cottages have now conveniences and pleasant furnishings which palaces a few centuries ago could not boast. Henry VIII., of England, was upbraided with wanton extravagance for having a bed-tick stuffed with feathers to lie upon. The floors of houses in England in the 17th century were generally of stone or earth, sawed boards not having come into use. For light at night the people had the tallow candle. Stoves and furnaces were unknown. Tea, coffee and potatoes were not to be had, and meats were in price above the reach of the common people. Traveling was by stage coach and a journey of any length was a hazardous experiment and attended with serious discomforts. Newspapers were not published until 1663. Medicine and surgery were rude and primitive arts compared with what they are now. The annual death rate in the 17th century was one in 17; in the 19th century it is several times less.

The wealth of these days is vastly greater than in former ones. A man who would have been called rich in the 16th or 17th century would be called a poor one now. Crops that would have been called good then would be called very meagre now. And so with mines. It makes one's head ache to think of the amount and the value of all the productions on the surface of the earth and from under the earth of our great national domain, which is over 3,000 miles in length from east to west, and 1,500 in breadth from north to south. And these products are increasing in amount and in value every year.

What think you for an annual product of 2,600 millions of bushels of shelled corn, and 523 million bushels of oats, and of wheat a still more overflowing amount. Of cattle, horses, sheep and hogs the number is 165 millions. Of potatoes over 188 millions of bushels have been raised. Of radishes, lettuce, cabbages and celery 70 million dollars worth have been sold this year. The coal product of the year was worth 160 million dollars, at the mines. Oil brought 26 million dollars. Cotton, 390 million dollars. Gold and silver mined this year was worth probably $100,000,000. Three States, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, have together cut during the year 167 million dollars worth of lumber. New England, unable to compete with the West in farming, has quarried 40 million dollars worth of different kinds of stone and marble from her rock-ribbed hills. This, of course, is but an incomplete and partial statement of our country's present wealth. Many productions of the earth and manufactured articles have been left out. The sum total in point of value would rise in dollar measurement to a number of this money unit beyond conception great. It would represent a pile of minted gold or silver mountain high. Now what is to be done with all this wealth? What is being done with it? For one thing we are going to hold a world's fair with a portion of it—a Columbian exposition at the city of Chicago. * * *

It looks discouraging to those who are anxious that God should be honored in this Exposition that the question has not yet been decided whether the gates of the grand Exhibition shall be closed or opened on the Sabbath—whether the command, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, shall be obeyed or trampled upon—whether the love of money or religious principle shall, in the deciding of this question, get the victory. We are a Christian nation. Twenty millions of our people are members of churches that profess belief in Christian doctrines. Shall we bear public testimony to the fact that we are a Christian nation?—that we believe in a God who ought to be worshipped and whose laws ought to be obeyed? Or shall we not? * * *

As I look at the causes and connection of events, no people, however rich or strong, can long maintain their high position if they allow themselves to treat contemptuously the laws and institutions of God.

Taking a general survey of the condition of the world, it may be said, without extravagance, that in many directions the outlook is hopeful—more so than ever it was before. Old superstitions are dying, though they die hard. Progress has become the watchword in most lands, but in some progress is very slow. In Europe the different countries are all bearing still the hard and heavy burden of their immense standing armies. And they are watching each other with a lynx-eyed, jealous watchfulness, lest the trembling balance of power be disturbed and a general and bloody war be brought on. Let us be thankful to-day that we dwell so far away, in quiet seclusion from the vexing complications of European diplomacy. If reports are true, a condition of affairs prevails in Russia that is truly deplorable. The Jews are receiving a treatment there at the hands of the Government of which any enlightened nation ought to be thoroughly ashamed. The name given to this despotic government—"the Russian Bear"—is increasing in appropriateness. And then besides cruel persecution gaunt famine is stalking abroad in some of Russia's populous provinces. Thousands, if not millions, are perishing for lack of food, while there is plenty not far away from them. And there are no earnest, judicious, merciful efforts made to save the perishing. There are great inequalities and great extremes of condition existing yet, the world over, it is true. We have them here. Yet I do not think we would let the people in any part of our country starve by the wholesale. One of the good signs of the times with us is the increased attention to the wants of the poor in our cities and elsewhere—to the elevation, physically and morally, of those depressed classes, the number and degradation of which are so much increased by the importation to us from beyond the sea of some of the most worthless specimens of humanity which the world can afford. It is thus that the anarchists have come to us and come only to abuse the freedom which we have hospitably offered them. It was objected once, and foolishly, in a legislative body, when the question of chartering a foreign missionary society was before it, that religion was a commodity which we had too little of to think of exporting any. I am sure that ignorance and vice and lawlessness are commodities of which we have quite enough already, without our offering inducements for any more to come. It is cheering, however, to see the strenuous efforts that are being made to subdue the wickedness which is native to us as well as that which is imported. Our friends, the enemy, are very busy working mischief by catering lavishly to that demand which comes from the baser inclinations and appetites of the human body and the human heart. It is low business to cater to those appetites but there is money to be made in ministering to them. Men will often spend money more freely and cheerfully for that which will injure them, than they will for that which will do them good. But if the Devil's party are active in their campaign, it can be said that those on the Lord's side are active, also.

We must confess to the existence of great abuses in this free country. But we can say that some of these abuses have arisen because our country is free, and that they are the harder to correct for the reason that it is free. I am glad, however, that we are grappling with some of them, and I believe that we are holding a few of them in what will be a death grapple for them. The lottery business has been suffered to assume gigantic proportions, but it is a gigantic fraud and it has been stealing away poor people's money and corrupting their integrity, until our Uncle Samuel, or, in other words, our national Government, which professes to be the poor people's friend, has felt constrained to take the matter in hand. The Government has said to the great Louisiana Lottery Company, and to all lottery companies: "You shall not use the public mails to further your iniquitous schemes." Let the Government be firm and let the people support it in this stand, and we shall soon hear the last of lottery drawings. And may all other forms of gambling depart, along with them; betting at elections, horse races, athletic games and gambling in stocks included. We would bid them all farewell with great joy. What can be more ruinous to steady industry than to have the idea prevail that fortunes can be secured by a turn of the wheel, or by guessing or betting?

And now if the Government would only take one more needed step in protection of its citizens,—if it would declare itself the enemy, instead of the friend and protector of the liquor power,—if it would be too dignified and too paternal to accept a revenue which is made out of the ruin and the tears of thousands of its citizens,—if it would rise up in its majesty and say to those who are getting wealth by promoting drunkeness, "Gentlemen, nothing you can pay into the Government coffers can atone for the evils and the sorrows, the crimes and the heart-breakings which are traceable to you! Yours is a mammoth business. More millions are in it than in any other form of manufacture or of traffic. It has grown to this greatness by my protecting care. But it is high time now that the traffic in ardent spirits as a beverage should take its place along with its twin business—the out-lawed, prohibited slave trade."

It is true we cannot expect to rid the world of the vice of drunkeness, or any other vice, by means of prohibitory legislation. In spite of all forbidding laws this evil of intemperance will last until public sentiment frowns it down; until an overwhelming majority of our people unite in thinking and in saying that it is an evil and a sin. Too many respectable people are defending this custom of drinking yet. It is too popular politically. Prohibitory legislation would not kill this dragon. But it might cripple greatly its power and give the lovers of the virtue of temperance a better chance and a better hope of success in their labors. Oh! what a thanksgiving day that will be when we can praise God for the deliverance of our country from this sad, sad curse of intemperance. But that day will never come until there is a greater awakening to the magnitude of this crying evil than there is now. Nor will such a day come until all good people will unite and labor lovingly and patiently to have it come.

And now may God speed the right. May evil of every kind flee before it in its advance toward universal dominion. May good people stand fast by their colors, and never waver in contending for the cause of truth and righteousness, no matter what form of opposition they may be called to meet. May they show their gratitude to God for his peculiar, his wonderful favors by walking before him unto all pleasing. And may the years which are to come keep growing brighter and brighter before the rising dawn of the millenial day.

The Moonlight club had not finished their program Wednesday night—or Thursday morning rather—says the Hudson Gazette, when the electric lights went out and plunged the scene of gaiety into Egyptian gloom. The engineer explained by saying that he had run two or three hours after the usual time and thought the rest of the dance could be finished by moonlight, if the club's name meant anything. Besides, there was more fun at the other end of the line, he said, than there was in shoveling coal. So he simply quit and went home.

The Christian Union has no superior, as a religious journal, in this country. It is undenominational and yet not radical in its views, but it believes in the higher criticism and encourages biblical investigation and scholarship. It is a model of typographical excellence and is very ably edited. We invite attention to the prospectus published elsewhere.

One of the most important articles of diet in the average household is tea. If one uses it he wants the pure, unadulterated article. Jas. The competition between the milkmen in this town has got up to the sizzling point. Last Thursday the team attached to Frank Bryan's milk wagon, while left alone on Railroad street, took fright and started on the keen scoot. The wagon was soon upset and the milk cans and bottles scattered promiscuously. As they turned the corner of Pottawatamie street they met Farley's milk wagon. Farley's horse didn't propose to be outdone by any competitor and so he lit out and upset the second milk wagon. The fragments were finally gathered up and harmony has existed since in the milk business.

On Wednesday evening of last week the members of Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. and A. M., paid a fraternal visit to the Adrian Lodge and exemplified the work of the Master Masons' degree. The Adrian brethren complimented the work of our team very highly, and the Tecumseh brethren were profuse in their praises of Adrian hospitality. After the completion of the work a sumptuous banquet was served, which was followed by toasts and responses, W. M. Howell, of Adrian Lodge, acting as toastmaster. Over 200 fraters were present. Eighty-three Masons went down on the special train from Tecumseh, and seventeen went over the Wabash from Britton, making just one hundred visitors from the Tecumseh Lodge. Altogether it was a most enjoyable reunion and the members of both lodges will cherish pleasant remembrances of it for many a long day.

NOBLE'S REPORT.

Work of the Interior Department During 1891.

Extracts from the Sections Relating to Government Lands, the Indians, the Territories, the Census, Pensions and Other Topics.

A YEAR'S PROGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The secretary of the interior has submitted his annual report to the president. In a summary of its contents he gives this resume:

The general land office is nearly abreast of its work; the Indian bureau is accomplishing the rapid disintegration of the Indian reservations, the severance of tribal relations and the education of the Indian youth. The pension office is rapidly completing the allowance of all pensions legally possible under the laws, moving at the rate of about 30,000 a month; the census has been taken and its publications rapidly going on; the geological survey is selecting the reservoirs for the arid lands of the far west and southwest; the railroad bureau is making ready for the maturity of the debts due from the subsidized railroads, the Union Pacific and others; the bureau of education, besides having distributed the vast fund allowed the agricultural colleges for white and colored pupils in the different states, is engaged in new plans for the accumulation and distribution of information useful for the schools and their better management; and the patent office having celebrated its centennial is still advancing in the volume and variety of its investigations and patents.

The report notes: "The years of the present administration have been marked to a notable degree by the expansion of the public domain for private settlements." The history is given of the opening of the new Indian purchases in Oklahoma under the proclamation of September 22, when nearly 1,000,000 acres were taken by settlers between noon and dark; while 2,718 Indians were elevated to citizenship by taking allotments of 160 acres each. It is a significant fact that a shipment, by special train, of a cargo of wheat from the Oklahoma lands, first opened by proclamation on April 22, 1889, was received in August last at one of the Armour elevators in Chicago, and the population has already reached 80,000.

Over 16,000 Indians have already become citizens of the United States, and about 4,000 more by taking their allotments have signified their desire to become citizens. To these numbers should be added the 7,619 Indians in Oklahoma, who have taken or agreed to take allotments. A total of 27,619 Indians naturalized, and total of acres acquired for settlement of about 13,000,000 during the present administration alone.

The Indian population is reported as 250,000, exclusive of natives of Alaska. The number of Indian youth enrolled and the average attendance in the schools has increased. In 1888 the appropriation for support of Indian schools was $1,179,916; in 1891 $1,342,770, and for 1892 it is $2,291,650. The Indians, as a rule, have consented so readily to send their children to school that it was not found necessary immediately to enforce attendance.

The report notes the relief afforded by the act of June 27, 1890, to thousands of disabled veterans and their dependent relatives, who through lapse of time are not able to prove the origin of disability in the line of duty as required by prior enactments. It is shown that first payments have greatly decreased in amounts, that the allowance of original pensions will soon all be made, that there will then be a great decline in the sum necessary to pay pensions, and the lists will rapidly decline from death and other causes. There was 282,021 first payments made during the fiscal year, requiring $38,552,214.31, being less in amount by $69,502 than the 130,514 first payments of the previous year required. The average value of first payments in the fiscal year of 1890 was $485.71, while the average value in 1891 of first payments in all claims was $239.23, and first payments of claims under the act of June 27, 1890, was only $71.28. The present issue of certificates is about 30,000 per month, and it is thought that the pension bureau will be able to carefully adjudicate 350,000 claims during the present year. The work at this rate will allow all lawful pension claims within the next thirty months, and of course all first payments will then have been disposed of. This alone will cause a drop of $30,000,000 in the appropriation, and the list will thence on constantly diminish by natural causes. It is predicted that the pensions will when the highest point is reached not exceed very greatly the present sum, and be subject to a great decrease immediately after. The estimate for 1893 is $144,956,000.

The secretary expresses the belief that the eleventh census will stand as much fair and honest criticism as any work of the same magnitude heretofore done either at home or abroad. The announcement of the population, November 26, 1890, as 62,622,250, has not been changed, and upon that announcement the apportionment law was passed nearly two years sooner that at prior census periods. It is estimated that to complete the work will require a further appropriation of about $1,000,000.

The work of the patent office shows a slight falling off as compared with the previous fiscal year. The number of applications received was 43,616 as against 43,810 in 1890. A surplus of receipts over expenditures amounting to $157,291.99 was turned into the treasury to the credit of the patent fund.

In considering the territories the report says there has been an increase of 13,000 in the population of Arizona, making it about 70,000. In New Mexico it is claimed there are 153,070 persons, and the governor appeals for an enabling act to become a state. In Utah the population is estimated by the governor to be 226,000. The total assessed value of property, real and personal in 1891, was $121,146,643.35, an increase over the year before of $16,347,908.37, or 16.75 per cent. The secretary concurs in the recommendation of the government of Alaska that revision of the laws be made. The population of the territory is 30,000.

The Lifesaving Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The annual report of Gen. Kimball, of the lifesaving service, shows that during the past year the total value of property saved was $5,783,930; total value of property lost, $1,336,845; total number of persons saved, 3,441; total number of persons lost, 50. The cost of the service was $940,201.

FOR A BIG LABOR COMBINE.

Scheme to Federate All the Organizations in the United States.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—An important movement in the interest of organized labor has been inaugurated in this city. Friday a meeting was held at the Mercantile club between the president, directors and various committees of the club and a committee representing the different industrial organizations of the United States. The result of the meeting was that on February 22, 1892, there will meet in St. Louis in convention the representatives of the labor organizations of the country. Their purpose is to accomplish the federation of all the labor organizations in the union. The various organizations that will be represented are in part:

The Knights of Labor, the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, Trades and Labor union, the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union, Order of Railway Conductors, Order of Railway Trainmen, Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, Brotherhood of Railway Telegraphers, the Citizens' Alliance, the Grange, the National Alliance, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, Patrons of Industry, Farmers' and Laborers' union and the Federation of Labor.

KNIGHTS MUST WITHDRAW.

The Fight Against the Federation Is on at Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 27.—The executive board of district assembly No. 3, Knights of Labor, met Wednesday night, and after a short discussion passed a resolution that all members of the order be required to leave the unions connected with the American Federation of Labor. This is the first movement in the great war which the knights propose to wage against the federation. Master Workman Dempsey said that the district assembly was in better shape to-day than it has been for several years. He thought that the present is the best time to enforce the rule against the trades unionists.

Seven Hundred Imperialists Reported Killed in an Engagement with Rebels.

The victorious rebels are now marching upon Pekin, about 380 miles distant. The rebel army is growing rapidly, as it is receiving accessions from all sides. The intelligence that the rebels are marching to attack Pekin has caused the greatest excitement in that city.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

Destruction of a Large Grain Elevator and Contents at Escanaba, Mich.

ESCANABA, Mich., Nov. 30.—Fire started in the big grain elevator owned by the "Soo" road at this place at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, which, together with 150,000 bushels of grain, was quickly destroyed. The department was powerless and the flames communicated to the flour sheds, docks and coal pits. There were 10,000 barrels of flour in the sheds, and on the docks were 40,000 tons of coal owned by the Lehigh Valley and Pioneer companies, all of which were destroyed. The losses may exceed $250,000.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Seven Persons Killed in a Wreck Near Toledo, O.

A Flint & Pere Marquette Train Crashes Into the Rear of a Lake Shore Express—A New Engineer Is Blamed.

MANGLED IN A WRECK.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 30.—A passenger train on the Flint & Pere Marquette road crashed into the rear of the Lake Shore express here Saturday night, causing the death of seven persons. Three were killed outright and the others have since died of their injuries. In addition a score of persons were badly hurt. The dead are:

Mrs. Sarah McCoy, Ransom, Ill.; two children of Mrs. M. J. McDonald, of New York; H. Vaughn, San Francisco, Cal.; Thomas McQueen, Elkhart, Ind.; Miss Ella Myers, Cleveland, O.; Maude McKenzie, aged 12, Chicago.

The body of Miss Myers has already been sent to her home in Cleveland, but the others still lie at the undertaker's here.

The most seriously injured and in a precarious condition are:

Mrs. John Nelson, Toledo, O.; Warren L. Potter, Des Moines, Ia.; Mrs. J. A. McKenzie and daughter Pearl, of Chicago; James Ludwig, Peoria, Ill.; John Conway, Great Bourne, Mass.

The most of these are being cared for at St. Vincent's hospital.

The Pere Marquette train is due in Toledo at 4:53 and the Lake Shore follows at 4:55. From Air Line Junction the trains use the same track. Saturday night the Lake Shore was seven minutes late and the Pere Marquette train nine minutes late. The Lake Shore train pulled down from the junction ahead of the Marquette, though there was but little room between them. About 40 rods from the union depot is a tunnel 50 feet long. The Lake Shore had gone nearly through this with its seven heavy vestibuled parlor cars and the day coach on the rear when a freight ahead made it pull up. The brakeman ran back to give the signal to the Pere Marquette engineer but it was too late. The trains were too close.

The engineer and fireman of the oncoming train laid down in their cab and crashed through the dimly lighted tunnel into the rear of the Boston and Chicago special. The day coach was split in twain; the engine plowed through until the roof of the car made a cover for the engine clear up to the cab. The steam escaping in volumes hid the wreck from the view of the big crowd which had run out of the stores, saloons and houses on the high bank along which ran the street above. Miss Dolly Fisher, the daughter of Health Officer Fisher, maddened by the pain of the scalding steam, leaped from the window and was cut and slightly bruised.

The engineer of the Marquette train was a new man on the run. When found the lever was almost perpendicular and not reversed. The engineer could not be found, and the fireman, too, has not been seen since the wreck. An investigation will be made at once as to the cause of the wreck, and the Lake Shore officials will see if it is not possible to make the Pere Marquette people pay the damage incurred.

A CHILD STOLEN.

The Little Son of Banker Beals, of Kansas City, Kidnaped.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 28.—David T. Beals, the millionaire banker of this city whose 2-year-old boy was kidnaped Thursday night, paid $5,000 to the kidnapers yesterday for the return of the child. It is supposed that the masked man who secured the $5,000 ransom was Albert King, the principal accomplice in the crime. Mrs. King had been at work in Mr. Beals' family as a servant for a few weeks under the name of Lizzie Smith, and she was the one who took the child from the house.

RIO JANERIO, Nov. 30.—President Peixotto, through his Minister of war, has ordered the chiefs of the Brazilian army forces to return to Rio Grande do Sul. He has also issued a manifesto demanding that the revolution in that state be stopped at once. It is reported that the insurgents in Rio Grande do Sul are not inclined to comply with the demands. If the revolt is continued Peixotto will use all the power at his command to put it down.

40,000 Influenza Patients.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

Only One Place for Him.

Prominent Politician—I have done a good many favors for you, and now I'd like you to put a friend of mine on your paper?

Great Editor—Would he do for a reporter?

"No, he hasn't any legs."

"Um — might make an exchange editor, perhaps?"

"He couldn't read the newspapers. He's blind."

"Poor fellow! Can he hear?"

"No, deaf as a post. He is a fine writer, though, and he has a lively imagination."

"Good! I will appoint him London correspondent."—Good News.

A Matter of Money.

"I congratulate you, Julia, on your approaching marriage," said Mr. Hyatt, a prominent New York merchant, to his daughter.

"Marriage, pa? I don't know anything about it."

"I am telling you about it now," replied Mr. Hyatt.

"But who is the bridegroom, pa?" asked Julia.

"That's none of your business. You must not have so much curiosity. That is a business secret that cannot be divulged just now. I'll let you know who he is after the wedding is over."—Texas Siftings.

STILL IN IT.

Bill Guthrie—Say, mister, what's the name of this yer town?

Mr. Jackson Park—This is Chicago.

Bill Guthrie—Chicago yet? A man told me two days ago I was in Chicago, and I've been drivin' right along.

Mr. Jackson Park—That's right.—Puck.

Point for Wheelmen.

Wheelman—I believe I'll give up bicycling. I am as careful as can be, but every now and then some accident happens. This is the second time I have been arrested and fined for running into people.

Business Man—I'll tell you how to manage. Just you get a job as bill collector. Everybody'll dodge you then.—N. Y. Weekly.

Will Wind Him Around Some Way.

Mrs. Chinn—So you are going to marry Mr. James? Why, he is a regular reptile. Of course he is rich, but I don't see how you will ever get along with him.

Mrs. Trapier (by her third)—Oh, I will manage him somehow. I used to be a snake charmer before my marriage.—Brooklyn Citizen.

Too Much So.

Lucy—Clara Katchem has certainly the most engaging manners of any girl I know.

Harry (ruefully)—You're right, sis. I've just learned that I'm the fifth man she engaged herself to last summer.—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

The Difference Explained.

"I can't understand why you haven't as amiable a temper as James," said the proprietor to an office boy, referring to another.

"James never has to answer the telephone," replied the abused young man. —Detroit Free Press.

Another Case.

Frances—Is it that tiresome Mr. Cobalt, with his everlasting gabble on art?

Laura (hotly)—I think he amounts to a good deal! He is quite wedded to his art.

Frances — A case where marriage seems to be a failure.—Life.

A New Industry.

Prof. Wetthedust (a few years hence) —Good morning, Mr. Tiller. Anything in my line to-day? I have brought my balloons and explosives along.

Mr. Tiller (American farmer)—Well, I dunno. What's the price of rain now? —N. Y. Weekly.

An Artful Maid.

Mother—Why, Rosalie, I thought you were going driving with Mr. de Riche. What are you wearing black for?

Rosalie—You know the poor fellow is in mourning for his wife, and I want to show my sympathy.—Judge.

Unable to Prove It.

"You are a grasping man," said Sumway to a creditor.

"I don't know how you know that," replied the latter. "You never gave me a chance to grasp the money that you owe me."—Detroit Free Press.

Very Mean.

"Gould is awfully mean with his autograph," said Bobbie. "I sent him a blank check and asked him to write his name at the bottom of it, and do you know he wouldn't do it."—Brooklyn Life.

Look Out for the Farmer.

Tough—I tried the bunco game on a Kansas farmer yesterday.

Another Tough—How did you come out?

Tough—He got my dollar and a half. —Judge.

Of Course Not.

She—Why do they always refer to music as a woman?

He—Well, you couldn't conceive of music as existing in silence, could you? —Life.

In the Restaurant.

Mr. Feeder—What's that awful thumping out there?

Waiter—Dat's de cook. Yo' ordered a tenderl in steak, didn't yo', sah?—Puck.

A Few Opening Remarks.

He was in the pantry trying to open a can of tomatoes, and making a good deal of unnecessary noise about it.

"What in the world is the matter?" demanded his wife from the kitchen. "What are you trying to open that can of tomatoes with?"

"Can opener, of course," he growled back. "Do you suppose I was trying to open it with my teeth?"

"No; I thought, perhaps, judging from your language, you were trying to open it with prayer."—Texas Siftings.

Ye Modern Journal.

City Editor—You may all take a vacation for a few days.

Reporter—What's the matter?

"I presume you noticed that we printed an exclusive bit of news to-day —big beat on the other papers."?

"Yes."

"Well, we won't have any more room for news for several days. That beat is in the way. The editors will need all our space to blow about it."—N. Y. Weekly.

Mysteries of Navigation.

Sweet Girl (in a rowboat)—What is this place in the back of the boat for?

Nice Young Man—That is to put an oar in when you want to scull the boat. Rowing requires both oars, one on each side; but in sculling one oar only is used. This is placed at the back and worked with one hand.

Sweet Girl (after meditation)—I wish you would try sculling awhile.—Good News.

A Testimonial for Matrimony.

Jaylawn—How long has that young Mrs. Dodson's husband been dead?

Ireson—About six months.

"She was extravagant in her devotion to him, wasn't she?"

"Very. She is going to marry again next month as a delicate compliment to his memory."—Kate Field's Washington.

One for the Doctor.

Skeptical Caller—Doctor, can you cure me of the belief that I have these warts on my hands?

Faith Doctor (inspecting them)—Not until I can cure myself of the belief that your hands need soap worse than they do medical treatment. Good morning. This is my busy day.—Chicago Tribune.

A Sad End.

"How's that black and tan dog of yours?"

"Dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes. Swallowed a bunch of watch keys and they wound him up."—Brooklyn Life.

The Humblest May Follow.

Miss Wobbleton—How beautiful, professor, it would be to mold one's life, however imperfectly, after the ideas and practice of Emerson!

Prof. Grout—Well, you can make a start by eating pie!—Life.

The Modern Way.

Cholly—I—I—I—called to ahsk—er—er—

Her Papa—Yes, yes; you may have her! Take my blessing!! This is my busy day!!! Get out!!!!—Puck.

An Embarrassing Question.

He—My lips never uttered a word of love to any woman before.

She—How did you manage—speak through your nose?—Judge.

FIVE MILES FROM A SALOON.

Farmer Whiffletry—Hi, there! What are you doin' here?

Tommy Towcan—Ah, sir, I'm spoiling a most beautiful thirst!—Puck.

Their Respective Values.

Mrs. Meddergrass—Young Sassafras has run off with our daughter, Jerusha.

Meddergrass—Oh, he can have her.

"And he took the sorrel mare."

"What's that? Get me my gun! I'll go after the scoundrel right away!"—Epoch.

An Unexpected Answer.

"Our neighbor, Mrs. Comfort," said Mr. Jones, "is greatly praised by her husband for her economical management of her household."

"I don't blame her for being economical," replied Mrs. Jones, tartly; "she has plenty to be economical with."—Cape Cod Item.

At the Ball.

"What do you mean, sir, by your insolence?"

"What insolence are you talking about?"

"Your insolence, sir, in permitting my daughter to cast loving glances at you."—Texas Siftings.

Corroboration.

"Lighthouses are very expensive," remarked Mrs. Dimling, looking up from a government report.

"Yes, any theatrical manager will tell you that," replied her husband.—Detroit Free Press.

Incontrovertible.

Mamma—You seem to be in a hurry.

Little Frances — Yes ma'am; if I hadn't tum so fast I wouldn't det here so soon!—Puck.

The Only Way.

"I wonder if a man could see Europe on two dollars a day?"

"He could if he had a rich wife."—Life.

Bank Director—I am surprised, sir, to learn that you drop into our bank every day and whisper tips to our cashier. Don't you know the information must be a great temptation to him to use the bank funds to speculate with?

Wealthy Broker—Yes.

"And yet you are a heavy stockholder in our bank."

"Just so."

"Then, in the name of common sense, what's your motive?"

"Well, the fact is I don't know whether your cashier is honest or not; but if he isn't honest, and if he does use the bank funds to speculate with, I want him to keep on the right side of the market. See?"—N. Y. Weekly.

For Callers.

"Mr. Upholsterer, I would like to buy a nice reception chair. Something new."

"We have just the thing, madame. Here it is. Made especially for our trade. Take a seat on it."

"Dear me! Why, this chair is awful! I couldn't sit on it five minutes. I never sat on such an uncomfortable thing in my life!"

"Exactly, madam. That is just the idea. You see, it is made for callers."—Harper's Bazar.

A Good Reason.

At a social gathering a widow did not engage in tripping the light fantastic toe. A gentleman approached her and asked:

"Are you going to dance this evening?"

"Not until after midnight."

"Why not before?"

"Because to-day is the anniversary of my second husband's death."—Texas Siftings.

Chollie—Ya-as. All of ouah fellahs use that fawm of pwoposal, dont'cherknow.—Indianapolis Journal.

Gambling Item.

First Police Captain—I am going to put a stop to this gambling business in my precinct.

Second Police Captain—A good idea. It is a disgrace to the city, but I don't think you can stop it.

"I'll bet a hundred, I can."

"I'll go you, old man."—Texas Siftings.

Power of Will.

Expectant Nephew—How is my rich uncle to day?

Family Doctor—Much better. His will keeps him alive.

Nephew (sadly)—I'm afraid that's so. He made his will in my favor twenty years ago, and I don't believe he'll die while that will is in existence.—Good News.

FOOTSTEPS.

Listen, listen for the footstep, as it comes along the way,
Making for mine ear a sweeter theme than the rounding
Of the rivlet, when the snow-clads fade from winter's dreary form,
Or the sunshine of the morning wakes my life to new-born grace;
So I listen for the coming of the footsteps dear to me,
Listen, listen, listen, listen till the dearer face I see.

Listen I for step of lover, listen now for step of child,
Listen for the friendly neighbor, for the mother's step so mild;
For the father's proud and manly; for the postman's coming tread;
Shall I ever, ever listen for a step I fear or dread?
Now they bring me life and comfort, now they bring me joy and love,
And I listen, listen, listen for the steps of those I love.

Could they know how oft, they'd hasten toward the listening ear I lend
To the footsteps on the pavement that unwelcome measure send;
For we only find a pleasure when we listen to our own,
And the rest are only footsteps treading on unyielding stone;
But, our own, ah! light as feather touch they some life, that doth start
Eagerly to listen, listen, with a welcome in the heart.

A "BLASTED FOOL."

Thankful That He Was Told So and Made to See It.

"Now, don't go, Wilson, please don't. You know how much I have done for you, and your father has tried hard, too."

"Oh, you've done enough," returned the young man, petulantly; "but it's no use talking, mother, I'm off this time, sure. I'm tired to death of this humdrum life. I've got to get out and see the world and be somebody," and he stamped on the kitchen floor as he said it. "I don't want to be a farmer, and there's no use trying to force me to it. Now, mother, you needn't cry. It won't do any good. I'm going, and I'll get a good chance to learn and soon be a good engineer, and I'll run down to see you often," he added as he glanced at his mother's face.

"You may not live to see me even once more. You don't think of the dangers." "There, now, mother, you needn't read that chapter to me again. I know it all by heart. Heard it till I'm sick of it. I'm not certain I'll live always, of course, but don't get scared before you're hurt. I can't be killed but once, even if the worst comes. Good-by!" and he hurriedly kissed his mother and turned from her sorrowful face to more attractive scenes. Mrs. Stuart went about her work that forenoon with many a sigh. Her heart was very heavy, and at times the scalding tears flowed in spite of her efforts to restrain them, and she could not work. At dinner she broke down entirely, and as soon as the others had begun eating, left the room.

"I s'pose Wilson's been talkin' about bein' engineer again, has he?" asked Mr. Stuart, half an hour later.

"It's more than talk this time, father, he's gone."

"Gone where?"

"Why, gone to D—— to begin."

"Tut, tut! He can't run an engine! Who'd give him an engine to run? He didn't tell me anything about it this morning. You needn't be scared. He's just gone to town and will be back some time in the night, like common."

"No, father, he's gone. Didn't he see you before he left? Oh dear! I fixed his clothes, but he wouldn't take anything hardly," and then the poor woman broke out afresh.

"Well, well," said Stuart, testily, "if that's the way he's goin' to act after all's been done for him, let him go." He wanted to say more, but, out of deference to his wife's feelings, restrained himself. "He'll be back in the mornin', though, you'll see," and he went to his work.

That was a long afternoon at the farm. The next day came, and the next, and dragged their weary hours away, and Mr. Stuart was obliged to give it up. His boy was gone.

Three days later two men walked leisurely along the streets of a large city. They were just leaving one of the great railway centers, and were talking earnestly. One of them, of massive build, bright, piercing eyes and resolute manner, appeared to lead the conversation. "Yes," he said, "it's lucky for you that you run across me or you wouldn't have got to see what you've seen this mornin'. By yerself, now, ye wouldn't have found out much in the shops nur round houses, and like as not wouldn't have been seen at all in the offices."

"I'm ever so much obliged to you for your kindness in going with me," replied the other. "I shall never forget the interest you have taken in me, and the freedom with which you answered my questions, and showed me the engines, and even allowed me to ride a short distance with you on your 'Old Pet.' I'm sorry, though, that we can't see Mr. Rothermell right now," and the speaker faced about and stood looking at the shops and offices from which they had come, and listened to the ringing of bells and the screaming of whistles in the distance. He was fascinated with the scene before him, and proud of the opportunity which the friendship of his companion had afforded to inspect in detail the works upon which he looked. So frank had been the manner of his new friend during the past thirty-six hours which they had been together, and so entertainingly had he recited to him many of his experiences on the road, in addition to the readiness with which he showed him the company's works and introduced him to the men, that the young man's confidence was completely won.

"It will be all right, though, I am sure, from what you say," he went on, "and I can go on with you as soon as there is a vacancy. I hope that won't be long, for I'm on expenses and must find some other work until then;" and he turned to follow his friend who led the way into a small park where the two were soon seated. The older man seemed thoughtful awhile and then turning resolutely to the other asked:

"What business did ye foller, Mr. Stuart, when ye was at home?"

The young man colored as he answered, reluctantly: "I was not engaged in business. I—I was on a farm."

"So? Is yer father a farmer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Own a farm, does he?"

"Yes, sir."

"A good one?"

"Well, I don't know of many that are better."

"How many children does he have?"

"Three."

"You're the oldest?"

"No, sir, I have a married sister older than myself, and a little brother."

"Ye'll 'scuse me askin' so much, Mr. Stuart, when ye remember that I've been answerin' yer questions fer two days."

"Oh, certainly."

"How much of a farm does yer father have?"

"A hundred and fifty acres."

"Takes lot of interest in the farm, don't the old gentleman?"

"Well, I should say."

"Works hard airly and late?"

"Yes, sir, but not like he did before he made the last payment. Still he works hard enough."

"Does yer brother-in-law live on the farm?"

"He lives on a little place adjoining, and works part of the farm."

"Is there land enough fer all ye to work?"

"Well, nearly. Plenty to rent, though, near by."

The old man's eyes flashed as he brought his powerful fist down on the seat they occupied, and exclaimed: "Stuart, yer a blasted fool!"

"What on earth do you mean?" asked the young man, springing up.

"Don't be scart. We're good friends, ye know. Set down an' I'll tell ye what I mean. Mr. Stuart, I've been about the country a good deal. I'm acquainted with men of all professions and no professions. I like my work as well as any man that lives, but I tell ye yer goin' to head in on a blind sidin' when ye leave that farm to be an engineer. Don't ye tell me farmin's not a business. It's the oldest business on the face of the airth. It's independent. Ye don't know why I'm off these two days, do ye? It's because there's three men fer every place on the road, and we can't work all the time. Ye wouldn't stand it fer somebody to come to ye and say: 'Lay off; we're on a strike; somebody's got a grudge and ye've got to quit awhile to spite some feller.' Stuart, I have to do that, fer we all stick together, ye know. And ye want to leave a good farm, and friends, and independence; and yer father, who's worked and toiled fer that homestead an' jist got it ready for ye to take holt and make money right; and yer mother, who's cryin' her eyes out this minute fer the sight of ye; and ye want to come here and be a servant. What in thunder d'ye mean? Hain't ye got a bit of sense? I tell ye ye're a blasted fool! There, I don't mean to be rough on ye, boy. I can git ye a place on the road and I'll do a man's part by ye, fer ye've got pluck, ef ye air on the wrong track. But I say fer yer own good, Stuart, go back to that farm an' be the best farmer in the country. Ye can do it, an', my word fer it, ye'll never regret it."

"Mother," said Wilson Stuart as they sat in their pleasant home a year later, "I have always been glad that 'Honest Tom,' the engineer, told me that I was a fool and made me see it."

A Sensible Arrangement.

An Englishman who, after grumbling about his native country for more than half a lifetime, at last made up his mind to emigrate to New Zealand, was asked why he chose that far away part of the world for a place of residence.

"Why," said he, "it is because nature has made a much better arrangement of the seasons there than it has here."

"What do you mean?"

"What do I mean? Why, it's a great mistake of nature, as anyone must see, to have the cold weather come in the winter and hot weather in the summer. How delicious it must be to have it hot in December, now, which is the cold, freezing season, and what a blessing to get bracing cold in July when everybody needs it! Now, that's the way they have it in New Zealand, and that's what I call a sensible arrangement of the seasons!"—Youth's Companion.

A Sailor's Autograph Album.

"You wear a wooden leg, Billie?"

Old Billie sat in a sailor's saloon on the east side yesterday afternoon.

"That's what."

"Where did you get it?"

"In the West Indies, in '66—pirates."

"You love New York?"

"Depends. Say, this is the most wonderful wooden leg in the world."

"Looks as if it had seen service."

"Has. But that ain't it. All my old pals has carved their names on Billie's old wooden leg. See here. Jim Scott—he's dead these ten years; Jack Linn—Jack died in the African slave trade; Tom, Billie Bounce, Harry, Sam Post, Charlie Buzz an' old Grimes an' Hawksley an' Henshaw. All my old mates. Say, ain't that grand? I wouldn't sell this here old wooden leg for a month's advance. It's the grandest thing in New York to-day."—N. Y. World.

She Remembered.

A city-bred youth was escorting a pretty little country girl, and was evidently proud of her in spite of a shade of embarrassment which now and then came over him at some slight outbreak of verdancy on her part.

As the car passed the Tombs, she cried out enthusiastically:

"Oh, there is that lovely museum I read about. So they keep it open on Sundays, do they?"

"Yes," replied the young man, dryly, "they keep it open on Sundays."

"I remember you wrote and told me you were there twice."

The passengers were all well-bred New York people, and of course did not laugh, but some of them smiled.—N. Y. World

OBITUARY.

Mrs. John J. Adam died at her home near Onsted, Sunday, Nov. 22d. Her long residence in Tecumseh had endeared her to many friends, who will learn of her demise with sincere regret.

The deceased was third daughter of the late Deacon William Bradley, of Franklin. She was born at Barre, Orleans county, N. Y., March 8, 1822. While she was in the freshness of maidenhood her father moved to this state, and she subsequently became the wife of Mr. John F. Wimple, one of the early pioneers of Cambridge, and a man well known and much esteemed throughout this county. The death of Mr. Wimple occurred in 1873, and one year later she united her life and fortune with the Hon. John J. Adam, of Tecumseh.

Since the demise of Mr. Adam, the deceased has made her home in this township, upon a portion of her original homestead, living in the home of her eldest daughter. Her entire life has been characterized by purely conscientious principles, and her friends were legion. Everyone loved "Aunt Cornelia."

Three children survive her, William R. Wimple and Mrs. Josephine Kinney, of Cambridge, and Mrs. Frank Chaffee, of Adrian.

She has been a consistent member of the F. W. Church of Cambridge, since its organization in 1861, and so zealous was she in its behalf that she did not even withold her support during the years of her non-residence; neither would she consent to relinquish her membership, choosing to be identified with friends whose early associations she had learned to so fondly cherish.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. P. Van Wormer at 1 o'clock p. m. Tuesday, Nov. 24th, at the Baptist church, and the remains were laid beside the companion of her early years, with whom she so faithfully struggled through the years of hard labor and privation incident to pioneer life.

The closing meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church, for the year 1891 will be held in the lecture room next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. A full and interesting account of the Woman's Synodical Missionary meeting at Adrian last April, will be given by Mrs. E. B. Wood. Members and others are invited to come.

The following officers were elected in J. D. Shull, Camp, S. of V.

Capt—W. J. Ingersol.
1st. Lieut—Jno. L. Brown,
2d " Elmer Harris.
Camp Council—J. E. Gray, Jno B. Smith, C. Stevenson.
Del. Div. Encamp.—H. S. Waring.
Alternate—Acil Howe.

Michigan has been invited to send 1000 state troops to participate in the opening of the World's Fair. This quota will take about four companies from each regiment. Co. C. ought to have a place in the ranks at that time. With the proper encouragement and assistance on the part of our citizens they will be able to participate in the grand opening.

THE SOMA PLANT.

In the Aryan religion the chief offering to the gods was the fomented juice of the Soma or Moon plant, which, being a strong drink, gave new excitement to those who partook of it, and was believed to impart power to the gods. It was believed, moreover, that it wrought miracles, and for this reason, perhaps, it afterwards became the chief god of the Hindus. In a vedic hsmn the worshiper says:

"We've quaffed the Soma, bright
And are immortal grown;
We've entered into light,
And all the gods have known.
What mortal now can harm,
Or foeman vex us more?
Through thee beyond alarm,
Immortal God! we soar.

No such power as this is attributed to any plant at the present time, and yet many of the cures performed by S. S. S. a purely vegetable remedy, seem almost to border on the miraculous. In contagious blood poison, scrofula, skin diseases, some forms of cancer, etc., it is the remedy par excellence.

A POPULAR FAMILY.

JENNIE: "How is it, Kate, that you always seem to 'catch on' to the last new thing? Do what I may, you always seem to get ahead of me."

KATE: "I don't know; I certainly do not make any exertion in that direction."

JENNIE: "Well, during the last few months, for example, you have taken up painting, without any teacher; you came to the rescue when Miss Lafarge deserted her Delsarte class so suddenly, and certainly we are all improving in grace under your instruction; I heard you telling Tommy Eames last evening how his club made mistakes in playing baseball; you seem to be up on all the latest 'fads,' and know just what to do under all circumstances; you entertain beautifully; and in the last month you have improved so in health, owing, you tell me, to your physical culture exercises. Where do you get all of your information from in this little out-of-the way place?—for you never go to the city."

KATE: "Why, Jennie, you will make me vain. I have only one source of information, but it is surprising how it meets all wants. I very seldom hear of anything new but what the next few days bring me full information on the subject. Magic? No! Magazine! And a great treasure it is to us all, for it really furnishes the reading for the whole household; father has given up his magazine that he has taken for years, as he says this one gives more and better information on the subjects of the day; and mother says that it is that that makes her such a famous housekeeper. In fact, we all agree that it is the only really FAMILY magazine published, as we have sent for samples of all of them, and find that one is all for men, another all for women, and another for children only, while this one suits every one of us; so we only need to take one instead of several, and that is where the economy comes in, for it is only $2.00 a year. Perhaps you think I am too lavish in my praise; but I will let you see ours, or, better still, send 10 cents to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th Street, New York, for a sample copy, and I shall always consider that I have done you a great favor; and may be you will be cutting us out, as you say we have the reputation of being the best informed family in town. If that be so, it is Demorest's Family Magazine that does it."

BRITTON BUDGET.

Miss Jennie Saxton returned to her home last week.

Miss Mabel VanDeventer, of Dundee, is visiting at L. A. Brown's.

Miss Lotta Shaver, of Canada, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Will Osgood.

Will Osgood has a wheel kind of broncho, but he can get there all the same.

Miss Eldora Gregory is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Norman Post.

John Beasley fell downstairs in his new house the other day, nearly breaking his nose.

Jim Haight has an auction the 15th preparatory to engaging in the hardware business.

The New England supper at the hotel was well attended, the society clearing about $25.

Miss Luella Haynes left for Spring Arbor Monday, where she expects to attend school.

An early Christmas at our jeweler Brunk's in the form of a new boy. All prospering finely.

Our new meat market proprietor has taken in a partner. Meat and notions will be the bill of fare hereafter.

Meat has taken a drop indeed. Best steak only 10c. Another market in town in the Daykin block is the cause of the drop, we hear.

We welcome James Haight among our business men and believe he will make a valuable addition to our list of enterprising merchants.

Don't forget the pound social next Tuesday evening, the 15th. The Maccabees invite one and all to come and enjoy a good time and lots of fun.

The annual donation for the benefit of Rev. James Wright will be given at the Christian church, Britton, Thursday evening, Dec. 17th. A cordial invitation is given to all. By order of Com.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather the "Turn of the Tide" was not as much of a success financially as usual, but notwithstanding all this the members of the Club did themselves much credit.

Ezra Sink invites everybody to call and examine his stock of millinery and holiday novelties. He has a fine assortment of goods for Christmas presents and they will be sold at rock-bottom prices.

Jim Haight and Joseph Daykin have traded—Daykin his house and lot in town for Jim's farm. Now Jim is coming to town and we understand is to enter the hardware business, having bought out Osgood Bros.

While baling hay for Irve Osborne on the prairie the other day, Charlie Covell accidentally forked Solomon Smith in the face, nearly putting out the right eye. Mr. Smith had to quit work but is doing as well as could be expected.

David Weigh, section foreman of the Britton section of the Wabash railroad, won the 2nd prize of $25 awarded to the foreman who keeps his section in the best shape. Dave is a hustler, as all can testify who have noticed the manner in which he has improved the appearance of the depot grounds.

Mike Bauchman started for his father's home Sunday morning horseback, but when in front of the hardware store the horse became frightened and threw him off on the frozen ground, cutting quite a gash in his chin. He was carried into Brown's store in an insensible condition. Dr. Hendershot was summoned but upon examination found no bones to be broken and in a few moments succeeded in restoring our friend to consciousness.

The long talked of Library and Reading Room Association was organized last Monday evening with the following officers and soliciting committee:

President—Willis J. Clark.
Sec.—E. W. Lenardson.
Vice Pres.—W. R. Osgood.
Treas.—W. J. Clark.
Board of Directors—Chas. Gripton, M. L. Gillen, Willis J. Helm.
Soliciting Committee—John Britton, W. J. Clark, E. W. Lenardson, Wm. Britton, W. R. Osgood, D. R. Wiggins, Ezra Sink.

Next regular meeting Monday, Dec, 21st. Let all be present.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

Examinations and extra exercises at school Friday. Patrons invited.

Homer Brazee, of the Lake mills, has secured a lucrative position in a mill near Lansing.

A social gathering of his friends was held at the residence of J. Marsh on the eve of his departure.

John Brighton, one of the most respected Irish citizens of the township, died Friday. Funeral was held Sunday, at the Catholic church.

The December Farmers' Club met at S. Aten's Saturday. In addition to the regular program the temperance question was discussed. The election of officers will occur at the next meeting.

The "untamed eloquence" of the Phœnix Club will wrestle with the sword and plow question at the Springville opera house Saturday evening, Dec. 12th. It is presumed that discussions more akin to the present century would be better appreciated by the public.

CAN YOU EAT

Heartily, with relish, and without distress afterward? If not, we recommend to you Hood's Sarsaparilla, which creates a good appetite and so invigorates the stomach and bowels that the food is properly digested and all its nutriment assimilated.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

S. C. Stacy was in the village Tuesday.

I. T. Bush and wife called on friends in Dundee Tuesday.

Elder Yager was in Hilledale the first of the week.

It has been decided to give a Sunday School concert on Christmas eve.

Miss Eva Doty, of Holloway, spent Sunday at her aunt's, Mrs. Hall's.

Mrs. David McNair visited friends in the village Wednesday of last week.

The first quarterly meeting of the present Conference year will be held Sunday, Dec. 20th.

Eugene and Grace Harrington, of Blissfield, were the guests of Elder Yager and family Sunday.

I. T. Bush, of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived Saturday night for a few days' stay, to return with his wife.

W. P. Cadmus shipped his household goods to Harvey Monday. Eugene Pilbeam went to look after them.

Grandma Loree, who has been spending some time with her son, Dr. Loree, left Monday night for Fenwick to spend the winter with her son, John Loree.

There were several errors in our letter last week. Some were our fault and others those of the proof reader. Mr. Shephard is from Mason, instead of Macon, and it was Waring & Eaton, instead of Waring & Loree, who shipped their potatoes to Harvey.

Those who attended the Musin Concert last winter will have another opportunity next Saturday evening of hearing it again by attending the third entertainment of the course at Tecumseh. Admission, 50c.; reserved seats at Adamson's for 10c.

A special meeting of the Library Association will be held in the Library parlors on Saturday, Dec. 12th, at 2:30 p. m., for the election of officers for the ensuing year. It is earnestly hoped that every member who feels an interest in the association will be present. By order of President.

There was a good attendance at the corn social given by the Epworth League at the church last week, and a very pleasant evening was spent by all. The room was decorated with cornstalks, ears of corn and husks. On one table was a cabin, made of cornstalks and husks, and on the other was a church made of husks. The rooms presented a very neat appearance. The supper was splendid. The society took in a little over $12.

RAISIN RACKET.

The Hicks brothers, from Brighton, Mich., are visiting relatives in the vicinity.

The W. C. T. U. held their meeting this month at the home of Mrs. J. H. Green. About forty were present and a good time was enjoyed by all.

Two of Tecumseh's fancy quail shooters are out on bail at Adrian for trial. Maybe the farmers can have their own quail and maybe not. Time will tell.

Bret Simonds seems to be called on to have more than his share of bad luck. Not quite two years ago he broke his leg very badly by being thrown from a load of wood, and last week Friday, while hunting in company with Art and Joe Stretch, on the river flats, in climbing over a log his gun accidentally went off, the charge going through his left arm at the wrist. They were about three-quarters of a mile from T. I. Sutton's house, to which he walked. He showed great nerve in enduring the pain, which must have been great. Drs. Catlin and Tefft were telephoned for and were soon on hand. They at once decided that his hand must be taken off. He was taken at once to his father's house and the operation performed and at last reports is getting along very nicely. He had been working for Henry Bowen, Jr. in the ice business at Adrian the last two years, and was at home at the time, taking a little vacation. Bret has a great many friends wherever he is known, and they all sympathize with him on account of his sad accident.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, effective, but do not cause pain or gripe. Be sure to get Hood's.

MACON MUSIC.

S. Travis has been under the weather for the past two weeks.

Frank Thomas has moved his family into Ezra Betzer's house.

Albert Maples, after an illness of several weeks, died at his home Nov. 30th, 1891.

Wesley Betzer has been up north visiting his folks and hunting for the last two weeks.

A sleigh-load of G. A. R.'s went to Tecumseh Monday night to attend the election of officers.

Lew Seely thought that Spencer Morgan needed a new hat so he bought him one. We wonder what for?

J. B. Coller informs us that he is going to Tecumseh next week to exhibit his soap. Let everyone be ready to buy as it is a prime article.

John Day is canvassing for three books and the "Lord's Prayer." All those that don't know it had better buy, as he sells them cheap.

Augustus and Herring have bought of J. B. Coller the right to sell his soap in Washtenaw Co. They report a big trade. People know when they see a good thing.

The box social at J. B. Coller's was not very largely attended, on account of the weather, but the few who did attend say they had a good time. The sale of boxes amounted to $6.75.

A boy from South Macon drank a little too much cider Friday night and the consequence was a tip-over which broke the buggy and bruised the horse. He had better have been home with his ma.

A "milliner) ocial" will be held at Grange Hall by the young people of South Macon, Friday evening, Dec. 18. The ladies are requested to bring a hat and trimmings, which will be purchased and trimmed by the gentlemen, for the ladies to adorn themselves at the supper table. All are cordially invited to come and take part. Chicken pie will be the principal attraction of the supper. Wanted: All ladies who wish to have hats trimmed in the latest style to bring hats and trimmings to the millinery social Friday evening.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Two more new students this week.

Leon Love is not in school this week on account of duties at home.

Miss Mary Allen was called home to Ypsilanti last week Friday on account of the illness of her mother.

The prayer meetings led by Rev. Mott, at this place last week, were carried on with considerable interest.

Dan Shourds, the old fireman at this place, left for California Thursday, where has a position in a lumber yard.

The box social at Mr. Luther's last Saturday evening was a success. Everyone went home feeling that they had had a good time.

A very interesting sight was viewed through the telescope last Monday evening by the students in astronomy. The position of Jupiter as regards the earth and sun was such that when there was a transit of one of Jupiter's moons its shadow could be distinctly seen upon the planet's face, and even after the moon had passed away a considerable distance from between us and the planet.

THE MACON GRANGE.

Macon Grange will hold a special meeting to do regular work on Saturday, Dec. 19th, at one o'clock, p. m. This being the last meeting of the year, in addition to other work will be the election of officers. Every member is especially urged to be present. There are several reasons why this request is made. Some members of the Grange have been in the habit of paying their dues and neglecting to get their receipt for the same. Others have been paying dues with their stock until there is a large number of receipts in the Secretary's hands. Now let all come out and attend to this important matter, and those holding certificates of stock will please bring them along, so that the amount of their receipts may be endorsed thereon. We trust the members will see the necessity and feel it to be their duty to attend this meeting in order to get this matter settled up and to select a good set of officers for the ensuing year. This being done we as a Grange will be able to assist in the great work of education that is being carried on by the various Farmers' organizations.

JACK AND JILL.—There are various accounts as to how the man got into the moon. A common one with us is that he was banished for having been detected by Moses in the act of gathering sticks on the Sabbath. In German legend he committed the same offence, and was given the alternative of being scorched in the sun or frozen in the moon. In Icelandic myth the man becomes the two children familiarly known as Jack and Jill, who were kidnapped by the moon. There we see them stand with bucket or pole across their shoulders, falling away, one after the other, as the moon wanes. And so it is that

"Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after."

Now, just as sure as the moon wanes, just so sure does disease wane under the influence of S. S. S. The difference being, however, that Jack and Jill never go up the hill any more in the latter case, the eradication of disease by this medicine being complete and permanent.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary E. Kennedy, whose funeral took place from her late residence in Tecumseh last Monday, was for the last eighteen years a resident of this village. She was well known in our community as one of our most esteemed citizens. It seems fitting therefore that a more than passing notice should be taken of the deceased who lived so many years in our midst.

Mary E. Gregory—her maiden name—was born in Danbury, Conn. July 31st, 1820. At 14 years of age, in company with her widowed mother and an older brother, she came to Jonesville, Mich., where in A. D. 1855 she was married to Mr. James Kennedy. For a brief period they lived in Hanover, Mich., but in the same year of their marriage they removed from there and came to Tecumseh, where in its immediate vicinity he purchased a farm in the township of Raisin and made that their home for some sixteen years, and was well known as a hard-working, intelligent and successful farmer. Eighteen years ago Mr. Kennedy bought the property in this village, into which he removed his family, and which was his home at the time of his death, and where his wife breathed her last breath Friday, Nov. 27th. Since her husband's death Mrs. Kennedy has shared the homestead with her son Arthur and his family, who were thus ready to help in time of need. More than a year ago Mrs. Kennedy suffered severely from an attack of LaGrippe, from which she never fully recovered; but the immediate cause of death was a stroke of Apoplexy soon followed by cerebral meningitis which ended her mortal life. Mrs. Kennedy will long be remembered by friends and neighbors greatly attached to her for constant acts of kindness, as well as for her remarkable good judgment and advice freely and kindly given when desired. A good mother, a faithful wife, a devoted Christian woman has been taken to her reward. As a constant and faithful communicant in the Episcopal church her loss will be felt deeply among its members. The services for the burial of the dead was read by her pastor, the Rev. J. Phelps, and with the last solemn rites of her church her precious body was committed to the earth to wait in hope the last Great Day.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as I ever did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 10, 1891.

President Harrison has evidently succeeded in one thing. He has squelched son Russell. For this he is entitled to the thanks of a grateful people.

After a long and hot contest, Representative Chas. F. Crisp, of Georgia, was nominated for Speaker on Monday last. He received on the thirtieth and last ballot 119 votes to 104 cast for Roger Q. Mills.

John Bright once spoke of Cyrus W. Field as the Columbus of modern times who, by the Atlantic cable, had moored the new world alongside the old. What a melancholy ending of a useful and brilliant career.

The question whether the McKinley bill is a high or low tariff depends altogether upon the situation of the person who asks it. Sixty per cent. may be considered a very moderate duty to the man who pockets it, but it is sky-high to the poor victim who pays it.

The Kansas City Times says: "A party of explorers have found a large forest of India-rubber trees in the valley of Orinoco. This country would better go wet than to admit that rubber free unless the valley of the Orinoco will eat our hams. Ask Blaine.

The Davenport (Iowa) Democrat wrote letters of inquiry to members of congress requesting their presidential preferences. One hundred congressmen responded, all naming Cleveland and Boies. That combination appears to be popular in all parts of the country.

Collector Beard says that reciprocity is not free trade, but "a mutual trade which is a mutual benefit to the parties exchanging." This may be a very plain distinction to a protectionist, but to an ordinary free trader it looks like the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee.

The sub-treasury scheme seems likely to split the Alliance movement in the South and West. The more the subject is investigated the more impracticable it appears. If the People's Party should incorporate this plank in their platform it would neutralize most of the good effects which have resulted from the movement hitherto.

The Republican leaders who are instigating a scheme to deprive Senator Brice of his seat have very short memories. They have apparently forgotten the carpet bag era after the war, when most of the Southern States were represented in the U. S. Senate by Northern men, who never claimed a permanent residence in the South.

When the Democrats stood together they elected Tilden, and when they stood together again they elected Cleveland, says the Galveston News. That tells the whole story. If they will stand together on the tariff question next year and not dissipate their strength fighting among themselves over side issues, they will elect their ticket in 1892.

In the interest of the Persian participation in the Exposition, the Persian government has lifted the export duty on all goods which will be sent to the World's Fair from Persia, and it has also lifted the import duty on all goods which will be purchased at the World's Fair and brought into Persia. These concessions have greatly increased the interest taken in the World's Fair in Persia." The above little news item which is going the rounds of the press contains a good tariff sermon. Wouldn't it be a good thing for our Persian trade if this "lifting" of duties could be made mutual and permanent?

The Pullman Car company now proposes to benefit by the drawback clause in the McKinley bill. As a large amount of the material employed in the manufacture of sleeping-cars is imported the company has made a demand for the return of the duties paid upon such material used in cars sent abroad. Incidents of this nature must tend to confuse trusting disciples of McKinley, who hold with him that the tariff is a tax paid by the foreigner. If it be true that those duties were paid by the foreigners from whom the Pullman company bought its material, why should the rebate be paid to the company?—Chicago Times.

Gov. Russell's Opinion.

One of the clearest expositions of political sentiment in the east is given by Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts, in a leading paper in the December Forum. Under the caption, "Significance of the Massachusetts Election." The political history of the State for a number of years is reviewed, and the steady change of sentiment upon the economic questions showing the progress of Democratic principles. Gov. Russell pays glowing tributes to ex-President Cleveland's business administration and credits the famous message of 1887 with the education of the manufacturers and people generally of Massachusetts upon the subject of Tariff Reform. The Governor does not indulge in vain boastings; rather, is he grateful in recognizing the work of those independent Republicans who manfully put aside their ancient politics for the good of the commonwealth. He does not think Massachusetts is yet safely democratic, but the trend of politics is in that direction, and the exercise of wisdom in the selection of the candidates and in the formation of platform principles will cement the democracy of New England which now is clearly in the ascendency. Gov. Russell closes his paper with this information and admonition:

"It cannot be claimed that Massachusetts can yet be counted as a democratic State, whatever she may become in the immediate future; but the last two elections have shown that the balance of power is held by a body of independent voters whose political action is guided by principle, and who are firm supporters of tariff reform. The democratic party of Massachusetts cannot hold out to the national democracy any strong prospect of securing the electoral vote of Massachusetts next year for any candidates, or for any policies, which cannot command this support; but these voters have now every inclination to continue to give their support to the democratic cause, and a reasonable course on the part of the national democracy will probably make Massachusetts a democratic state in 1892. In order to attain this end, it is of paramount importance that the tariff question should be kept at the front in the next congress, and that it should be made the one great issue of the presidential campaign. If the democratic party should commit itself—as fortunately there is now very little chance that it will—to the free coinage of silver, it must be frankly acknowledged that the democratic ticket would have little chance of success in New England in 1892, whatever might be its prospects elsewhere. We have shown in Massachusetts that we can hold what we have won upon a vote 32,000 larger than that of last year. The democracy of this state is united and aggressive, and under favorable conditions it believes that it can again hold its own upon the yet larger vote which will be cast in the presidential year. It only asks of the national democracy a fair opportunity to make the contest."

Dyspepsia

Few people have suffered more severely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 162 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea, and indigestion. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so, and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to feel like a new man. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased, the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle was taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am today well and I ascribe it to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla."

TECUMSEH HERALD.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 10, 1891.

Winter.

(For the Herald.)

The earth is hard as Pharoah's heart,
The skies like cold gray stones.
How chilly are the blasts that pierce
Your very marrow bones!
The snow has fallen half a yard;
The mercury ten degrees,
And those who venture out must wade
In snow up to their knees.
Now everybody moves in out
With shovel or with broom,
And merchants fondly hope that trade
Will soon begin to boom.
The snow-ball cannonade's begun;
Each urchin is a gunner;
And every luckless passer-by
Becomes a blockade runner.
With feet benumbed and aching hands,
And frost-nipped ears and nose,
You take a jolly sleigh-ride
Through cold December snows.
You tumble off a dozen times,
Yet boasting's very nice,—
And so is skating, though you crack
Your crown upon the ice.
Oh, winter is a happy time!
And sleighing's lots of fun;
But we must pay the piper
Before the dance is done.
For winter's pastimes oft result
In frozen ears and nose,
And January's thaws will give
Us chilblains in our toes.
And now the grippe completes the sum
Of earthly aggravation,
And smites us all, both great and small,
Of high or lowly station.
Pneumonia's clutches hold you fast,—
You've got an awful cough;
And when the grippe has done its work
Consumption takes you off.
Oh, may the grippe, which doth torment
Poor mortals here below,
Seize on the man who wrote about
The beauties of the snow!

MORAL.

If you would choose the wiser course,
And winter's ills defy,
Just follow good advice and take
Your sleigh-ride in July.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Our premium offers for the coming year are more favorable than ever before and the club list is the best one ever issued from this office. Examine them carefully and make your selections early.

CARPETS AND THE TARIFF.

Brilliant Promises End in Failure—What the Carpet Men Think of the McKinley Tariff.

The carpet manufacturers of Philadelphia raised, according to their own admissions, a fund of about $300,000 to assist in the election of Benjamin Harrison. In return for this benevolence on their part they were promised additional protection. Some of them wanted the duty on carpet wools which are not grown in this country reduced, and all wanted additional protection.

A fact which in part explains their desire to have higher duties was this, that at that time they were making arrangements to form a cast iron agreement to limit production, raise prices and in this way get back their money from the consumers of carpets.

Those who demanded lower duties on wool, however, were disappointed. The duties on carpet wools were raised so high that many kinds of wool could no longer be imported. McKinley and his associates, however, granted them a liberal increase in protection on their carpets.

Now what has been the result? The carpet manufacturers had to pay higher prices for their wool, all of which has to be imported. As a result they raised the price of their carpets. The people refused to pay these advanced prices and followed Jay Gould's advice to the farmers and workingmen and left the old carpets on ther floors.

As a result of this one of the largest carpet firms in the country, that of Alexander Smith & Sons, has been forced to sell its stock of over $2,000,000 at auction at what it will bring. At the opening of the sale Walter W. Law, the sellers' representative, said to the gentlemen of the carpet trade present:

"The Alexander Smith & Son's Carpet Co. offer you to-day an unparalleled opportunity for supplying yourselves with their fabrics at your own price. We have no hesitation whatever in inviting you to put your own value upon every piece we have in stock, excepting only the few patterns which we have prepared for the spring of 1892. With the removal of these accumulations, the only serious problem with which carpet manufacturers will have to contend is the high price of wool caused by the McKinley bill and the still more severe interpretation of its meaning by the treasury department. Remember, high prices for wool mean high cost to manufacture carpets. Gentlemen, this is your day; ours will come later."

Nor are Alexander Smith & Sons alone in showing the blighting effects of the McKinley tariff on carpets. The actual situation could not be expressed better or clearer than the following from Arthur L. Lyman, the treasurer of the Lowell Carpet Co., the largest establishment in New England. Mr. Lyman said: "That the McKinley bill increased the cost of carpets; that the prices of carpets were increased in consequence of the McKinley bill; that they would not have advanced if the McKinley bill had not been passed, and that if wool had been made free the cost and prices of carpets would have gone down are facts that cannot be disputed by anyone who understands the carpet manufacture and trade and its conditions in 1890 and 1891."

THE STRUCTURAL IRON TRUST.

How Carnegie and His Associates Appropriate to Themselves the Tariff Bonus on Structural Iron—Incidentally It Shows Who Pays the Tariff Tax.

In extrolling the McKinley tariff the other day Mr. Andrew Carnegie magnanimously observed that his praise was entirely disinterested, inasmuch as the rates of duty have been considerably reduced upon the manufactures he produces. It was certainly very generous in Mr. Carnegie to lavish encomiums upon a measure from which, as he assures us, he derives no benefit. Next to steel rails, his most important manufactures are beams, rafters, joists, columns, and other forms of structural iron. Upon these products the former rate of duty was $25 a ton. In pretended deference to the complaints of house-builders against this most exhorbant duty, the McKinley tariff reduced the rate to $18 a ton. It was believed that this reduced rate would be sufficient to ward off competition with the structural iron combination on this side of the Atlantic, and the expectation has not been disappointed.

The price maintained by the American Beam association, to which Mr. Carnegie belongs, is $62 a ton for most if not all forms of structural iron. In Belgium the selling price of the same manufactures is 120 francs per metric ton, or $21.08 per ton of 2,000 pounds. At the mills in Germany the price is $22.72 per ton. Adding the duty of $18, the price of Belgian and German forms of structural iron would be, when laid down in Philadelphia, $30.05 and $40.72 respectively, exclusive of freights and commissions of importers.

Making the most liberal allowance for the difference in wages, these comparative figures show the extent of the extortion that is practiced upon the house-builders of this country by Mr. Carnegie's American Beam association under cover of the tariff. Although the importations of structural iron are so insignificant as to receive no mention in the treasury returns of trade, we are reliably informed that Belgian and German beams are offered to-day in New York and Boston at $46.50 per ton. This is the price for forms of structural iron made by foreign works for their home trade. For patterns required by American consumers the price is $52 a ton. Under the discouraging influence of the tariff upon the import trade the American Beam association is enabled to swell its enormous profits by charging the builders of this country $19 a ton more for its products than the highest price of the foreign article, with duties, freights, commissions and all included.

While Mr. Carnegie's disinterestedness is not very apparent, his ground for extolling the McKinley tariff is quite obvious. Yet, notwithstanding the high duty, the wide margin in price between American structural iron and the foreign article affords an opportunity of saving money of which builders should avail themselves. We are assured that if foreign beams should be carried in stock by American merchants there would be a large market for them in this country, in spite of the duty of eighteen dollars a ton. Importers are unwilling to take the risk, however, because the American Beam association could drop its prices below the lowest rate of the foreign article and still have a considerable margin of profit. Thus the McKinley tariff, in obstructing the imports of structural iron nearly as effectually as did its predecessor, amply justifies the warm praises of Mr. Carnegie.

It is evident that a further reduction in the duties of structural iron is demanded by the interests of American consumers. The change in the McKinley tariff has had no effect in reducing the prices of the beam monopoly. But if the duty on structural iron should be reduced to $9 or $10 a ton there would be abundant "protection" for the home manufacturer, as prices and the cost of production demonstrate, while there would be some protection of American consumers from monopolistic rapacity. By reducing the duty, and with it the cost of this material, it would enter far more extensively into house building, and thus give a healthful stimulus to a great variety of industrial pursuits.—Philadelphia Record.

COMMERCE AND TARIFFS.

High Tariffs Restrict But Low Tariffs Promote Commerce—Lessons Taught By European Tariffs.

At the meeting held recently in New York city by the canners and other large consumers of tin plate, for the purpose of forming an association to investigate the tin plate question, Congressman Bunting, one of the largest canners in the United States, said:

"The canning industry now consumes more than one-half of the tin plate imported, and this was $8,000,000 yearly, because it was made a mark for the disastrous discrimination. The industry counts nearly 2,000 establishments and gives employment, directly or indirectly, to nearly 2,000,000 people. All the promises of concerns which were to embark in the tin plate business within thirty days from the passage of the act have been myths. They are," he adds, "still blowing the tin horn of promise to the phantom tin plate industry and adding to the reality of their iron-roofing plants."

Instead of depressing the price of tin plate, as Mr. Allison and Mr. McKinley predicted, Mr. Bunting asserts that the act made it possible for speculators to anticipate the proposed advance in making sales in nine months to such an extent that consumers paid an advance on tin plate almost equal to the increase in duty. He quotes Harry Nash & Co., of Liverpool, to the effect that speculators made a profit of £1,000,000 in nine months. He asserts that the American Tinned Plate association played a confidence game on Messrs. Allison and McKinley, which can only be corrected by the repeal of the duty on tinned plates by the next congress.

Mr. Bunting produces figures showing that the increased cost to consumers of canned goods, by reason of the duty on the tin in the cans, is enough to pay 12,000 workmen a salary of $400 a year, with $200,000 left over. It would require 60,000 acres of land to grow the corn represented by this waste. In the absence of the duty the canner could pay the farmer 25 per cent. more for the fruits, etc., canned, and still sell them for the old prices.

The meat packers used 600,000 boxes of tin plate in the year ended March 1, last. Of this 475,000 boxes were used at home. The duty which the consumers paid was $1,225,750, or enough to pay for 56,287 more head of cattle, which would have paid the farmer $20 a head, and would have required for grazing over 1,000,000 acres. This increase in stock raising, packing and marketing would mean employment for 20,000 persons. This is about the number of persons living off the tin plate industry in the world, the congressman says.

CHEAP TO FOREIGNERS.

American Photographic Materials at Reduced Rates in London.

The Eastman Co. is the name of a firm of manufacturers of photographic materials, and its home office is in Rochester, N. Y. It has also a branch at 115 Oxford street, London. A comparison of the price lists will add one more to the many instances of the overwhelming affection of the McKinley tariff for the American consumer. We append a table showing how "prices of Eastman's bromide paper" in London compare with those exacted in this country by an industry which has to be protected from the dreadful competition of foreigners:

	London price per doz sheets.	Amer. price.
4¼ x 3¼	$0.16	$ 0. 6
5 x 4	.22	.40
6½ x 4¾	.27	.60
7½ x 5	.41	.70
8 x 6	.50	.75
8½ x 6½	.62	1.10
10 x 8	.8[illegible]	1.60
12½ x 10½	1.5[illegible]	2.[illegible]
15½ x 14½	1.[illegible]7	3.35
20 x17	3.50	6.40
25 x21	5. 5	9.00
30 x25	7.12	14.00

Thus the London photographer gets his supplies from this American firm at only a little more than one-half as much as the American photographer has to pay. Turning now to the columns of the McKinley bill, we find the rates on albumenized paper to be 35 per cent. ad valorem; the old rate was 15 per cent. Of course "the wisest and bravest tariff that was ever framed" was manipulated by this endangered American industry in the most shameless manner. What does Mr. McKinley think now of a company that asked for 35 per cent. protection, and then gives the Londoner 50 per cent. off its prices to Americans?—N. Y. Evening Post.

—Thirty-five years ago the Vigo county farmer took his wheat to Terre Haute and exchanged it for 18¾ yards of bleached shirting. To-day he exchanges it for 12½ yards—of the same kind of goods. Has the farmer profited by "protection?"—Rockville (Ind.) Tribune.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

PROMINENT DETROITER'S ON THE SINGLE TAX.

In the Detroit News of Sunday, May 17, appears a series of interviews on the single tax with leading citizens of Detroit, which will have a wonderful influence in stirring people's minds in that city because of the positions the interviewed occupy in the city government and in business.

Hazen S. Pingree, the mayor, is a boot and shoe manufacturer and owns about $150,000 worth of real estate. He was absent from the city, but his business partner, J. B. Howarth, authorized the News to state that Mr. Pingree favored the single tax theory because he believed that its enactment into law would relieve both capital and labor from the present unjust and oppressive system of land tenure.

J. B. Howarth, of Pingree & Smith, boot and shoe manufacturers, and owners of $50,000 in real estate, said he had been an advocate of the single tax for seven years; first, because it was a just tax, and second, because it was expedient. Here, it might be noted, parenthetically, was another influence that may have swayed Mayor Pingree in the gallant fight he has been making.

Frank C. Pingree, who is largely interested in real estate, was a single taxer, because he believed that the adoption of the system would prevent speculation in real estate; that through it the land now held for speculative purposes would be forced into the market to the benefit of all the people, except land speculators, who now thrive at the expense of the industrious.

James E. Scripps, who, with his brother, owns about $500,000 worth of Detroit real estate, favored the single tax because it seemed to him that a tax on land values was the fairest and most equitable system that could be devised. The present complicated system of taxation, he thought, offered too many opportunities for evasion and fraud.

Cornelius J. O'Flynn, lawyer and owner of $25,000 in real estate, said that in his opinion Henry George had presented the only feasible remedy for the evils connected with the land question. That remedy is to make the holding of large tracts of land burdensome by placing all the expenses of government upon real estate. There is as much suffering among the poor in our large cities caused by the present tenure of land as there is in Ireland.

John Bridges, assistant superintendent of the Detroit water works and owner of $3,500 worth of city property, favored the single tax because it will be to the future generations what Christianity was to the plebeians of ancient Greece and Rome. The single tax will elevate the human race by giving labor its full reward.

James Gourlay, of Gourlay Bros., owner of about $100,000 in real estate, said the single tax was much to be preferred to the present system.

Ex-Congressman Wm. C. Maybury, owner of about $50,000 in real estate, said that when first presented to him, the single tax appeared preposterous; but now he confessed it was gaining in favor with him.

Edward T. Hance, lawyer, postmaster of Detroit, and owner of $20,000 in real estate, believed the single tax to be the only correct method of collecting the money necessary to defray the expenses of the government.

Theodore P. Hall, grain dealer, and owner of about $200,000 in Wayne county real estate, said that, in his opinion, land values ought, alone, to bear the burden of taxation. Said he: "The unearned increment argument is really unassailable. It comes within every man's experience and observation. A landowner who fails to improve his property, and stolidly waits for the community around him to work, plan, build and produce, to the end that his real estate shall increase in value without any exertion or expense on his own part, is taking a legal but unjust advantage of his fellow-man. Ninety-nine persons out of one hundred will reprobate his conduct as mean and selfish, but it is less his fault than that of the present system of land tenure and taxation. The single tax will stop all this. It goes without saying that any law that will stimulate improvement of property will do the greatest good to the greatest number, which is the end of all good government. This, I firmly believe, the single tax will accomplish."

Joshua Waterman, retired lawyer, capitalist and owner of $200,000 in real estate, said he believed the principle of taxing land values alone, as advocated by Henry George, was the only correct method of raising revenues for the support of government.

John G. Talford, boot and shoe dealer and owner of $3,000 in real estate, favored the single tax because it would immediately stop speculation in real estate, so that the great mass of men who now placed their surplus capital in land and waited till the labor of other men had enhanced the value of their property, would then, under single tax, be compelled to invest it in manufacturing or other industrial pursuits, and thus increase the production of the community.

Victor Collian, engineer, inventor, and manufacturer and owner of about $20,000 in Detroit real estate, said that the single tax idea seem to him to be the very essence of economic truth.

J. W. Donovan, lawyer, and owner of $11,000 in real estate, favored the single tax on land values because more men are made rich by a city being built on a farm than by either earnings or savings, and such men owed it to the community to bear the burden of taxation.

J. L. Hudson, clothier, and owner of $50,000 in Detroit real estate, favored the single tax because, first, he believed land values should pay all the taxes, and second, because he saw no other way in which labor could secure its full reward. He believed the single tax would do more to alleviate the hardships and relieve the wants of the poor than any other reform now proposed.

R. W. King, retired merchant and owner of $12,000 in real estate, said that the present system of taxation was "utterly wrong." He was, therefore, in favor of a tax on land values only, and regarded it as the only scientific method of taxation. It would have the effect of discouraging speculation in land, which is the bane of American civilization.

George Gourlay, of Gourlay Brothers, haberdashers, said that the single tax was the wisest, simplest and only just method of taxation. The present system of land tenure was a bare-faced robbery of the masses. "When," he continued, "the truth dawns on a majority of the people of this country, then will come the greatest revolution in our social and economical structure since matter sprang out of chaos. It will be the dawn of a new christianity, such as Christ taught, but which never could be realized under economic conditions of the past.

James H. Donaldson, merchant tailor and owner of about $6,000 in real estate, said that his reason for believing in the single tax theory was that its adoption would benefit humanity and wrong no class. It would increase the production of every article of human consumption, and would give labor and capital its due reward without paying toll to land owners. The present system discourages enterprise and places a penalty on improvement.

Henry Koester, of Kennedy & Koester, jewelers, owner of $3,000 in real estate, said he believed in single tax because it was a just tax. He thought it would receive the support of all business men except those who are large land owners.

Edwin Jerome, furniture dealer and owner of $20,000 in real estate, did not know of any reason why every man should not believe in the single tax. It would, he said, be an eminently fair system, and infinitely better than the present mode, which virtually fines real estate owners for improving their property.

Henry C. Weber, hardware dealer and owner of $20,000 in real estate, said: "Land is improved and enhanced by labor, which, of course, includes manufactures, mercantile business and commerce. As labor alone gives values to land, it is only just and proper that labor should receive back what it gives. I am, therefore, unreservedly in favor of taxation on land values alone, and I believe that taxation of improvements or any other description of personal property oppresses both capital and labor."

T. B. Rayl, hardware dealer, said he believed in the single tax as the only equitable manner of paying the expenses of government.

Dr. Wm. Lockhart, owner of $10,000 in real estate, said he was an advocate of the single tax idea, and believed that its adoption would bring about a state of affairs that would be of great benefit to all classes of men and would injure none.

In its editorial columns the News drew attention to these remarkable interviews "with well known Detroit business men, who for various reasons express their preference for that system of taxation known as the single tax on land values," and it welcomed them "to the ranks of that rapidly forming class who are now paying some attention to economic questions, and who are thereby becoming better citizens and less likely to be led by the noses by party leaders. In concluding its editorial it stated the problem thus:

The theory of the single tax advocates is very simple. They believe that whatever is necessary to be done should be paid for from those values created by the community as a whole. This is land value.

Paving Streets.

George Winter, of Middletown, New York, who travels for a house in this city, brings a story from Dunkirk. He says that the efforts of the single tax men of Quincy, Ill., Chicago, and other places, to have public improvements taxed on the property immediately benefited, gave some of the single taxers of Dunkirk an idea. There had long been talk in that town of paving the main street, and method after method had been proposed for raising money for that purpose, but had always been objected to and defeated by the property owners. Finally an idea was advanced, based on the methods devised by the Quincy and Chicago single tax men, with the result that finally, by unanimous consent, a block on the main street of Dunkirk was ordered paved, the expense to be paid by the property owners immediately benefited. This having been decided, the citizens concluded that the paving should be a first class job, and they authorized the town council to make a contract to lay, first, a base of cement twelve inches deep, and to put on top of it brick that is made in Pennsylvania especially for paving purposes. The contract called for $1.4 a running foot for the pavement. When the job was completed and the block turned over to the city the people resolved to have a jollification over it, and three weeks ago the affair came off. It was a holiday in Dunkirk. Everybody gathered to celebrate the paving of a block that had cost the city nothing, and yet was considered to be a marvel of paving work. The mayor delivered the opening address, and congratulated the citizens that a method had finally been discovered by which public improvements could be made without running the city into debt. Senator Vedder also addressed the meeting and told the people that he had traveled over a great part of the world, and was free to say that that newly paved block could not be surpassed in any of the great cities he had visited. And on the outskirts of the crowd stood a group of men who took no part in the proceedings, not even applauding the speakers, but whose faces beamed with a smile that is only seen on the faces of men who have carried an idea to a successful issue. The speakers did not say so from the stand, but these men said to each other: "There is a demonstration of how the single tax works. The people and the crowd are delighted with the results, but they don't know who to thank for it."

William J. Ogden, one of the leading single tax advocates of Baltimore, Md., has been elected to the city council.

WORK OF A CRANK.

He Demands a Million Dollars from Russell Sage.

Failing in His Mission He Throws a Dynamite Bomb, Blowing Off His Own Head and Killing and Injuring Others.

A DEADLY BOMB.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Russell Sage, the millionaire broker, escaped death as by a miracle Friday. The entire Empire building, in which was his office, was shaken to its very foundation by the explosion of a dynamite bomb hurled by a crank, who made a demand upon Mr. Sage for the immediate payment of $1,250,000, the ultimatum being, in case of refusal, the death of the millionaire, the crank himself and those employed in the office.

Never in the history of the metropolis is it probable that an event has occurred that for the time caused more excitement in Wall street and lower Broadway. Fully 50,000 people were drawn to the scene of the explosion, and for an hour the police were powerless to bring order out of the chaos.

Those who were close at hand saw a man blown through one of the windows of Sage's office into Rector street. A few minutes later Mr. Sage himself, with blood streaming from his face and hands, was helped out into the street and taken to O'Connell's drug store, just below Wall street, on Broadway. There, also, was carried the man blown from the window.

Within ten minutes after the explosion Dr. A. P. Munn, the physician of Jay Gould, was at the side of Mr. Sage and personally attended to his injuries, which proved to be not of a serious nature. The hair and eyebrows of the millionaire were burned and his face and his hands hurt by small particles of glass and plaster, the result of the explosion.

But one person was killed outright, supposed to be H. D. Wilson, the man that made the demand for money from Mr. Sage and the one that threw the bomb. Benjamin F. Morton, who was thrown through the window, a clerk in the office of Mr. Sage, was removed to Chambers street hospital, where he died at 1:30 a. m. while under operation for fracture of the skull. The deceased was a resident of Far Rockaway, L. I.

Mr. Slocum, the chief clerk of Mr. Sage, is badly cut about the head. The safe was broken open and the securities scattered over the building and street. The others injured are:

S. G. Calhoun, of 165 Dean street, Brooklyn, who was in Mr. Sage's office or near it when the explosion occurred; badly burned on the side of the face, but otherwise uninjured.

W. R. Laidlaw, Sage's clerk, leg lacerated and wounds about the face and body.

Frank Robertson, a broker's clerk, 26 years old, living at Bergen Point, N. J., bruised and cut about the abdomen; dangerous.

F. G. Morrison, who has an office in the building, badly cut and bruised.

C. W. Osborn, 52 years old, 196 Berkley place, Brooklyn, severe injuries about body and face.

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 7.—Hiram Wilson, who is mentioned as the crank who dropped the dynamite bomb in Russell Sage's office into Rector street, is confined at the state hospital in this city.

MANY NEW SENATORS.

A Group of Seventeen Will Enter the Fifty-Second Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—With the opening of the Fifty-second congress the senate receives seventeen new members. Two years ago but six new men took seats. Later eight senators of the incoming states of North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington appeared. Then followed the admission of Idaho and Wyoming, and the resignation of Senator Edmunds. The senate will therefore stand republicans, 48; democrats, 37; farmers' alliance, 3.

DIED IN THE PIT.

Seventy-Five Miners Killed by an Explosion in a French Colliery.

ST. ETIENNE, Dec. 7.—Seventy-three miners lost their lives by an explosion of fire damp in a mine at this place. The wives, children and relatives of the entombed miners surrounded the mouth of the pit, and the most heart-rending scenes were witnessed as the bodies of the victims were brought to the surface.

Hanged.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., Dec. 5.—Charles M. Seaton was hanged here at 10:10 a. m. for the murder of Lewis Channel, a mining engineer, at Joplin, Mo., about a year ago. Seaton made a farewell address from the scaffold in which he warned his listeners to avoid the use of whisky and the company of bad women.

Only Three Lives Lost.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—All but two of those reported to have been drowned in the collision of the barges at Haverstraw Friday night had been rescued by daylight. In the collision Capt. Alexander Albertson, of the schooner Alice Snedeker, was killed, so that the death roll numbers three.

Christians Massacred.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Chinese legation here has received an official dispatch saying that in China 500 Christians, several native priests, a Mongolian prince and some unconverted natives had been massacred and many churches pillaged and burned in the towns of Tsientchang and Pingsuten.

Crashed Through a Bridge.

LIMA, O., Dec. 7.—A work train on the Findlay & Western road went through a bridge 3 miles east of this place, the cars piling up in a shapeless mass 40 feet below. Three Italians, names unknown, were killed and several others were fatally injured.

Four Trains Collide.

EAST THOMPSON, Conn., Dec. 5.—Two passenger and two freight trains were wrecked on the New York & New England railroad at this place yesterday and three men were killed and seven injured.

To Try Dr. Graves.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 5.—After nine days of hard labor the suspense is over and a jury has been selected in the Graves-Barnaby case.

IN A DAY.

LAWRENCE, KANS., Aug. 9, 1888.

George Patterson fell from a second-story window, striking a fence. I found him using

ST. JACOBS OIL.

He used it freely all over his bruises. I saw him next morning at work. All the bruises soon rapidly disappeared, leaving neither pain, scar nor swelling. C. K. NEUMANN, M.D.

"ALL RIGHT! ST. JACOBS OIL DID IT."

A VISIT TO VIENNA.

From Berlin to Vienna—"The Blue Danube"—A Description of the City—Death of Dr. Stephenson.

Leaving the city of Berlin, Aug. 7th., at nine o'clock in the evening, we traveled all night, arriving in the city of Prague, the ancient capital of Bohemia early the next morning. Here we endeavored to get breakfast, but to our surprise and disgust we found that they would not take German money, and as we were not in possession of any Austrian currency, the only alternative was to do without breakfast. From Prage to Brunn, the capital of the little kingdom of Moravia, the road passes through narrow defiles of the Carpathian mountains, with mountain peaks of varied height on either side, which extend through the whole length of country from Prague to Brunn. The scenery, as viewed from the railroad throughout the greater part of Bohemia is picturesque and mountainous, while here and there are to be seen, rich and beautiful valleys which are highly cultivated. After passing through many tunnels, we finally emerged into a tolerable level country in the neighborhood of Brunn. Proceeding southward from Brunn, and approaching the Danube our route lay through the famous field of Austerlitz, where Napoleon defeated the combined forces of Austria and Russia. This is on Austrian soil, but the government of this country has never erected a monument on the battle field to commemorate her defeat; so completely has time effaced every evidence of one of the most deadly conflicts in Europe that the visitor would not recognize the field, if it were not pointed out to him.

THE BLUE DANUBE.

Looking out of the car window when crossing the bridge, which spans the Danube, we were not a little surprised to see that the "Blue Danube" is not blue, but on the contrary a dirty, muddy stream, a good illustration of the trite saying, that "Distance lends enchantment to the view."

A DESCRIPTION OF VIENNA.

The city of Vienna lies on the south bank of the Danube, on a broad semi-circular plain, walled in towards the south and west by the Styrian Alps. It was first a Celtic village, afterwards, during the Roman Empire, a Roman fort was established here. In the Dark Ages, like many other European towns, it was destroyed and rebuilt; while in modern days, it is the capital of the Austrian Empire, having the reputation of being one of the handsomest cities in Europe.

It has some very fine streets; the Ring Strausse, or street is two miles long, and 160 feet wide, with beautiful buildings, gardens, parks, and palaces on either side. A great many of the old streets in Vienna are narrow, so much so, that it is almost impossibe for a donkey and cart to pass through them, but the more modern streets are wide. The buildings are beautifully stuccoed, which give them the appearance of finely cut stone. A great many buildings are decorated with numerous statues, which present to the eye of the visitor a striking contrast from anything seen in American cities. Amidst all the splendor and architectural display, it is not uncommon to see on these fine streets, a cart drawn by a dog and a woman. Driving one day, through one of the chief business streets of the city, an old pine stump full of nails was pointed out to me; the nails had been driven in the stump on account of some ancient superstitious custom, (if my recollection serves me right, I think they were driven there for luck.)

There are two churches in Vienna well worth visiting. St. Stephen's, which was built about five hundred years ago, is the oldest in the city; it is covered by 100 or more musty looking statuettes; it has an immense tower about 350 feet high, and from its summit can be seen the vast plain across the Danube where was fought the battle of Wagrum, another field where Napoleon defeated the Austrians. I observed that the pulpit in this old church is made of stone, consequently it will not need repairing for the next five hundred years. The second one which we visited is the old Capuchin church, which contains the bones of that historical personage, Maria Theresa; and it is here, where lies the remains of the emperor, Maximillian of Mexico. The reader will rember that the Mexicans shot Maximillian shortly after the close of the late war, and thus put an end to a monarchical government in Mexico.

Vienna boasts of many fine buildings; a few of these were noted, particularly the Hofburg or Imperial palace, the new university building, which are elegant structures. The university has an attendance of four thousand students; the Vienna general hospital is the largest in the world, and covers ten acres of ground; the opera house is a fine building, beautifully frescoed, and is said to be the largest German opera house in Europe.

In a pubic square stands an equestrian statue of Maria Theresa surrounded by her generals, to which the Viannese point with a great deal of national pride.

Stepping on board a steamer we sailed up the Danube canal for a few miles, and boarded a railway coach which carried us through a thickly wooded country over hills and valleys, until we arrived at the summit of the highest hill, which is called Khalenburg, which overlooks Vienna and the plain of the Danube. From this point the spectator gets a fine view of the city, with its palaces, public buildings, churches, spires, and minarets; while still further to the south are the Styrian Alps with their cloud-capped peaks; to the left lies a vast plain with the smooth waters of the Danube rolling through it. From Khalenburg, we walked to Leopoldburg, (another hill still higher,) where in an early day there was built a Roman fort. It was from this eminence, about two hundred and fifty years ago, that John Sobiesk, king of Poland, examined the position of the Turkish army which had laid siege to the city of Vienna, the evening previous to his attack upon the Turkish forces. These hills and the surrounding forest give the citizens of Vienna a splendid opportunity of enjoying the fresh air, for the cost of transportation to these hills is only a mere trifle. The forest was literally swarming with people, who came from the pent up streets of the city, and who were bound for pleasure and recreation; still, I did not see an intoxicated individual amongst them.

DEATH OF DR. STEPHENSON.

It was in the city of Vienna that Dr. Stephenson died. The doctor enjoyed the voyage across the Atlantic like an old sailor, making many friends among the passengers. He visited many interesting localities in Ireland, spending a few days at his old home in the "Emerald Isle." He visited the principal hospitals in Dublin, Belfast, Glasgow, Edinburgh and London, as well as the great university of Oxford. He spent a few hours at Abbotsford, the home of Sir Walter Scott, and half day at Stratford-on-Avon, the birth place of the immortal poet, Shakespeare. He climbed the monument which is erected on the battle field of Waterloo, and from its summit viewed the historic ground, where the power of Napoleon Bonaparte was crushed forever. He visited the palace of Frederick the Great at Potsdam, and stood by the tomb of that famous monarch in the old Garrison Church. He attended the International Medical Congress at Berlin, the greatest gathering of learned medical men which has ever taken place in the history of the world. He had borne the fatigue of a long journey without a murmur, when younger men began to feel fatigued. He was kind and courteous under all circumstances, and was one of the most agreeable traveling companions. Throughout his journey, night and morning, he invoked the assistance of Divine Providence, and in the highest sense of the word, he was a devoted, practical Christian. In the enjoyment of good health, he was stricken down with apoplexy, which in a few hours terminated fatally. In a strange land, five thousand miles from home, I lost my traveling companion and friend, whom to know was to respect.

J. F. JENKINS.

To the Public and our Patrons.

In presenting the Musin Company this season, I can say with a good degree of modesty, that in the past ten years there has not been such a combination of artists gathered in one company to support a star; and it is believed that those who listen to it this coming season will fully agree with me and say that the facts which I have stated about the Company, and mentioned in this circular, have not been overestimated in regard to the true merits of each artist.

The cause of this circular appearing so late in the season is due to the difficulty of finding artists capable of belonging to an organization of this kind. We have been exceptionally particular in selecting the supporting artists this season for two reasons: first, because we wish to settle the fact that the Ovide Musin Concert Company is so far superior to all other similar organizations that the confidence of our patrons in the superiority of this Company over all others cannot be changed by the solicitation of any would-be rival, who is anxious to place his company under the same auspices, and that the standard of this Company will always be kept up; second, because Mr. Musin will make his first tour in Australia, beginning next June, and for that country he is obliged to have artists of the very highest order.

It was the intention of the management, owing to the highly increased demand of salary by Annie Louise Tanner, which was due to her great success during the past three seasons with this Company, to engage another prima donna in her place, whom we thought might be secured at a reasonable salary, but after searching the large cities of the United States for a soprano that could fill the place that Mme. Tanner has so ably done for three seasons, Mr. Musin went to Europe to find one there if possible. It proved of no avail, and we found that we must engage Mme. Tanner again, and give her the terms demanded, in order to keep faith with the public.

I could continue eulogizing each artist in regard to their respective merits, but, not wishing to bore the readers of this column, I deem it unnecessary to say more.

Before closing, however, allow me to say that I pledge my word always to spare no time or expense to give Mr. Musin a supporting company such as he deserves, which means the best that can be secured.

Very respectfully yours,
R. E. JOHNSTON.

Always at the Front.

We have received a copy of the handsomely illustrated prospectus for 1892 issued by the Detroit Free Press. The achievements of this famous paper in the past have been great, but if its promises for the future are to be fulfilled—and there certainly is no reason to expect the contrary—The Detroit Free Press will in 1892 be, as its publishers confidently claim, the most entertaining and instructive paper published, giving additional pleasure to its thousands of old subscribers and fresh enjoyment to the many thousand new ones that its merits deserve. Its list of contributors for 1892 includes many of the most famous names in American literary and public life, and most of the articles to be published are of unusual importance and interest, presenting a splendid array of valuable features in addition to the inimitable work done by its own staff of bright and famous writers.

The Weekly Detroit Free Press is not only the brightest humorous and literary paper published, but it gives also an incomparable news service. No event or incident worth chronicling escapes its attention. Important matters are always treated in the fullest manner, while the ordinary news of the day is carefully condensed in order that nothing may be omitted for want of space. Its State news service is especially complete and valuable, while its general and foreign news columns are not surpassed in excellence by any paper in the land.

Something less than a year ago The Free Press began the publication of a Semi-Weekly edition, issued on Tuesdays and Fridays. We understand that the publishers are somewhat surprised by the success of their new venture, although there is no reason why they should be, for it is just such a project as is bound to succeed when backed by the resources and skill of the The Free Press establishment. This Semi-Weekly edition fills the place of a daily newspaper better than any other medium, and at a merely nominal cost. Its two weekly numbers make sixteen pages, containing all the bright features of the literary edition of The Free Press, and, in addition, the most complete news service known outside of the metropolitan dailies.

The publishers of The Free Press will mail copies of the paper and prospectus to all applicants.

Dickens' Pet Daughter.

Pretty "Mamie" Dickens was already considered by those who knew Charles Dickens best to be the novelist's favorite daughter. To none of his children, perhaps, was Dickens more affectionately attached, and the pet daughter saw much of her father under all circumstances. When even the dogs were chased out of the novelist's study, Mamie was allowed to stay. The daughter is now a full-grown woman, living quietly just outside of London. For the first time since her father's death, Miss Dickens has been persuaded to write of him whom she knew so well. During 1892 there will be published in the Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, a series of articles by Miss Dickens under the attractive title of "My Father as I Recall Him." Fortunately for the thousands who will read what she writes in this series, Miss Dickens has a retentive memory, and she made copious notes during her father's lifetime. She will tell in this series everything she remembers of her father; how he educated his children; his family life and his personal habits; how he wrote his famous books; his love of flowers and animals: how Christmas was spent in the Dickens household; how the novelist romped with his children; the famous people who came to the Dickens home, and his last years and closing days. No articles ever published have in them so much promise of telling the world things which it has never known of Dickens, and Miss Dickens's story of her father's life will be eagerly looked for in thousands of homes where the name of Dickens is like a household word.

"Pretty fatiguing times," said the pedestrian to the policeman. "Yes, a great many people need arrest nowadays."

Such as Dr. Dio Lewis, Prof. Gross, and others, agree that catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It therefore requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effectually and permanently cures catarrh. Thousands praise it.

Eduard Scharf, the pianist, played accompaniments with taste, and was heard alone in Liszt's paraphrase on some "Faust" numbers, Chopin's nocturne in D flat, a rigodon by Raff, and two other compositions. He is an accomplished performer. In the nocturne there was crispness, elegance and abandon.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The New York Tribune in a recent notice said: "Unlike other foreign artists who come to this country, Musin has the wisdom of surrounding himself with a first-class company, and is happy when his company receives some of the glory he receives each night, hence his great success, both financially and artistically, in America. On his last California tour he played fifteen nights to an average of $1,200 per night, the largest receipts ever made by any virtuoso in America.

Prof. John B. Reynolds is creating quite a furore in Case hall with his mesmeric entertainment. He has succeeded in securing several excellent subjects, and the performances, while mainly of a ludicrous character, are really interesting. Prof. Reynolds secures subjects from his audience, and unless he gets them, will not give an entertainment. Many Cleveland people can testify to his magnetic power, and some of them are staying away because they are afraid his eagle eye will cause them to lose their self-control.—Cleveland World.

Blanket Your Horse.

Now that cold weather is at hand it is to the intrest of every person to see that his stock is properly cared for. Every one knows how he feels when he is not perfectly warm and protected from the colds and draughts, and how apt he is to catch cold. There is no animal which is so susceptible to draughts and chills as yours horse. At night when sleeping his blood becomes sluggish and he is liable to catch cold. In recent years it has become the fixed rule with all owners of good stock to carefully blanket their horses not only when out of doors, but also in the stable. It has been found that horses eat less to keep warm, are kept in better condition, and are more valuable by being blanketed. One of the most essential features which should be looked at when purchasing a horse blanket is its strength. Too much credit cannot be given the manufactures of the celebrated 5-A Horse Blankets, who for years have insisted upon putting strong blankets upon the market, believing that the users of horse blankets would in time recognize the necessity and demand the 5-A Horse Blankets. The 5-A is what you want. There are 100 different styles made square for outdoor use and shaped for stable use at prices to suit everybody.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

Annual Report of Postmaster General Wanamaker.

His Recommendations Regarding One-Cent Postage, Rural Free Delivery, Postal Telegraph, Telephone and Savings System.

UNCLE SAM'S MAILS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The postmaster general's annual report, made public Thursday, shows that in spite of the fact that over $1,000,000 worth of lottery revenue has been lost during the last year the postal deficit of $6,000,000 is surely disappearing, provided the same rate of revenue and expenses obtains on July 1, 1893. It appears that all of the lottery mail has practically been driven from the mails, and the fidelity of the department in trying to enforce this almost unanimous wish of congress is shown.

It is shown by figures that nine-tenths of the causes why letters go wrong are due to the carelessness of the public, and Mr. Wanamaker not only shows how the work of the dead-letter office may be reduced but recommends the establishment of a branch in San Francisco. He announces changes in the postal guide which will make it contain popular information and enable it to be sold for one cent instead five.

The postmaster general renews his recommendation for the division of the country into postal districts, and adduces many reasons why the reform would be beneficial. He announces that the extension of the merit system of promotion, so successfully put in operation in the department lately, to the large post offices and the railway mail service has already been begun.

The postmaster general recommends the adaptation of the telephone as well as the telegraph to the postal system, showing that it is not only the constitutional privilege but the duty of congress to utilize all the means of modern science for quickening the transmission of intelligence. He says:

"One-cent letter postage, three-cent telephone messages and ten-cent telegraph messages are all near possibilities under an enlightened and compact postal system using the newest telegraphic inventions. The advantage of tying the rural post office by a telephone wire requiring no operator to the railroad station must be obvious. The benefits arising from telephonic connections with the post offices will easily suggest themselves in a hundred ways to those who want the entire people to share in common privileges. The rural population would be the greatest gainer. A telephone message from the post office to the railroad station miles away to ascertain if expected freight had come would save the farmer many a needless trip over bad roads; news of approaching frosts could be promptly spread over country districts and fruit-growing regions and many a valuable crop saved. The day's market prices for cattle and grain and wool and product may be obtained by the farmers direct by inquiry from others than the buyer who drives up to the farm in his buggy. All these may seem homely purposes to dwellers in cities, but country life would lose some of its drawbacks by the extension of such facilities to those who bear their full share of the burdens of the government and receive in postal respects at least, less than their share of its benefits."

Mr. Wanamaker believes in the full parcels post, but does not recommend it at present. He urges the abolition of personal suretyships of postmasters, as they are too frequently under obligations which damage the service. He proposes to extend the money-order system everywhere. It appears that nearly 8,000 miles of additional railway post office service have been established, 1,300 miles in the Pacific coast states, 3,500 in the other western states, 2,400 in the southern states and about 1,000 in the north-eastern states. Some idea of the extent of the service in the west may be obtained from the statement that 145 mail trains arrive and 144 depart from Chicago every day.

Arguments why this service ought to be continued and enlarged are adduced, and it is shown how much similar efforts to extend the free delivery into the country are to be made along star routes and by means of suburban electric roads. Mr. Wanamaker recommends the passage of a bill to entitle towns of population between 5,000 and 9,999 to the free delivery, and shows that the special-delivery service in cities has increased one-third this year over the average of the last four years.

He argues strenuously for postal savings. He reiterates his plan of last year and adds:

"Another plan, quite simple and thoroughly practical, would be to issue at the post offices non-negotiable certificates of postal deposit in sums of $10, $20, $50 and $100 bearing interest at the rate of half a cent a day on the dollar ($1.82½ per year) after the first of the month following the date of deposit, and the principal and interest payable on demand at any money order office by proper indorsement and identification under regulations of the postmaster general.

Mr. Wanamaker says he believes clerks in post offices, letter carriers, railway postal clerks, fourth-class postmasters and other employes of the department should be fairly paid and ought not to be overworked. This can never be done, however, so long as a deficiency in the postal revenues stares an appropriation committee in the face.

An interesting comparison in the past is made with the present in these words:

"In 1861 the entire revenue of the department was $8,349,295 and the expenditures were $13,606,759. With 28,586 post offices then, the deficiency was over $5,250,000, or nearly as much as it was last year. To-day, with reduced postage and more than twice as many post offices and 535 per cent. more miles of mail service and an expenditure of $72,069,114.55, the department produces all its needs without practically increasing the deficit before the war. The future of the postal service is very bright. The post office department is the one common meeting ground of all the people. It seems to me that there is enough in it to be done to be worthy the careful thought of the best men in the nation."

A Destructive Blaze.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 7.—The most disastrous fire in years visited Antigo, Wis., early Sunday morning, causing a loss of about $60,000. The Antigo Republican, L. Strasser's merchandise store, Lee Woole's stationery store, in which were the city records, and the masonic hall were totally destroyed. Strasser's loss is $45,000, insured for $30,000.

ENDED HIS CAREER.

John McManus Hanged in the Moyamensing Prison Yard, Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—John McManus was hanged at 10:07 a. m. in the Moyamensing prison yard for the murder of Eugene McGinnis in this city in Feburary, 1890. The murder was the result of a drunken quarrel about a woman among a set of disreputable men and women and the victim was stabbed to death in the street. McManus was tried and sentenced to be hung in May, 1890, but was reprieved till the following October, and through the efforts of his counsel obtained a new trial, but was again convicted and sentenced to be hanged, which latter sentence has just been carried out. The prisoner was cool and unconcerned when he took his place on the fatal trap, and his death was to all appearances a quick one.

McManus was known as the wickedest man in Philadelphia. He has a record of stabbing and shooting a dozen men and women, and three lives have been taken by him. The woman about whom he and McGinnis quarreled was well known as the queen of the slums, who has been the cause of the death of three young men in the last three years. McManus led gangs of repeaters on election days and was possessed of many political secrets.

FAMINE-STRICKEN RUSSIA.

American Millers Asked to Contribute a Shipload of Provisions.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 4.—The first attempt in the history of the country to afford relief to the famine-stricken peasantry of Russia has originated in Minneapolis. The scheme is to send a shipload of flour to Russia by the middle of next January, and the 5,000 merchant millers of America are to be asked to help. The cargo will be 3,000 tons, or 6,000,000 pounds, or 30,000 to 50,000 barrels, worth from $100,000 to $125,000. The Russian minister at Washington has been communicated with, and in his absence the charge d'affaires at New York wires that he has laid the matter before his country. The idea at first was to make the gift one from Minnesota alone, but it was thought best to give it a national scope. Railroads are willing to give the transportation, and the deal will be closed as soon as the Russian minister hears from home.

DISTRESS IN JAPAN.

More About the Woe Caused by the Late Earthquakes.

In 1866 the whole Belgian press banqueted her on the occasion of her golden wedding with journalism, when the king made her a knight of the order of Copold. It was an unprecedented honor for a woman, entitling her to a military funeral.

UNCLE SAM'S MONEY.

Annual Report of United States Treasurer Nebeker.

The Revenues of the Government, Reduction of the Debt and Condition of the Treasury—Financial Standing of the Banks.

OUR CASH ACCOUNT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—E. H. Nebeker, treasurer of the United States, reports that the ordinary revenues of the government for the last fiscal year were $393,612,447, or $10,468,535 less than those of the year before. The net ordinary expenditures, exclusive of the amounts paid in premium on bonds purchased, were $355,372,684, an increase of $57,639,108.

The surplus revenues were thus cut down from $105,344,496 to $37,239,763, which last summer was applied to the reduction of the public debt. The postal revenues amounted to $65,762,903 and the expenditures to $72,067,580, an increase of about $5,000,000 on both sides. On June 30, 1890, there stood charged to the treasurer on the books of the department a balance of $691,527,403, representing the excess of previous receipts over expenditures. To this was added the receipts of the year from all sources amounting to $756,831,305, which made an aggregate of $1,457,348,708 to be accounted for. The disbursements authorized by the warrants of the department, including those on account of the public debt, were $731,126,376. There was left $726,922,332, for which the treasurer was required to be able to produce cash or other assets.

The reduction effected during the year in the principel of the bonded debt and the circulating notes which cannot be reissued amounted to $116,590,273 and required an expenditure of $120,991494, including the premium on bonds purchased. This sum was made up by taking $89,751,731 from the reserve in the treasury in addition to the surplus revenues of the year. The consequent reduction in the annual interest charge was $4,323,092.

The amount of money in the country June 30, exclusive of certificates in circulation for which the treasury held deposits, was $1,676,078,102, of which $180,412,019 belonging to the treasury and $1,495,666,083 was in circulation.

There has been a net increase of $12,769,909 in the circulation since November 1. The items of increase were: Standard silver dollars, $561,743; subsidary silver, $740,801; gold certificates, $6,349,650; treasury notes, $4,509,802; United States notes, $810,320; national bank notes, $1,760,000. The items of decrease were: Gold coin, $838,965; silver certificates, $269,032; currency certificates, $1,000,000.

Since November 1 there has been a net increase of $8,867,045 in money and bullion in the treasury, the increase being made up as follows: Gold coin, $3,796,784; standard silver dollars, $852,013; gold bullion, $4,721,668; silver bullion, $3,884,053. There was a decrease as follows: Subsidiary silver, $806,794; treasury notes, $75,420; United States notes, $810,320; national bank notes, 897,041; trade dollar bullion, $1,174,898. The circulation per capita December 1 is stated at $24.88.

CONDITION OF BANKS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The forthcoming report of Comptroller Lacy shows that during the year ending October 31 193 new banks were organized, with an aggregate capital of $20,700,000. During the same time forty-one associations went into voluntary liquidation and twenty-five became insolvent. The number of banks in operation October 31, 1891, was 8,894, having a capital stock of $684,755,865; bonds deposited to secure circulation, $152,113,850; bank notes outstanding, $171,868,898, including $35,430,721, represented by money deposited for their redemption. The gross circulation, including notes of gold banks and those of failed and liquidating associations, has increased $7,751,085 during the year, while that secured by pledge of bonds has increased $11,765,101.

In number of failures the present exceeds any previous year. Six closed banks were restored by the voluntary contributions of shareholders. These banks possessed $2,225,000 in capital and had liabilities amounting to $3,756,360. The affairs of 102 insolvent banks have been finally closed at an average expense of 9.28 per centum, with an average dividend to creditors of 74.17 per centum. Attention is called to the necessity of legislation more clearly defining the duties of directors; also to the need of some further restriction upon the accommodations which may be lawfully afforded to officers and directors by way of loans and discounty.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE.

Destruction of a Large Grain Elevator and Contents at Escanaba.

Fire started in the big grain elevator owned by the "Soo" road at Escanaba which, together with 150,000 bushels of grain, was quickly destroyed. The department was powerless and the flames communicated to the four sheds, docks and coal pits. There were 10,000 barrels of flour in the sheds, and on the docks were 40,000 tons of coal owned by the Lehigh Valley and Pioneer companies, all of which were destroyed. The losses may exceed $250,000.

First Love the Strongest.

George Gould, of Detroit, son of a well-known wholesale grocer, was engaged to marry Edna Percy, a handsome and wealthy young lady of Ontario. The wedding trousseau had been prepared at a cost of $3,000, the clergyman engaged and a home handsomely furnished, but in an unguarded moment Miss Edna went across the river to call on some friends and met a former lover. The result was a rekindling of old love fires, and a hasty marriage before a justice of the peace.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by fifty observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 28 indicated that membranous croup, pneumonia, typhoid fever and cholera infantum increased, and cholera morbus, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-three places, scarlet fever at thirty-six, typhoid fever at thirty-nine and measles at seven places.

A Profitable Prison.

The first quarterly financial statement of the auditor general under the new law of the charitable, penal and reformatory institutions of the state has been made public. It shows that while the other institutions of the state have been a burden to taxpayers of from $2,000 to $32,000 each for the quarter ended September 30, the receipts have exceeded the disbursements of the Jackson prison $5,987, a state of affairs unprecedented in its history.

Spaniels Prevent a Blaze.

What might have proved a disastrous fire was prevented at Holland by two spaniel dogs. They are the property of Charles J. Richardson, and one of the canines awakened a servant by rubbing his nose against her face, who aroused their master just in time to extinguish a blaze that had already eaten a hole through the floor of his billiard hall. The fire had been started by a cigar being thrown in a wooden box filled with sawdust.

Will Have a Sanitarium.

Four Detroit capitalists have purchased of Dr. Keeley the right to use his drunkard cure, and leased a building in the village of Northville, engaged Dr. A. E. Carrier as resident physician and manager, and will start a sanitarium there. The projectors declined to say what they paid Dr. Keeley for the use of his discovery, but acknowledge the venture would require the investment of $100,000.

Will Stay by Itself.

The Michigan Masonic Mutual Benefit association at a special session in Grand Rapids decided not to amalgamate with the Mutual Reserve Life Fund association of New York, and appointed a committee, with S. S. Stevens, of Muskegon, as chairman, to present some plan for reorganization at another meeting to be held January 6.

Short but Newsy Items.

Michigan deer now have legal protection again.

Gideon Besson, a carpenter, was killed at Lake Linden by the collapse of a piece of trestle work.

Mrs. Timothy Swarbrick, who came from England in 1835 and had since resided upon a farm in Batavia township, Branch county, died at the age of 74.

Ringwood's livery barn was burned in Bay City. Loss, $1,200; insurance small. Two horses were burned.

Michigan's cigar product the past year was 112,000,000.

Alta Freeman, the 3-year-old daughter of Clarence Freeman, of Farwell, choked to death while eating chestnuts.

John Hanmer, a former resident of Bronson, was killed in the railroad accident on the Lake Shore near Englewood, Ill.

The schooner Mediator, loaded with lumber for Chicago, was driven on Pettie's reef, near St. Ignace.

John Powers, living near Clare, was said to be afflicted with leprosy of a malignant type.

In a collision between the two parts of a freight train on the Lake Shore road near Hillsdale Samuel Underwood, a brakeman was killed.

George A. Hardiker, assistant freight agent of the Grand Trunk Railroad Company at Detroit, was said to be an embezzler to the amount of $3,000.

Dan J. Pratt's jewelry store at Jackson was broken into while the proprietor was at supper and a quantity of jewelry and 100 watches were stolen. Loss, $600.

William Hagen, the Presque Isle county man who was murdered by a drunken Pole, was the father of eighteen children who are all anxious to avenge his death.

Urgel Beausejour, a poor Frenchman who has been basking upon a Flint & Pere Marquette railway train, has invented a car coupling that is destined to bring him a nice fortune.

Harry P. Merrill, a prominent citizen of Bay City, died of congestion of the lungs. He had been in the wholesale grocery business for seventeen years. A wife, son and daughter survive him.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Will Kingsley, of Holly, met death in a strange manner. It fell head foremost in a small hole in the yard that had been dug by a dog, and its clothing fell over the opening, thus shutting out the air and causing it to suffocate.

The Dear Old Soul.

Miss St. Cry was talking to old Lady Goldfoil about her heart affairs, and during the course of her conversation she said:

"Even your own son Harold, Mrs. Goldfoil, was a quondam lover of mine."

The old lady almost bounced out of her chair, but laughed it off, and when she had gone to her room she spoke to her husband.

"Well," she said, indignantly, "there may be some excuse for fashionable young woman talking about their various sweethearts, but profanity is utterly unpardonable."—Detroit Free Press.

Visitor—Wonderful! wonderful!

Little Girl (entering)—Oh, papa, see my new doll.

Visitor—Your child, I presume, professor. How old is she?

Prof. Greatmind—Um—er—my dear, go ask your mother how old you are.—N. Y. Weekly.

Didn't Miss Him.

Mrs. Jocelyn—Don't you miss your husband very much, now that he is away?

Mrs. Golightly—Oh, not at all. You see he left me plenty of money, and at breakfast I just stand a newspaper up in front of his plate and half the time forget that he really isn't there.—Puck.

He Is No Cæsar.

Mrs. Gargoyle (as her husband enters at two a. m.)—George, I have a suspicion that you have been drinking.

Gargoyle—M'dear, you should be likesh Cæsar's wife.

"How was that?"

"She was above suspicion, m'dear."—Brooklyn Life.

Foreign Limitations.

Miss Murray Hill—What were you most impressed with during your travels abroad?

Miss Beacon Street—With the fact that so few of the people I had met had ever been in Boston.—Puck.

Jealous, of Course.

Bella—Estelle is such a lucky girl. She was born with a gold spoon in her mouth.

Nell—Yes, and it must have been a tablespoon, too, I should judge.—Somerville Journal.

Her Own Fault.

"John, you've been eating cabbage."

"I haven't been doing anything of the sort, my dear wife. I've been smoking one of those cigars you gave me. That's all."—Brooklyn Life.

Not Equal to It.

North Side Mother—Oscar, why can't you be a good boy?

Wayward Four-Year-Old—Mamma, it makes me so tired!—Chicago Tribune.

Mrs. Dimsite—Willy, have you seen my sleeve buttons?

Little Willy Dimsite—Yes'm. Pa couldn't find his own this morning, so he took yours.

Mrs. Dimsite—All right. I'll wear his. They must be in plain sight somewhere.—Puck.

A Late Literary Production.

"Have you anything new?" asked a customer of a recently engaged clerk in a Chicago book store.

"I'll see," replied the young man as he swept his eye over the shelves. "Yes, here's 'The New Testament.' Would you like to look at it?"—Life.

A Question of Knowledge.

Her Adorer—May I marry your daughter, sir?

Her Father—What do you want to marry for? You don't know when you're well off.

Her Adorer—No, perhaps not; but I know when you're well off.—Life.

The Man of the House.

"Now that you have consented," said the happy young man, "I must see your papa."

"No," replied the radiant girl. "You mention it to mamma. What she says goes."—Brooklyn Life.

First Doctor—Old Jones is the meanest man in town.

Chorus of Other Doctors—Why, I never heard him called that before.

First Doctor—Well, he is. He came to me for professional advice about a year ago. I told him he was all run down, that he would have to give up business or die in three weeks, and he has worked almost night and day ever since.—Life.

THE USHER.

Who meets the people at the door
And seats them where there's room for more,
With gallantry and verve galore?
The usher.

Who, with discrimination true,
Seats well-dressed strangers in a pew
Well down the center in full view?
The usher.

Who, with a like discernment, knows
The poorer strangers by their clothes
And puts them in the rearmost rows?
The usher.

Who, when he thinks the air is close,
Will open windows and expose
Us to the draught that through them blows?
The usher.

Who then, with much conspicuous care,
Will close the windows 'mid the stare
Of all the congregation there?
The usher.

Who is the center of all eyes,
But yet to act unconscious tries,
And wears the latest thing in ties?
The usher.

Who is it that the girls all know,
For whom they oft preferment show,
Add long to have him for their beau?
The usher.

Who in all doings has a share?
Whom could the ladies never spare?
Who sells the tickets at the fair?
The usher.

Who, though with follies now beset,
These affectations will forget,
And make a right good fellow yet?
The usher.

A DEATHBED MARRIAGE.

Confidential Revelation of Miss Grigg's Strange Illness.

"Yes, miss, certainly. I lived with Mrs. Birch—Miss Grigg that was before she married Mr. Birch. I knew all about that affair. It was very singular indeed—very. I'm not sure that I ought to mention it, for if a lady's maid can't hold her tongue she can't find good places. Dear me, I'm no talker. I'm as mum as a mouse. Bushels of pearl powder and quarts of rouge have I applied with my own hands, and never so much as hinted at. As for cotton, bless your heart, I've never breathed about it, and I did live with a lady once that took arsenic regularly for her complexion. That's no secret, for she took too much one day by accident and died.

"There was an inquest and it all came out. It's well it did, for suspicion pointed to her husband. Somehow, it always seems to strike a jury that a husband is the likeliest person to wish his wife out of the way. But this isn't anything about paint. Miss Griggs, being on the stage, made no secret of that. She played queens and such, miss. I've often had tickets given me and gone with my young man to see her act. And when she was haughty and curled her nose like, miss, and looked at other folks over her shoulder, and talked away down in her throat like a pigeon gurgling, she was splendid, miss. It made think how nice it would be to be a queen and to take airs over everybody.

"Well, Miss Grigg was engaged to be married. Mr. Birch had fallen in love with her when she was playing Hamlet's ma. Perhaps you have seen the play, miss? The young man objects to his ma getting married the second time, so I seemed to make out, and acted most impertinent, giving sass to his ma and his step-pa, and carrying on awful. And there was a poor young lady quite out of her mind that afterward got drowned.

"Well, she was playing Hamlet's ma and Mr. Birch fell in love with her and sent her a letter, and called and made an offer all in no time. She accepted him, of course, and the preparations for the wedding began. I don't think any lady ever had so many dresses before. Silks and satins and velvets and laces. Dear me, Mme. ——'s whole establishment was hard at work for a month, and if I'd had twenty fingers, instead of ten, I'd have had use for them all.

At last everything was finished. The trunks were packed, fifteen of 'em, miss, and fourteen were to go on that afternoon, and one—the one with the wedding and traveling dresses—was, of course, to be left and go with the bride when she started next day. She was to be married at ten o'clock in church and then drive home, have a splendid breakfast, change her dress and catch the three o'clock train. Of course I saw to the trunks, and was very careful; but just when I was needed most, just as the trunks was going downstairs, Miss Grigg called me.

"Miss Grigg was a lady who didn't like to wait. I went to her at once, miss, as was my duty, and I said to Bridget Duster, the chambermaid:

"'Bridget, watch that black trunk and see that the men don't carry it off.'

"Bridget understood with her elbows, of course, miss, and after I had been to the land's end for two yards of blue ribbon of exactly such a shade as she wanted and got back I found that she had sent off the black trunk first of all, and was very proud of having been so careful. The trunks were all miles away by that time. There was nothing for it but to tell Miss Grigg. She flew at me, miss. I don't blame her for being angry. I would forgive her in such a case. She flew at me violent, miss; and then, miss, she had spasms. She beat the sofa, she tore her hair, she screeched, and me all the while saying:

"'Remember your eyes, miss. Think how you'll look. Your nose is swelling dreadful, miss.'

"Finally she came to and bathed her face. And says she:

"'Flora, what—shall—I do?'

"'I don't know, miss,' said I, 'unless you put off the wedding until you telegraph for the trunk.'

"'No,' said she, 'that's unlucky; besides, one never knows. None ain't to be depended on.'

"'You might borrow a dress,' said I.

"'As if I'd be married in one that didn't fit me,' said she. 'Stop, don't speak a word. I've an idea.'

"She sat with one finger on her lip for awhile. Then she said:

"'My embroidered dressing-gown. The white one! That's here?'

"'In the bureau, miss,' said I.

"'Very well,' said she. 'I'll be married in that. Telegraph for the trunk, Flora.'

"'The white dressing-gown, miss?' said I, nearly astonished out of my senses.

"'Yes,' said she, 'the white dressing-gown, goose; you don't think I'm going to be married in church in that. I won't put off the wedding, and I won't stand up before a crowd in anything but my white satin dress! But I'll be married at the appointed hour for all that. So telegraph for my trunk and come back soon.'

"When I came back I found Miss Grigg in bed and the doctor sent for. He was puzzled. I could see that. He couldn't tell what was the matter, and Miss Grigg was too faint to speak. He questioned me. I said she had been very much agitated. He prescribed something and went off, bidding me send for him if she seemed worse. The evening papers published the report that Miss Grigg was dangerously ill, and Mr. Birch came to the hotel in a terrible fright, as pale as a sheet, to ask how she was. I took him down 'her love, and she was very ill.'

"Then Miss Grigg said to the ladies who came in: 'Leave me with my faithful Flora,' and we were left alone. I can't say that I was surprised when she sat up in bed and said briskly:

"'Lock the door, Flora. I'm sick of lying on my back. I've taken them in, haven't I? You see what I am about now?'

"'Exactly, miss,' said I, 'to be too ill to be married when the time comes.'

"'No,' said she, 'to be ill enough to be married in the white dressing-gown. I'm going to be married on my dying-bed, Flora.'

"I gave a screech and she laughed, and then she made a supper of sardines and biscuits and wine, and she threw the medicine out of the window. Early next day the doctor came. I answered his question as to what sort of a night his patient had passed by saying she had been 'much the same.' And then I took a little note she had written to Mr. Birch.

"I knew what was in it. She told him 'that rather than leave the world without keeping her vow to him she would be married on her dying-bed.' I powdered her up well, miss, and dressed her in the embroidered dressing-gown, with tuberoses at the throat. I pulled down the green shades and darkened the room. She fixed the pillows to prop herself up with and then skipped into bed.

"'Give me my pearl bracelets,' she said, 'and the handsomest of those handkerchiefs and all my rings; and Flora, mind you must sob all through the ceremony; I'm going to be calm.'

"We hadn't five minutes more, but just as the first knock came to the door she whispered:

"'Oh, dear! if I only could have slow music. Couldn't you catch that "Traviata" organ, Flora, and get him to play for half an hour outside the window? He's always on the corner. Flora, I'll leave you something handsome if you do.'

"I did it, short as the time was. I caught the man and he ground out his quarter's worth.

"The clergyman was a very nice, neat, nearsighted old gentleman. Mr. Birch was the dreadfulest sight—pale as a ghost and shaking from head to foot. The groomsman looked dreadfully sorry; the four or five intimate friends looked as though they were at a funeral; and to see her, with her calm smile and powdered face, one hand against her heart, the other in his—I was glad I'd been told to sob; I had to do something. And so they were married.

"'I feel,' said Miss Grigg, slowly, 'that this, perhaps the last moment of my life, is very sweet. To die thus, with my hand in yours—ah! Dear friend, adieu. Flora, my faithful maid, take this ring.' I saw her pick out the cheapest; but no matter. 'Remember me by it. Now—leave us.'

"Then everybody kissed her and went out of the room sobbing.

"In a moment more there was a scream; Mr. Birch had fainted away. It took an hour to bring him to.

"The reporter of the evening paper was waiting outside for the news. It was published all over that night, but the next afternoon the traveling dress came back in the black trunk.

"Yes, miss, of course Miss Grigg—I mean to say Mrs. Birch—recovered at once. And that's the whole story. I'm the only one that knows it, and I wouldn't mention it to anyone but you, ma'am."—N. Y. News.

A New Kind of Rubber.

A new description of rubber, to which the name of rathite has been given, is now made in England. It had been found that pure rubber is unsuitable for many purposes, on account of its great elasticity. For instance, railway buffers, if made of the pure material, are too soft to withstand the great crushing force often brought against them. Cycle tires, also, if too elastic, are apt to stretch off the rim of the wheel in spite of all attempts to fasten them by means of cement. The usual mode of counteracting the superabundant elasticity of rubber goods and at the same time reduce the cost of production is to add mineral powders, such as chalk or metallic oxides, litharge, zinc, etc. The new material, which supersedes all such combinations, is said to consist of pure rubber (combined with the usual proportion of sulphur to effect vulcanization) and silk fiber in a finely divided state. The result is an article which appears well adapted for all purposes where toughness and durability are desired rather than an extreme elasticity.

—One of the famous wits of New York, quoted the country over, was the late John R. Traverse. It seems that Gen. Sherman and Mr. Travers were classmates at the West Point Military academy, although Mr. Travers did not graduate because of the impediment in his speech. He couldn't give the order to fire. The way he put it was: "Ready! Aim! F—f—f—! Shoot!"

Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company

OF MILWAUKEE, WIS.

PERSONAL TO YOU.

The first dividends on Tontine Policies of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, paid this year, 1891, are from 40 to 55 percent. larger than similar Tontine Dividends in the New York Companies. This protentous truth has made the agents of those companies more industrious than ever in circulating slanders upon the Northwestern, and in endeavoring to show by false ratios and delusive figures that the "Northwestern's dividends have been falling off. If it can be proved: First, That the Northwestern's dividends are running down; or, Second, that the Northwestern's dividends on similar policies in past and present are not anywhere from 40 to 250 per cent larger than the dividends of the Companies whose agents are circulating these delusive attacks, then the Northwestern agent will agree willingly and forever to retire from Life Insurance business and leave the field free to the attacking Companies. We want no business and ask for no man's application unless we can prove that the Northwestern will do better by him than any other company.

The lecture on "The Championship," by Henry W. Tewksbury, last Thursday evening, gave good satisfaction to the greater part of the audience, altho' the general verdict was that he was a trifle below the standard required to captivate a Clinton audience.

The next entertainment on the course will be a lecture by James Phelps Leland, Jan'y 18th. This news is hailed with delight, as his lecture here last winter on "World-making" was one of the finest ever delivered here, and whatever the subject may be it is certain to be handled with a vigor and earnestness that cannot fail to impress an audience with the sincerity of his words.

"It is a pleasure to inform you of the good that S. S. S. has done me. I had blood poison several years ago, which had never been eradicated from my system. Last November it broke out in the shape of salt-rheum on the back of my hands. I spent sixty dollars trying to be cured by the treatment of physicians and taking other medicines, and never found any benefit from any treatment until I commenced taking S. S. S. That cured me sound and well, and now I feel that I am a well man. I took only three bottles. I have recommended the medicine to a great many people and find that it is benefitting them as well as myself."—S. S. RUSSELL, Horse Plains, Montana.

S. S. S. never fails to relieve the worst cases of blood poison when taken by the directions, and before some vital organ has become impaired, so as to render a cure impossible. We will mail a valuable book on the blood and skin to any who will apply for it.

Albert English followed with a number of press clippings, ranging in thought from the tariff and currency questions to humorous anecdotes that "brought down the house."

Henry Palmer's paper on the subject for discussion—"Winter Care of Live Stock"—was a good one. He particularly emphasized the value of pure water for stock, especially sheep, and he also advocated cutting up the corn fodder before feeding it, and said many things of profit on the topic.

Mrs. Eva Spafard favored the company with music, and so closed another enjoyable and long-to-be-remembered club meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the residence of Lyman M. Baldwin, one-half mile north of the Iron Creek church, on Friday, January 8th.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Room Dec. 7th, 1891, 7 p. m.

Regular session. Present, President Howell, Trustees Bidwell, James, Shull, Smith, and the recorder. Absent, Recs. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The special committee appointed Sept. 21st, to take into consideration the petition of citizens asking the council to investigate the question of establishing a permanent system of water supply for the village, made a written report through its chairman, J. D. Shull, of which the following is the substance:—

A majority of the people seem to be in favor of the project. Among the reports from several places, the report cites that of Hudson and Sturgis. Hudson has the direct pressure system with a pumping capacity of one million gallons in 24 hours. It gives good satisfaction. Cost $30,000. Expense of operating, $2,000 to 2,200 per year. Sturgis also has the Holly system. They have two Gordon pumps of 850,000 gallons capacity each. System gives good satisfaction. Cost of plant, $30,000.

Your committee are also of the opinion that our wells should be outside the village limits, to guard against contamination from cesspools, etc. They think the expense of a system extensive enough to be satisfactory would be at least $30,000, exclusive of any sewers.

The committee are also of the opinion that the desirability and advantages accruing from an efficient system of water works would be in proportion to the extent of their use. This should be as nearly universal as possible, and as a means to this end the rates should be low. If owned by the village, the charges could be placed so as to simply cover cost which of course no company would be expected to do. If the village could operate them as cheaply as a private corporation the rates would be lower than any company would make them.

The committee did not believe our village charter would permit the issuing of bonds for this purpose but believed that a provision in the general statutes was broad enough to warrant it. We met, however, with enough conflicting opinion relative thereto so that we sent a copy of our charter to Watts, Bean & Smith, with a concise statement of the case and asked for counsel.

In reply we received a communication which is hereto appended. All of which is submitted by your committee, who respectfully ask to be relieved from further consideration of the subject.

JOHN D. SHULL.
CHAS. BIDWELL.
A. L. BREWER.
O. P. BILLS.

Accompanying the above report was a letter from Watts, Bean & Smith, of Adrian, giving it as their opinion that the village charter does not grant sufficient authority to the council to issue bonds for $30,000 for construction of water works, but that there is a provision of the general statutes broad enough for the purpose.

On motion the above report was received and the committee discharged.

Moved that the president appoint a special committee of three to take into consideration the proper steps to take to bring the question before the people, and report at the next regular meeting. Carried.

The chair appointed as such committee—Messrs. Shull, Bidwell and James.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The sexton reported two adult interments for November. Accompanying his report was treasurer's receipt for $20.00 interment fees.

On motion the report was adopted and ordered placed on file.

The street commissioner reported the following work done in November: Team labor, 11 days, 1 1-2 hours; hand labor, 13 days, 1 1-2 hours.

Also, poll tax collected, $11.00.

Also, that he had built the following sidewalks as per resolution of the council.

Steinhoff's walk on Evans street, between Morrison's and Bremerseh's lots, 58 feet, 4 inches long, 5 feet wide, $13.77.

Mrs. Hiram Westcott's walk, on south side of Chicago street, between Democratic and Adrian streets, 99 1-2 feet long, 5 feet wide, $22,38.

Mrs. Jane Wheeler's walk on north side of Pottawatamie street, between Democratic and Adrian streets, 99 1-2 feet long, 4 feet wide, $14.56.

Mrs. Ira Pennock's walk, on west side of Mill street, between Spalding's and VanTyne's lots, 76 1-2 feet long, 4 feet wide, $13.32.

Wm. C. Heck's walk, on west side of Maumee street, between E. Branch school house and Zeluff's lot, 96 feet long, 4 feet wide, $20.66.

On motion the street commissioners report was accepted and ordered filed.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were read and referred to the finance committee:—Moreland Bros. & Crane, oil, $14.88; A. James purchasing agent, $24.92; Tecumseh Electric Co., 31 arc lights for November, $150.00; Watts, Bean & Smith, legal opinion concerning water works, $5.00; Jas. Potter, oil and sundries, $7.37; T. R. Kyle, marshal, $14.00; B. Bartholomew, street labor, $1.25; Wm. Mellon, team labor, $1.00; W. H. Spalding, labor, 50c.; A. Hyde, street commissioner, $25.50.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills and, on motion, orders were directed drawn for the several amounts.

The council then adjourned.

CHARLES F. FIELD, Recorder.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as I ever did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

A GOOD SCHEME.

A BUSINESS SUGGESTION TO THE FARMERS OF NORTHERN LENAWEE.

Shall We Have a Farmer's Exchange? A Few Practical Hints on the Utility of Such an Exchange.

We have long thought that a reasonable amount of space in our columns could be devoted to a "Farmers' Exchange" department, which the farmers of Northern Lenawee might use to their mutual benefit and profit. Nearly every farmer has some domestic animal on his farm, or some special kind of grain or seed which he would be glad to dispose of for cash or exchange for some other kind of property. The trouble is, no one knows the fact but himself. Many a farmer wishes to buy articles, property or stock of various kinds, but does not know where to find them. Can these two classes be brought together? Certainly they can be, and the process is as easy as a simple twist of the wrist.

To test the practicability of such a scheme we shall open a Farmers' Exchange column in the month of January. During the four issues of that month we will run a special notice, not exceeding five lines in length for the sum of twenty-five cents per week. The notice should give the name and post office address of the patron and the property which he may wish to sell or exchange. Below are a few samples of these notices:

JOHN DOE, TIPTON, MICH.—One Jersey cow five years old, five bushels prime clover seed, one mustang pony, broke for saddle, to sell cheap.

RICHARD ROE, CLINTON, MICH.—Ten good colonies of bees to exchange for a few Merino ewes.

PETER SMITH, MACON, MICH.—A Milburn wagon and a double farm harness, in use only one year. Will be sold cheap.

SAM BROWN, BRITTON, MICH.—A splendid breeding mare, 8 year old, will exchange for a pair of good ponies.

JOSHUA GREEN, HOLLOWAY, MICH.—Ten fine Holstein heifers registered, one and two years old, one Holstein cow three years old registered, to exchange for a first class heavy farm team.

JAMES ROBINSON, RIDGEWAY, M.—A Walter A. Wood self binder used two seasons, a Hiley road wagon as good as new, one light single harness, will sell cheap.

The first issue of January next will be on Thursday, Jan. 7th, and all notices ought to be handed in not later than Saturday Jan. 2d, '92. Try the experiment, gentlemen, for one month. The expense for each person is a mere trifle and we believe it will realize a handsome profit on the investment. There should be five hundred of these notices in the HERALD during January, and we confidently assert that even one hundred would effect the sale of thousands of dollars worth of property that would otherwise remain unsold. There are big possibilities in this scheme if it be properly taken advantage of. Now is the accepted time, gentlemen. Go in and win.

Bad roads. Yes, we should say so.

The Sunday School will give an entertainment at the church Christmas eve.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Two more new students at the beginning of last week.

A good bit of of skating was had last week, but the muddy weather of Monday spoiled it.

Thoughts of the soon coming examinations are now uppermost in the minds of the students here.

The principal attraction of our literary society last week was a song entitled, "Seven little shaking Quakers," which was acted out very successfully.

During the clear evenings of last week several very satisfactory views of the planet mercury were obtained by those interested in astronomy. This planet is so near the sun that it is hardly ever seen.

Our literary society will give an entertainment on Wednesday evening, Dec., 23d. An excellent program has been prepared and time nor care has been spared in its preparation. Ten cents admission will be charged and the proceeds are to be used in obtaining papers for the reading room. Everybody who is interested come.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 17, 1891.

Ten thousand Mississippi negros want to emigrate to Africa. The last watermelon crop in that State was a failure. Perhaps that accounts for it.

Some of the G. O. P. organs are afraid that the Speakership contest has split the Democratic party for 1892. But a good many more of them are afraid that it hasn't.

Secretary Tracy's report shows that the Navy is the most successful department of the Government. And the Navy is run at present on cast-iron Civil Service principles.

Folger, Manning and Windom all died at their posts as Secretary of the Treasury. And now Secretary Foster is dangerously ill with slight prospects of recovery. Some honors come high.

In order to properly celebrate the late elections in Ohio and Pennsylvania there has been a cut of 20 per cent in the wages of the employees of the Pittsburg wire works. So it goes. How the McKinley bill lifts wages.

The attempt that is made by some over-zealous partisans to construe the election of Crisp for Speaker as an anti-Cleveland triumph will amount to nothing. Many of Mr. Crisp's strongest supporters are Cleveland men. The field for the Presidential nomination is still open.

Representative Jerry Simpson drew a first-class prize in the lottery for choice of seats, and selected a seat in the front row, where he cannot fail to attract the Speaker's attention every time he says "Mr. Speaker," and unless he changes his mind he will say it very often during the session.

Young Sherman Hoar, who is a democratic member of the House as well as a nephew of Senator Hoar, who is about as radical a Republican as could be found, is said to have cried like a child when Mills was defeated. If he remains in political life long enough he will get bravely over that sort of thing.

Some Republican organs are very gleefully assuming that Crisp's election will block tariff reform. The wish is father to the prediction. Speaker Crisp would be powerless to block tariff reform, even if he should so desire, and we have no reason to suppose that he has any such intention.

The eight members of the Farmers' Alliance who supported Representative Watson, of Georgia, for Speaker, deny that they were disappointed because more of the Alliance members did not vote together, and claim that they will surprise some people when any bill endorsing any of the Alliance principles shall come to a vote in the House, by the strength they will be able to display.

No business of any importance except organizing is ever done during the first week of a new Congress, and this Congress is no innovation in that respect: the House adjourned from Wednesday to Saturday, when it will adjourn to next Wednesday; and owing to the nearness of the Christmas holiday season and the doubt whether Speaker Crisp will get the chairmanships of committees announced before the recess, it is safe to assume that the serious work of the session will not begin until January. It is just as well perhaps for the majority in the House that this is so, as the soothing effect of time will be beneficial to the soreness which now exists among those who fought so hard to make Mr. Mills Speaker.

Ex-Speaker Reed doesn't seem to be in love with Bro. Blaine's reciprocity. While talking with a group of Republicans the other day in the lobby of the Capitol, one of the party was bewailing the loss of the House. "But we still have South America," said Mr. Reed, winking significantly. "As long as our great secretary of state holds onto Paraguay and Patagonia and Costa Rica, we can afford to give up the house of representatives. I understand that in some of these countries in which Mr. Blaine is opening markets, the people occasionally wear collars, and in some parts of Brazil they wear shirts on Sunday. It will be a great stroke of statesmanship if Mr. Blaine secures complete control of such markets."

THE SUGAR BOUNTY.

The sugar beet growers of California are afraid the bounty decreed them will not stay by. The Santa Cruz Sentinel has apprehension also lest competition may eventually hurt the business, and between the two possibilities of disaster "the business cease to be more profitable than the average of other staple enterprises." The sentiment in the quotation contains the gist and spirit of the whole tariff argument. A business aided by the government must promise to be more profitable than common "staple enterprises." It must be granted unusual favor, and not be expected to take the ups and owns of trade conditions with other enterprises. If competition is too great, the government must interfere and "regulate" somehow, while other industries are shirking for themselves. If prices go down the tariff must go up, or something must be done. Once taken under the wing of government shelter, the industry cries like an unweaned child if it isn't coddled and taken care of. That is what government aid means, or it ceases to be aid. If bounties were paid on all other crops grown that can make the plea of necessity for aid as justly, where would be the benefit? The primary meaning of the tariff is discrimination—aiding one class of producers at the expense of another. It is a phase of the question that the high tax advocates always avoid, because they cannot meet it. They generalize by saying if one class prospers all prosper proportionately, a fallacy on the face of it as every observer knows and all history proves. An organ of this theory recently proclaimed that farms and maket gardens always flourish if protected factories are placed in their midst. He didn't call attention to various manufacturing districts in New England for proof. He new better than to attempt to illustrate his theory.

The California beet growers have struck the key note of the tariff, or bounty principal: if the government will not pledge to keep my business above "the profit of staple enterprises," I will not engage in it. The administration which decrees favors expects large returns, and so class legislation is built upon a foundation of pure selfishness and greed, and people blinded by partisan fondness, help to clasp the chain around their own wrist. The marvelous prosperity of the few is proclaimed for national wealth and advancement, while the unequal distribution of this wealth grows with every year of such rule and policy.—Toledo Bee.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

How Congress Received the President's Message. Seventeen New Senators. Organization of the New House. Mr. Blaine's coming letter.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12, '91.

It has been positively and directly stated within the past 24 hours by a friend of Secretary Blaine's, that Mr. Blaine will before the new year, make a public announcement, that he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination at Minneapolis next June, and that, in fact, he would be completely out of the Presidential contest. The President and Secretary Blaine held a long conference yesterday and as a result it is also stated that Stephen B. Elkins will receive the nomination of Secretary of War. Unless something unforseen happens to materially change the situation, President Harrison will receive the biggest kind of a political gift in Mr. Blaine,s letter of declination, and the Secretary's West Virginia friend will be honored with a place in the Cabinet.

The Senate of the Fifty Second Congress receives seventeen new members, an unprecedented influx of new comers. The new senators represent a good deal of diverse talent. At least one is a millionaire; another is a physician; several are printers; one is a clergyman and a number are lawyers. Republicans five; Democrats nine; and Farmers' Alliance three.

Some of the desks at which these Solons will sit are historical. The identical desk at which Henry Clay and Daniel Webster sat are still in use. No one but Captain Bassett knows them. He declines to tell which are the desks because the relic hunters would not leave them unmolested. The venerable Captain Bassett, who is in charge of the Senate Chamber, commenced as a page fifty-seven yers ago.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

There are three hundred and thirty-six seats in the House. Only eighty-eight of which are filled by Republicans. The officers of the Fifty-second Congress are as follows: Chas. F. Crisp, of Georgia, Speaker; James Kerr, of Penn., Clerk; Samuel S. Yoder, of Ohio, Sergent-at-Arms; Charles H. Turner, of N. Y., Doorkeeper; Lycurgus Dalton, of Ind., Postmaster; Blind Preacher, Eloquent Milburn, Chaplain. Historic will be the contest that made Mr. Crisp Speaker. Thirty times did he charge upon the combined phalanx of the opposing forces. Twenty-nine times was he repulsed. Then came the end. The little forces that had so gallantly stood by McMillan and Springer, relieved from their obligations, devided between the two great competitors, Mr. Crisp receiving the gravel by a vote of 119 to 105 for the doughty Texan. Four votes still remaining for Springer. Mr. O'Neil, of Mass., voting for his colleague Mr. Stevens.

The Democrats here are generally satisfied with the result and the general opinion among them is that it will have no bearing on the question of the Presidential nomination.

There is one thought in connection with the Speakership of the Fifty-second Congress which must forcibly strike the country. Mr. Crisp is the first Southern man—for Carlisle could not be considered such—to occupy this high place in the Federal Government since the civil war. It is thirty-four years, indeed since the election of James L. Orr, of South Carolina, who presided over the House, 1857-59. The South has been compelled to endure a long probationship in this respect. It will fully appreciate the nature of the triumph of to-day.

COMPOSITION OF THE COMMITTEES.

The composition of the committees is naturally the uppermost topic of interest on the House side of the Capitol. It is not at all likely that the committees will be announced before the holidays, although it is understood that the Speaker will make every effort to bring about this result. Speaker Reed, it will be remembered, managed to complete this list before the House last session adjourned over Christmas, but his task was a light one compared to that which now confronts the Speaker.

In the first place there are 234 Democrats to whom positions must be allotted, and a large majority of these are new members, whose fitness or adaptability for committee work has yet to be learned. The fact that there are only 88 Republicans to place, will result in a radical change in the number of the minority on the committees.

HOW THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE WAS RECEIVED.

"Here comes the message; let's go and smoke." Thus was the annual message of the President received by 4-5 of the grave and reverend Senators of the United States.

It was much the same way in the House. A few of the old school statesmen who could not sleep o' nights if they had shown what they considered disrespect to the American Constitution, Goddess of Liberty and Uncle Sam, remained to hear the clerks read this important State document, and a number of brand new statesmen, who won't do it again, remained with them.

It took about three-quarters of an hour to do the reading in the House and sixty minutes in the Senate. Now and then a Senator interested in certain sections of the message would stalk in, cock his ear, grunt a "Humph" when the section was finished and disappear in the cloak room.

Representatives also grunted approval or disapproval according to the way in which the President's views struck them and if the grunt was one of disapproval the grunter immediately sought the protection which the cloak room grants.

DESERTED SENATE GALLERIES.

The galleries of the Senate were deserted, with the exception of 5 foreigners, who occupied seats in the diplomatic gallery and listened attentively for anything bearing upon the relations of their country. The only man who listened to the Message throughout was Jerry Simpson, who refused to see any callers during its reading. Bland of Missouri listened until the silver clause had been read and then left the chamber in disgust. Mr. Herbert of Alaska, whose hobby is naval affairs, followed suit, leaving after the naval clause had been passed. The document is generally commended for its direct style and clearness. Some of the Republicans, however, appeared disappointed because Mr. Harrison has failed to take an advance position on any one subject for legislation. There were evidently no surprises in the document. About every thing appeared to have been expected.

Godey's will continue the Children's Corner, which has been so favorably received and enjoyed by our younger readers.

Godey's will give you in fact the best of everything within its covers. Including as it does literature, fashions, music, engravings, dress hints, home talks, etiquette, etc., etc.

With the January issue we will begin two new serials entitled: "The Discipline of Pain," by Edgar Fawcett. A story of New York life, written in his best vein and manner. His national reputation is at any time a guarantee of an interesting novelette. "Marjorie Lee," by Margaret Spencer, whose bright and attractive letters from Washington have met with so much favor from our readers. The story is located in the Capital, and as the authoress herself resides there it is full of real incidents. We predict for "Marjorie Lee" a warm reception from our subscribers, who will be sure to find her very winsome, and feel that the authoress has worked for them a fairy web that has many beauties and real interest woven in its meshes.

For the latter months we have a number of serials and short stories by the best authors. "The Legend of the Lantern," by Mrs. Olivia Lovell Wilson. This charming story will run through several numbers, and will be illustrated with original photogravures by Will Phillip Hooper. "The Autobiography of Mary," by Ada Marie Peek. To those who have read "The Filjean Mastery," by this author, we need say nothing except that it is thought to be better, if possible, than any of her previous efforts.

In addition to our usual number of short stories, we shall publish a series of articles entitled: "Advice from Everywhere," by Olivia Phillips, embracing such subjects as "The Sick Room," "Home Nursery," Children's Nursery," "Amusements for the Shut-ins," "A Minister's Outing," "A Year Well Spent," etc.

Augusta Salisbury Prescott, well known from her writing for the great New York newspapers, the World, Advertiser, etc., continues to write for us, and during the year will furnish a series of articles that will be well worth the price of the magazine, entitled "New Year Receptions," "An Afternoon Tea, "Jennie is going to be Married," "Wedding Presents," etc.

Belle C. Greene, whose humorous sketches, The Hawkins Family, have made her famous in this way, will give us some new features which, we are assured, will be more mirth-provoking than her previous efforts.

Godey furnishes during the year over 1,000 pages of entertaining, illustrative, useful home matter, desirable and instructive to every lady in the land.

The St. Louis Republic.

The coming year will be crowned with events of absorbing interest. Congress will be in session, with a large democratic majority in the House, and a republican majority in the Senate. The National Conventions will meet to nominate canidates for President and Vice-President, followed by one of the closest and most hotly contested political campaigns in the history of the country. During this time, every citizen must take some live and progressive newspaper. Any of the metropolitan weeklies may be had for $1.00 a year, but why subscribe for one of them when you can get The St. Louis Republic twice every week, for the same price. It is issued every Tuesday and Friday, and gives the news half a week ahead of any weekly in every State of the Union. Subscribe now, get it from the beginning of the pending session of Congress, until the election of 1892. Sample copies will be sent free on application to The Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

Cheap Reading.

We have made arrangements whereby we can furnish the HERALD and Detroit Weekly Tribune four months for only fifty cents, and we can make the same terms for the HERALD and Weekly Free Press. That is, the HERALD and either of the Detroit Weeklies, two papers, four months for fifty cents. This offer will be held open but a short time. Now is your chance to secure cheap reading.

THE RISE OF TRUSTS.

Harrison's Promises Not Carried Out—How the Trusts Were Cared For in the McKinley Tariff—Sherman's Anti-Trust Law a Boomerang.

In his letter accepting the nomination for the presidency by the high tariff party, Benjamin Harrison said: "The declaration of the convention against all combinations of capital, organized in trusts or otherwise, to control arbitrarily the condition of trade among our citizens, is in harmony with the views entertained and publically expressed by me long before the assembling of the convention."

This sentiment, as it was understood by the people, meant that if he were elected nothing would be done by his administration to foster trusts, but that every effort would be put forth to suppress them. But as soon as the election was over all this was forgotten. The trusts and monopolies elected him and their reward was the passage of the McKinley tariff, in the formation of which each trust was given full control to prepare the schedule of duties on its particular products.

In order, however, to pull the wool over the eyes of the people and as far as possible to detract their attention from the tariff the anti-trust law, prepared by Senator Sherman, was enacted. At the same time the trusts were given to understand that this law was not intended to become operative, accordingly the formation of trusts went on as before.

The truth of this is shown by the fact that the attorney-general, whose duty it is to execute the law, has not instituted a single suit, though the law was enacted about a year ago—thus himself violating the plain and explicit commands of the act.

Nor did the friendly attitude toward the trusts of the president stop here, for after the death of Secretary Windom he appointed as his successor a member of the window glass trust, Charles Foster.

Here is a list of a few of the largest trusts which depend on the tariff for their existence and on which the present administration relies for its existence in the future:

1. Borax trust. It embraces all the borax mines of California and Oregon. No borax is found abroad, but imported boracic acid was a competitive product. On this the duty was increased from 3 cents to 5 cents per pound. The duty on borax is 3 cents and 5 cents per pound.

2. Linseed oil trust. It controls the mills and markets. Tariff protection 32 cents per gallon on linseed oil.

3. Cotton oil trust. This trust embraces several smaller ones, among them the Little Rock cotton oil combination. Its stock is heavily watered. Tariff protection 10 cents per gallon

4. National white lead trust. This trust controls to great extent the production of pig lead and absolutely most of white lead and analogous products. So powerful is its control over the markets that it is able to keep up the price to the import point, and therefore gets all the bonus the tariff allows. Any surplus which it finds on its hands is sold for export at discounted prices. Protection on pig lead 2 cents and on white lead 3 cents per pound.

5. Acid trust. Embracing the manufacturers of sulphuric acid east of the Mississippi river. Protection ¼c per pound; formerly free.

6. Castor oil trust. Protection 80 cents per gallon.

7. Wool alcohol trust. This is a branch of the whisky trust, known as the Distillers & Cattle Feeders' Co.

8. Window glass trust. It embraces window glass factories in New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Secretary Foster is a member of this trust. Negotiations are now pending among the glass manufacturers to form a trust to include all the window glass houses in the country. Protection, over 100 per cent.

9. Table glassware trust. This trust, under the name of the United States Glass Co., controls factories in Ohio and Pennsylvania. It was formed soon after the McKinley tariff raised increased duties to 60 per cent. and at once raised prices. Many of the factories in this trust declared dividends of over 60 per cent. last year as per treasurers' reports.

10. Sanitary earthenware trust, composed of seven factories in Trenton, N. J., and East Liverpool, O. As soon as the McKinley tariff became law it made a cut in wages and advanced prices. Protection, 55 and 60 per cent.

11. School slate trust. Protection, 30 per cent.

12. Gypsum trust (plaster of Paris). This trust controls every important mill in the United States. Protection, $1 to $1.75 per ton.

13. Steel trusts. Bessemer Steel association, makers of blooms and slabs; Merchant's Steel association, finished steel; Western Steel, of Chicago; Ohio Steel, mostly controlled by English capital. These trusts control the manufacture of beam, channel and structural iron and steel. Protection heavy.

14. Wire rod trust. Composed of western mills. Protection, 6-10c per pound.

15. Shot trust. Two and one-half cents per pound protection.

16. Copper trust. This trust is known as the Association of Copper Manufacturers in the United States. Controls all copper products. Meets once a year to fix prices. Protection, 35 and 45 per cent.

17. Asbestos trust. This trust is composed of five firms in Boston, New York and Chicago. Protection, 25 per cent.

18. American ax and edge tool trust. Organized in February, 1890. Previous to its organization best quality was sold at $5.25 to $6.00 per dozen; present selling price; $7.00 to $7.50 per dozen. This trust sells handled axes for export at less prices than it will sell the axes without handles to home consumers. Protection 45 per cent.

19. Steel rail trust. This is one of the most important of the trusts. It is composed of the six mills now making steel rails—every one of which has cut down wages since the enactment of the McKinley tariff. Carnegie has reduced wages since. Protection 6-10 cent per pound.

20. Barbed wire trust. Organized in St. Louis in 1882. It embraces nineteen companies. Protection 6-10 cent per pound.

21. Scrap and T-hinge trust. Organized in New York. It advanced prices 20 per cent. Protection 2¼ cents per pound.

22. Coffee trust. Embraces sixty companies. Prices have been raised 35 per cent. Protection, 35 per cent.

23. Sugar trust. Reorganized in 1889 under the name of the Sugar Refineries Co. Twenty factories entered the trust, one-half of which have since been dismantled. Protection, ¾ cent per pound.

24. Glucose trust. Protection, ¾ cent per pound.

25. Cigarette trust. Protection, $4.50 per pound.

26. Oat meal trust. Composed of fourteen constituent companies. It has made a heavy cut in wages. Protection, 1 cent per pound.

27. Salt trust. Organized in New York state early this year. It raised prices at once. Protection, 8 to 12 cents per 100 pounds.

28. Starch trust, organized in Buffalo, February 1890, composed of about 18 concerns, lump starch was sold for $55 per ton before the trust was formed. The trust raised the price to over $75 per ton. Protection 2 cents per pound.

29. Jute bagging trust. Protection 1 6-10 and 1 8-18 cents per yard.

30. Oil cloth trust. Comprised of the manufacturers of table, shelf and stair oil cloths. Portection 30 to 40 per cent.

31. Twine or Cordage trust. This combination is composed of over thirty corporations and has heavy financial backing. Protection on cordage 7-10 cent per pound.

32. Cartridge trust. Nothing pleases the high tariff Inter Ocean of Chicago so much as its charges against this trust for selling cheaper to foreigners, and yet the other trusts do the same. Protection 35 per cent.

33. Distillers and cattle feeders' trust; also known as the whisky trust. It has complete control of all northern distilleries. Protection very high.

33. Cracker, cake and biscuit trusts. The New York Biscuit Co. controls trade east of Chicago; the American Biscuit Co. has all the trade west of Chicago. The former has a capital of $5,000,000, the latter one of $10,000,000. They advanced prices 20 per cent. after dividing the field as above. Protection 20 per cent.

The above is but a partial list of the tariff protected industries which number over one hundred. Everyone knows that the anti-trust law will not be enforced as against them, now that a member of one of the leading trusts is Harrison's secretary of the treasury. So long as the McKinley tariff stands so long will these trusts flourish. Abolish it and they will disappear.

HOME MARKET RESULTS.

A Question Suggested For Protectionists to Answer.

Will some member of the McKinley party please explain how it is that laborers in industries benefited by "protection" usually vote against the system that, according to McKinley logic, provides them with bread and butter, while the votes that sustain "protection" come largely from rural districts in no way benefited, but in many ways cursed by "protection" to manufactured articles they have to buy?

For instance, the large manufacturing cities of New York are democratic, while the rural counties are oftener republican or have been so. Admitting that protection has built all the mills that have been erected in New York for the last thirty years, where is the farmer benefited by the supposed "home market" accompaniments? He has lost half the value of his farm during this time, and often has had to mortgage the other half for all it is worth. It is a remarkable fact that farm values have declined most near these home markets. Albany, Schenectady and Amsterdam have doubled their populations during the last fifteen years. In this same time farm values, even within a few miles of corporation lines, have declined 50 per cent., while abandoned farms are numerous within twenty or thirty miles from any of these flourishing, protected cities. Surely, if this sort of a "home market" has any virtues, for the farmer its good effects ought to be manifest in such plain cases as these.

But the truth is that "protection" has not built the vast majority of these mills, that it does not provide any appreciable home market for farm products and that the benefits from protection go neither to farmers nor wage-workers but to manufacturers and trust corporations. The wage-earners have found this out and refuse to support a system that taxes them for the benefit of manufacturers. That the farmer may yet see and vote for his own interests is the wish of all honest, intelligent citizens.

Who Pays the Tin Plate Tax.

A late number of the Iron Age, a leading protection trade paper, gives the market quotations for tin plate in New York and in a cable report the same for London. Bessemer steel plates, known to the trade as "IC coke finish," one of the most widely used grades, are quoted at $5.75 per box in New York and 13s 6d to 13s 9d in London. The English prices are equal to $3.25 per box. The duty is $2.37 per box. Thus the McKinley tariff is keeping the home prices of plates equal to the foreign cost, plus the duty and cost of importing. This shows clearly the absurdity of the claim that the Welsh tin plate makers pay the duty.

For the Farmers to Consider.

In its issue for October 16 the American Economist, the organ of the protective tariff league, publishes a chart showing the price of wheat and flour under the low tariffs from 1850 to 1860, and under the high tariff since 1860, which it points to as showing the triumphs of high tariffs. It shows that wheat went up in price from 2.4c per pound in 1850 to 3c per pound in 1860, or over 15¼ per cent. Under the high tariffs it fell to 2 3c per pound in 1887, or a fall of over 23 per cent. This fall in price of over 23 per cent. is ascribed by the Economist to the high tariff.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

A WOMAN TO WOMEN.

H. Augusta Howard, in the Standard of October 7, says: "I am much surprised that men should seek to enlist the sympathies of the disfranchised in questions of public welfare, as that women themselves should lend their energies to the furtherance of any movement until their own liberty is attained."

I will leave single tax men to explain their position to Mrs. Howard, while I try to show her why single tax women, or those at least who are advocates of woman suffrage, are glad to lend their energies to another reform than that.

It is because they believe that by advocating the single tax they are taking the best means to secure, not only their own liberty, but that of others as well; because they believe that the whole is greater than a part; that the race is of more importance than a sex; that true liberty for all is better than sham liberty for all; that the substance is better than the shadow, the real thing better than the symbol.

They look abroad upon our land, and they see that men with the ballot in their hands are not free. They are freer than women. Mrs. Howard would say: Oh! yes, they make our laws, such as they are. They live under laws they themselves make; women live under laws that are made by others. If men are taxed to death, they have themselves to thank. If they are denied access to natural opportunity, their God-given heritage, it is they themselves who have put up the barriers and keep them in repair.

Bent under the same weight of taxation, pent in by the same barriers, women with the franchise would be as free as men are now, and no freer. What does that freedom mean for the masses of men? Freedom to carelessly toil from the cradle to grave or slowly starve; freedom to satisfy the coarsest animal appetites if they are strong, sober and industrious; or, if they or their parents or their parents' parents grew tired of being strong, sober and industrious with so little to show for the effort, then have they freedom to sink to lower and lower depths of degration till charity hands them over to death. And close at their heels will drag their women, ballot or no ballot.

And as for those a little "up in the world" as the phrase is—but why speak of them? The fate of a nation is decided by its lowest and most numerous class. Rome fell because her crop of men gave out. She was rotten at the foundation.

I yield to one in the strength of my desire for woman suffrage, but I must admit that the exercise of that right under present social conditions would not give me the satisfaction that I should expect from it after the adoption of the single tax had purified our national life and raised the standard of morality in every department.

If the fates offered me woman suffrage to-morrow I would take it. If they offered me woman suffrage or the single tax I would take the single tax, knowing I should then have both. It is not certain that the single tax would follow the enfranchisement of woman; but the adoption of the single tax, which means the abolition of a fundamental wrong affecting alike men and women, would open the way for every other reform. Woman suffrage is gaining ground now; under the single tax it would be speedily attained.

No single taxer can be an anti-woman suffragist without laying himself open to the charge of unreason. He and the single taxer who declares himself an anti-free trader, are birds of a feather and equally illogical. I am happy in believing that there are few of either.

As I have said elsewhere, single taxers propose to turn the stream of unearned increment, now deflected from its natural course by our system of land tenure, from the pockets of the landlords into the hands of its rightful owners, the people, to be used by them as a common fund for common expenses in place of the multitudinous taxes now draining their life of all that makes it worth living. The people are the rightful owners of this fund because they created it. Now, what are the people? Men, women and children, or men and male children alone? If we could spirit away into space all the women and female children in the world, wouldn't land values drop? Apart from sentimental reasons, as political economists say, that is, eliminating from the problem the sorrow, dispair, discomfort and confusion caused by such an event, and eliminating also consideration of the fact that such a loss would mean the extinction of the human race, and looking at the problem simply from an economic standpoint, wouldn't the removal of half the population cause a sharp decline in land values? No sane man would deny it, and no single tax man can fail to advocate woman suffrage without proving himself only one degree better than the landlord. The latter says: "This is mine to be spent as I please." The former says: "This enormous sum belongs to the people, because created by them. It shall be spent for their common good, but spent as one-half of them thinks best."

And if we go deeper than this we come to the same problem. Is not woman a land animal as well as man? And does not Henry George base his whole theory on the proposition that man is a land animal? If any one could prove that man is not a land animal, "Progress and Poverty" would have been written in vain. Shall we deny woman her right to the earth? He who denies her right to vote denies her right to her share of economic rent, and to deny her this is to deny her right to the earth, since the only way to recognize this fundamental right in a state of society of which permanency of tenure is the corner-stone, is by securing to each the equal right to economic rent.

If Mrs. Howard will study the single tax literature which she has already received, and that which, I am safe in saying, will come to her, she can not fail, I think, to understand why single tax women, in lending their energies to our sacred cause, are working for their own liberty.—Sarah Mima Gay, in The Standard.

The Scientific Method and the Single Tax.

Enthusiastic advocates of the single tax are often rebuffed with the remark: "Oh! that is only George's opinion. You are advocating a mere theory." To persons of unscientific mental training the objection seems to stop further argument.

The golden rule of science—that of Descartes—is: "Give unqualified assent to no propositions but those the truth of which is so clear and distinct that they can not be doubted." In other words, through the exercise of doubt comes positive knowledge. This rule is the foundation of scientific logic, and its adoption by a few great thinkers and investigators has produced what is termed "modern science." There could, indeed, be no exact science without the adoption of some such rule—no Darwins, Tyndalls or Spencers. It was adopted consciously or unconsciously by the author of "Progress and Poverty," and he has made of political economy, which was originally called "Political Arithmetic," a science allied to arithmetic. He could not have written the work except by subjecting to doubt all that had been accepted up to his period as sound political economy. I venture to assert that no objection has ever been made to the single tax theory, as a theory, that has not been, or that could not be, easily and convincingly answered on a basis of scientific logic.

It is their scientific habit of investigation which prevents many men of high intellectual attainments from carefully considering the irrefragible logic of "Progress and Poverty." To them "George's theory" is merely a notion, a belief or, an opinion, and, of course, they regard their notions, or opinions as good or better than his. The same habit explains why the state papers of Blaine and President Harrison contain economic doctrine that makes an ordinary, unpretending single taxer smile. Such statesmen are quite unware, as their self-confidence shows, that there exists any scientific test by which the fallacy of their views may be clearly demonstrated. Yet the new political economy furnishes that magic test, and happily it is being applied by rapidly increasing numbers of people in all parts of the world.

A man of science, Herbert Spencer, helped to lay the foundations of the new political economy when George was a mere boy. Whatever Spencer may have since said in relation thereto can not impair the severe scientific logic of his earlier utterances. They stand on their own undiminishable power of conviction, and it is out of his power to repudiate them.

Prof. Huxley, a man of scientific methods, wrote an essay on "Capital, the Mother of Labor"—important to the single tax. From a biological standpoint this essay is scientifically logical and very interesting, but it has no bearing, as he imagines, upon the new political economy, whose concretions he evidently knows nothing about. He may, however, some day pick up "Progress and Poverty" and really read it. If he does, he is too sincere a man, though a vain one, to withhold, not necessarily a change of views, but new views altogether.

Then there are the wise editors of great newspapers who may have had time once to read and digest scientific books, but who have no time now; they demolish "Progress and Poverty" in a few paragraphs. The future historian of this epoch will greatly wonder how, in the midst of abundant wealth of scientific ideas relating to political economy, there could have existed among the educated and influential such dire poverty of information.

However, there is much hope to be derived from one of Herbert Spencer's conclusions: "The belief of the scientific will eventually become the belief of the world at large."—D. E. Cronin, in The Standard.

Think It Out.

"How much be my taxes, Zack?"

"They be $2.63, Jed.

"That's what I thought. I'm taxed more this year than I was last."

"You hain't, be you?"

"Yes I be too, thirteen cents."

"Well you've painted your barn, hain't you?"—Buffalo Truth.

There is a growing conviction in the minds of thinking men that too little encouragement is offered to the development of unimproved property. Under our present taxing system it is often more profitable to hold vacant property, which is lightly taxed than to cover it with improvements, which will be immediately pounced upon by the assessor, without respect to their income-producing qualities, so that if a man proposes to build a home for investment, he has to consider whether it will be more profitable to improve his property than to leave it vacant. He reasons that immediately upon the completion of a building his taxes are sure to be increased in much greater ratio. Thus it is that masons, carpenters, and the hundreds who are employed in the making and shaping of the materials which enter into buildings, find less work in the same ratio that taxes increase on improvements. Think this out, workmen.

Individual Freedom.

The freedom of the individual, the right of every man to work when, how, and as he will, is the most sacred right man can know; for it is the basis of freedom and the highest attainment of justice. If one man may say to another: "You shall not work—shall not support those to whom your efforts are due, but shall lie idle until I am willing that you should resume employment," that is slavery—despotism. What difference exists in this particular between the action of the individual and that of a combination, is difficult to discover. If any man can be deprived of the opportunity to labor, to provide food and raiment for those dependent on him, then is that condition one of brutal slavery. There is no possible escape from this conclusion, nor can be.—Toledo Sunday Journal.

THE NATION'S FINANCES.

Secretary Foster on the Work of the Treasury Department.

An Increase of Expenditures and a Reduction in Receipts During the Year—A Surplus of $37,239,783.

THE FIGURES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The report of the secretary of the treasury says in part:

The revenues of the government from all sources for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1891 were $458,544,333.03. The expenditures for the same period were $421,304,470.46, leaving a surplus of $37,239,783.57.

To this sum was added $54,907,973.75 deposited in the treasury under act of July 14, 1890, for the redemption of national bank notes; $6,393,815 deposited during the year on the same account; $3,830 received for 4 per cent. bonds issued for interest accrued on refunding certificates converted during the year and $34,132,352.16 taken from the cash balance in the treasury, making a total of $134,907,625.48. As compared with the fiscal year 1890, the receipts for 1891 have fallen off $6,418,847.52.

There was an increase of $57,636,199.14 in the ordinary expenditures. Among the larger items of increase was $11,521,497 for pensions refund of direct taxes; $4,938,333 expenses of eleventh census; $1,398,296 salaries and expenses United States courts; $4,137,236 for the military establishment; $4,107,690 for the naval establishment; $1,819,422 for the Indian service, and $17,479,096 for pensions.

For the present fiscal year the revenues are estimated at $433,000,000. The expenditures for the same period are estimated at $409,000,000, leaving an estimated surplus for the year of $24,000,000. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, the secretary estimates a revenue of $455,838,350 and expenditures amounting to $441,800,098, or an estimated surplus of $14,036,956. It is estimated that the revenue of the government was not only inadequate to the needs of the country, but was very much less per capita than during the so-called flush times which followed the civil war.

The amount of money in circulation has been very largely increased since the close of the fiscal year. The amount July 1, 1891, was $1,497,440,507, and the amount per capita was $23.41. The return of gold to the United States, the operation of the silver treasury note act, and disbursement by the treasury on account of the 4½ per cent. loan, pensions, etc., enlarged the volume on December 1 to $1,577,269,070, and the per capita amount to $24.39.

The coinage of the mints during the last fiscal year was the largest in the history of the mint in this country, aggregating 119,547,877 pieces, valued at $63,611,159.35.

During the twelve months ending September 30 the value of our exports of merchandise was $923,091,136, against $880,177,115 for the previous twelve months, an increase of $42,914,097.

The loss of gold by net export duty during the fiscal year was $67,946,768, while there was a gain of silver by excess of imports over exports amounting to $2,745,395. The loss of gold by export was materially larger during the last fiscal year than in any recent year. The heavy movement commenced in February, 1891, and did not cease until the close of July. The total amount exported from the port of New York during this period was $70,693,494. From the large exports of breadstuffs and other materials from the United States this fall and winter the movement of gold to this country will continue for some months at increased amounts. For the year 1893 it will be $455,336,350.44.

Of the practical effect of the new tariff law the secretary, after exhibiting the figures relating to foreign commerce used by the president in his message to congress, says:

"The removal of the duty on sugar has reduced its price to the consumer and this result is not in conflict with the doctrine of protection to home industries, because the limited domestic production of sugar under the most favorable protective rates is not sufficient to influence the price in the home market. Under the operations of the new tariff the customs revenue has been decreased as far as is consistent with the current needs of the government.

"By the readjustment of duties in the line of protection to American labor and American industries the free list has been enlarged by the addition of articles which from climatic or other conditions are not produced profitably nor extensively in this country; adequate protective duties have been imposed upon articles that come into competition with our own productions; new industries have been established and others stimulated, thereby giving increased employment to American labor and better control of our home market to our own people and the price of nearly every article of common consumption has been reduced to the consumer.

"Inasmuch as a considerable portion of our revenues must be derived from duties on imports, it is the part of wisdom and patriotism to so adjust the rates as to have regard first to the interests of own people and the rightful demands of American labor for remunerative wages.

I" do not believe that any considerable number of the people desire to see our manufacturing industries destroyed or wages reduced to the European basis, which would be the inevitable result of a reduction of duties with a view to revenue only.

"Comparison of the prices of goods imported respectively under the old and new tariffs where rates have been increased will demonstrate that the tariff is a tax upon the foreign competitor in our markets in the articles extensively produced here, and the duties are in fact thus deducted from the foreign market value and are paid by the foreigner as a tax for the privilege of selling his goods here at prices fixed by our own people competing among themselves in their own market."

The secretary reviews at great length our foreign merchandise; recites the operations of the Chinese exclusion act, the alien contract labor law and the new immigration act. He makes a number of recommendations for legislation, on the same line as mapped out by Mr. Windom. He refers to the Behring sea fisheries and other important matter which has been covered by bureau reports.

CHEATING IN HORSE BLANKETS

Nearly every pattern of 5/A Horse Blanket is imitated in color and style. In most cases the imitation looks just as good as the genuine, but it hasn't the warp threads, and so lacks strength, and while it sells for only a little less than the genuine it isn't worth one-half as much. TECUMSEH HERALD.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 17, 1891.

A WORD TO THE PUBLIC.

There can be no doubt that something more should be attempted, in this community to undo the evil work which is being done here in the way of making drunkards. Many young men are forming the drinking habit who will either have to give it up or they will be morally and physically wrecked. The temptations to drink are very great, and the public sentiment in our town does not stand as firmly opposed to the drink habit, and everything that tends to the forming of such a habit, as it ought. We are in a condition to welcome aid in the work of reformation from any respectable source. Hopes were entertained that aid would be given us in this direction by the coming of Dr. N. W. Tracy and his helpers, who were advertised to be here the week after Thanksgiving. But unfortunately rumors of crookedness in the former operations of Dr. Tracy preceded his actual coming on the field. These rumors had preceded him in other places. With us they grew to be not merely rumors but definite charges of dishonesty preferred against him by witnesses of high standing. A whole association of Christian ministers, in a town in Ohio, have recorded on the minutes of the association their unanimous expression of Dr. Tracy's dishonesty in money matters. That expression stands to-day with nothing but the simple denial of Dr. Tracy to disprove it. Our fellow citizen, W. G. Blymyer, was unfortunate enough to know of the charges against Dr. Tracy, and was candid enough to mention them to one or two of our clergymen who had been appealed to by Dr. Tracy to take steps toward paying his expenses while lecturing here. For doing this Mr. Blymyer was subjected to a gross personal attack in the Opera House, the spirit and language of which thoroughly disgusted those present and led many of them to leave the room and to express regret that they had brought their children to witness such an exhibition of bad temper. Dr. Tracy made this speech without seeking an interview with Mr. Blymyer. So far from being blamed by any one for stating to proper persons what he knew of the antecedents of Dr. Tracy, Mr. Blymyer merits the thanks of all. He simply did what any honest, honorable man ought to have done under the circumstances. Whatever apparent good may be done, the cause of temperance cannot but suffer from the advocacy of a man who manifests the spirit, and who has hanging over him the definite charges that Dr. Tracy has. The public desires confidence in a man who sets himself up to be an apostle of reform. But this man gives abundant room for the suspicion that he cares more for the "silver offerings" he manages to gather in than he does for the success of the temperance work. By all means let us try to have something done for temperance, but let us engage for a leader in the work some one of high character and ability, who can unite all the friends of the cause in his support.

Dr. Tracy brought with him a large number of testimonials. These of course were from persons not aware of any charges against him. A criminal, confronted by two witnesses who saw him commit a theft, replied that he could bring a hundred who would say they did not see him do it. If any one wishes to know definitely concerning the charges brought by the Ministerial Association alluded to in this article, let him inquire at the HERALD counting room. If it be asked, why publish this article now that the Doctor has left us? the reply can be made: It is published simply in the interest of the truth. No man ought to be passed on from place to place with unqualified endorsements who has such charges as these resting against him.

A FRIEND OF TEMPERANCE.

School Sketches.

Examination in Political Economy last Tuesday afternoon.

The English Literature class is soon to study Bacon's essays.

Chas. Burridge, of Chicago, a former student of Tecumseh, visited the school Friday afternoon.

Ernest Albaugh and Harry McClure of class of '91 attended the Lyceum last week.

Algebra II. have finished the work to calculus of radicals.

Edith Gamble has left school on account of ill health.

Chemistry and Arcenic.

The students in Philosophy are reviewing the term's work.

General English III. is studying "Regillus," by Macauley.

There were several young lady visitors present at the Lyceum last week.

The Adrian Times says: "There is no reason to expect that newspaper publishers will grow oblivious to the fact that there is to be a World's fair in Chicago. Gentle allusions thereto burden each mail, and there is a striking similarity about the matter sent in one particular. None are accompanied by remittances, but publication is insisted on in every instance. And yet there are other things than the World's fair."

THE W. R. C. BENEFIT.

The entertainment given last Friday evening for the benefit of the Woman's Relief Corps was one of the best amateur performances given before a Tecumseh audience in many a day. The fact that it was under the management of the Greundlers was sufficient of itself to guarantee its success, but it is no flattery to say that the program as a whole was much better than people anticipated.

The first part consisted of a drama in one act entitled, "Lend Me Five Shillings." Mr. Greundler himself assumed the leading role of Mr. Golightly in a superb manner, and the minor characters were all very nicely carried. Henry Sweet as Capt. Phobbs, and Will Ingersoll as Capt. Scruce did full justice to the military branch of the play. Moreland was finely handled by Will Hayden and Sam was acted true to life by J. L. Brown. Mrs. Major Phobbs was portrayed by Miss Clara Hayden in a manner worthy of all praise. In fact, without disparaging any of the other parts, we can say that it was one of the best performed characters in the play. Miss Etta Thorpe personified Mrs. Capt. Phobbs very nicely.

The second part opened with a vocal solo by Miss Grace Stevens, which was beautifully rendered, and in which she added new laurels to her reputation as a superior vocalist. The fan drill by ten young ladies followed, led by Misses Olive Blymyer and Mattie Chilson. They were attired in attractive costumes, and the evolutions of the drill itself were fantastic enough to please the most exacting critic. A more beautiful semi-military pantomime was never presented on that stage.

The third part consisted of the comic operetta, "Penelope," containing five characters. The piece abounds in comic situations and uproarious humor, and the audience was kept on the tip-toe of interest from the rising to the drop of the curtain. In the character of Penelope, the servant girl, Mrs. Greundler was "perfectly killing" and displayed her peculiar talents for comedy in the highest style of the art. Ella Jackson surprised her friends at the artful and natural manner in which she personified Mrs. Crocker. Harry Tansley made a splendid Chalks, the Milkman. Pitcher of the police, and Tosser of the grenadiers were finely carried by Mr. Pratt and Mr. Taylor. They have evidently seen service in comic opera before. The play went through without the least hitch and was a fitting finale to the program.

The Kid band gave a parade in the afternoon to call attention to the entertainment, giving some of their best selections. They were drawn in the band wagon by Will Hayden's handsome four-horse team, that showed off to fine advantage.

Although the expenses attending the affair were quite heavy, the net receipts over all amounted to $36.00, which was equally divided between Prof. Greundler and the Relief Corps.

THE MUSIN CONCERT.

Among the entertainments given in our last year's course the concert given by the Ovide Musin company was justly ranked as one of the best. The ticket holders had reason to expect a rich treat again this year and they were not disappointed. The troupe has been strengthened by the addition of two fine vocalists, Mr. Roger DePuy, tenor, and Mr. Emil Senger, basso. The latter especially is a valuable acquisition, possessing as he does a rich and powerful bass voice. The program of the evening as published, presented only a portion of the favors which the audience received. Commencing with the second number, Ovide Musin was called back with a hearty encore, and every number through the program, with two exceptions, received the same greeting. The Company were all in good humor, too, and they responded liberally to the invitations of the audience for more. The responses were all finely rendered and some of them were even superior to the original selections. After the tenth number Musin was honored with a double encore and the auditors called lustily for his return a third time. Eduard Scharf, the pianist, is continually adding to his reputation as a skillful artist. Annie Louise Tanner sings a more beautiful soprano than ever. Inez Parmater's fine contralto voice has lost none of its power or melody. In fact the entire program was beyond criticism. It was a musical entertainment of rare merit and the audience was thoroughly delighted from beginning to close. We must have the Musin troupe again next year.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Our premium offers for the coming year are more favorable than ever before and the club list is the best one ever issued from this office. Examine them carefully and make your selections early.

It turns out now that D. A. Downer did not have to give up his $100 forfeit in the great 100-mile drive wager between himself and Lingeman Bros., of Detroit. Humane Agent Vhay stated that he would prevent the trial at all hazards, and that was the cause of the attempt now being made. Lingeman Bros. saw Mr. Downer's position, and were manly enough not to insist on a forfeit.

The Adrian Press says: A slick stranger with a lubricated tongue, lately talked $500 out of Ann Arbor business men. He secured 105 subscribers at $3.50 and $6 each, for case advertising cards; then he went hence to return not again and the immortal "105" wish him in the land "where the worm dieth not." We might add that as a general rule those business men, who part with their money on fakes of this kind, are too poor to run a regular advertisement in their own home newspaper.

Geo. W. Mann, correspondent of the Grand Rapids, N. D., Journal, is in town a few days. He has a large collection of rare coins and old uncurrent bank bills, which he will dispose of on reasonable terms. One Sweedish coin dated 1749, and some Confederate bills of large denomination are great curiosities. Mr. Mann was formerly editor of the Hot Springs Visitor. He has interviewed Horace Greeley and Jeff Davis, met four Presidents, and been in 31 States and 4 territories.

The long distance telephone is quietly reaching out for all important points, and one of these days it will come forward as the most formidable rival of the telegraph. The American Bell telephone company of Boston has now under construction 50 lines between New York and Chicago. As each line has two wires and the distance between the two cities is about 980 miles, the total quantity of wire required for these lines is 98,000 miles, enough to go four times around the globe. These lines are all built with copper wire, weighing 174 pounds to the mile.

At the last Masonic regular meeting, held on Friday evening, there was a very large attendance and a little episode occurred which was not down in the ritual. Just before the election of officers Bro. S. P. Hosmer arose and delivered a neat and eloquent eulogy, addressed to the retiring master, J. H. Smith, closing with a presentation of an elegant gold watch. Although taken wholly by surprise, the recipient acknowledged the gift in a few heart felt remarks, which touched the feelings of all present. Bro. Smith has made one of the most efficient Masters in the entire history of the Blue Lodge, and this personal compliment to him for faithful service was richly deserved. The watch is a heavy hunting case Deuber with Masonic emblems engraved on the case and cost about eighty dollars. It was procured by Hosmer & Son. The sum was raised by private subscription among the lodge members. John J Orr was responsible for the idea and raised the necessary funds. The surprise was most happily conceived and nicely consummated.

A STORM'S FURY.

A Heavy Gale Visits Portions of Southern California.

Damages Placed at Over $1,000,000—Two Persons Lose Their Lives—Many Buildings Have Been Demolished—Great Destruction to Orange Orchards.

SWEPT BY A GALE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 14.—One of the most destructive windstorms experienced in this section in years visited Los Angeles and vicinity Thursday night and early Friday morning, reaching its climax at 1 o'clock Friday, when the wind blew twenty-eight miles an hour. Its severity seems to have been greatest at Pasadena and in the San Gabriel valley. So far as reported but two persons were killed: Mrs. Brown, who lived near Glendale and who was burned to death, and A. G. Taber, at Norwalk.

In Verdugo canyon and the Glendale section the storm was the wildest ever known. Mrs. Brown, living in a small house on Verdugo road, met with a horrible death. Her house succumbed to the wind some time during the night and collapsed. Mrs. Brown was caught in the timbers. As soon as the building fell it caught fire and the poor woman was burned to death. The body was burned to a crisp.

In Los Angeles the damage was nominal. Pasadena, however, was less fortunate. Reports from that place announce the wreck of several churches and the destruction of many barns. The Raymond hotel, which was opened for the season Thursday night, suffered serious loss. Destruction to orange orchards is reported as heavy. In exposed places all the fruit was blown off. First reports of loss are probably exaggerations, but it is evident from the damage done to buildings that the loss of fruit will be large. All wires on the line of the Santa Fe are down except a single wire east via Barstow. Reports made by passengers coming in are that a number of buildings along the line are blown down and much fruit blown from the trees.

The storm was terrific up in the San Francisco valley. The old mission at San Fernando was shaken up as it never was before. Great chunks of adobe walls weighing tons were hurled about. Big timbers, placed in position in the misty past, were suddenly dragged from their resting places and tossed about.

At Burbank the Presbyterian church was wrecked. Here and there along the Los Angeles river section barns and fences were wrecked. At Los Feliz a Chinaman was caught under a flying roof and badly injured. Another Chinaman was struck on the head by falling timbers.

A colored family was deprived of its home in an instant. The members were asleep when the gale picked up the house and carried it some distance. They were left in the middle of the floor. Many barns and small buildings were either shattered or blown down. Three coaches on the Rapid Transit road were blown from the track.

On Millionaire Baldwin's fine Santa Anita ranch, 13 miles from Los Angeles, the old orange orchard, the finest in the valley, was badly hurt and half of the crop lies on the ground. A magnificent row of poplars leading to Baldwin's house was ruined, many of the trees being uprooted.

A conservative estimate places the loss on the orange crop at $750,000, and the total loss at over $1,000,000.

CAUGHT AT LAST.

Talton Hall, a Noted Kentucky Desperado, Arrested at Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 10.—Talton Hall was arrested here Wednesday charged with the killing of Enos D. Hylton, a deputy marshal, at Norton, Wise county, Va. According to the prisoner's own story he has killed ninety-nine men, and has four or five others on the list that he intends to kill before he dies. In appearance he is a typical Kentucky mountaineer, tall, slender, straight as an arrow.

Three Men Killed.

ANNA, Ill., Dec. 12.—A head-end collision occurred on the Mobile & Ohio railroad 5 miles above Jonesboro Thursday night between a freight train and a construction train. Engineer G. S. Flippin, of Murphysboro, and two laborers, Simeon Okeson and James Miller, were killed, and eight others injured, some fatally. A large amount of rolling stock was damaged. The collision was caused by the engineer of the construction train reading an order wrong.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S REPORT.

Practice of the Court of Appeals—Alaska's Administration.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The annual report of Attorney General Miller was submitted to congress Thursday. It reviews the business of the United States supreme court and devotes a chapter to circuit court of appeals which he says has been organized in each circuit and is ready for business, although the additional judge in each district has not been appointed. It was found that the court could be organized and such business as might be offered could be transacted without such judges, and their appointment was, therefore, delayed until such appointments could be acted upon by the senate.

After speaking of the well-known difficulties in the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion act he says: If it is desired that these laws shall be made effective, they should be so changed as that they cannot be misunderstood. To arrest and try such persons and, as the result simply send them back across the British line, is shown to be an idle expenditure of time, labor and money by the fact that, as might well be expected, the same persons have to be arrested and tried over and over again. This subject, he said, demanded prompt consideration.

From information, official and unofficial, in regard to the administration of the laws of Alaska, the attorney general is impressed that such administration is not satisfactory, and that it can only be made satisfactory by new legislation.

The attorney general also reviews the legal proceedings on the case of the Chilian steamer Itata.

store had just been restocked with all lines of goods in anticipation of a heavy holiday trade. Mr. Batterman said that he had in stock fully $300,000 worth of goods. The greatest loss was caused by water. How the fire originated is a mystery. The insurance amounts to about $150,000.

GONE TO HER REWARD.

Julia A. Ames, One of the Leading Workers in the W. C. T. U., Is Dead.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—Miss Julia A. Ames, editor of the Union Signal, the official organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and a resident of Evanston, Ill., died in this city Saturday.

Funeral services were held over the remains of Miss Ames on Sunday at the home of Dr. Caroline C. Hastings, and were largely attended by prominent workers in the temperance cause. The services were conducted by Rev. A. J. Gordon, of the Clerenden Street Baptist church. Upon the casket were many beautiful floral offerings, among them a cross of white roses and lilies from Lady Henry Somerset and a knot of carnations tied with a white satin ribbon. The remains were conveyed to the Boston & Albany railway station, and at 10:30 were forwarded to Chicago. Accompanying the remains go Miss Helen Hood, corresponding secretary of the National W. C. T. U., and Miss Bessie Gordon.

A MURDER CONFESSED.

Henry Suber Saves the Lives of Ten Men Sentenced to Be Hanged.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 12.—One of the most remarkable cases that has ever come to light in this state developed in the state supreme court Thursday, and as a result the necks of the ten negroes under sentence of death in Laurens county for the murder of Thornton Nance some months ago will be saved. They were sentenced by the supreme court, and the motion was to suspend the hearing in the supreme court and transfer it back to the circuit court. The ground of the motion was the confession of another negro, Henry Suber, who was recently arrested, to the effect that he was the murderer. He confesses to the crimes and says he shot Nance and killed him. The supreme court granted the motion and sent the case back to the circuit court for a new trial.

GOING ONE BY ONE.

Death of Another of the Hazen Brothers, a Band of Famous Ex-Campaigners in Wisconsin.

RIPON, Wis., Dec. 14.—Sanford Hazen, aged 70, died at his home in this city Saturday. Mr. Hazen was one of the eight brothers comprising the Hazen band who accompanied the log cabin on its journey fifty-one years ago in the campaign for William Henry Harrison, and, thirty-one years ago played for Abraham Lincoln, and three years ago rendered their familiar "Tippecanoe" strains for Benjamin Harrison. The brothers held a reunion here in July, 1888. Since that time one other has died, leaving six of the noted band now living.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In the house yesterday, after the reading of the journal, the president's message was read and referred to the committee of the whole on the state of the union, and ordered printed. Mr. Miller (Wis.) submitted a resolution requesting the speaker to appoint the committees of the house among the several states according to population and that each state receive at least one chairmanship. Referred to the committee on rules. The house then adjourned until Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The session of the house Saturday was merely a formal one. The speaker announced the appointment of the following committees: On accounts, Messrs. CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Private James McDonald, of Company D, Fifteenth United States infantry, was shot and instantly killed by Private Sloss, at Company D's headquarters in Fort Sheridan. The tragedy was the result of a trivial quarrel between the two men. THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world today.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Found His Long-Lost Daughter.

Seven years ago Mrs. Frank Crocker deserted her husband in Alpena, taking with her her pretty young daughter Rose, who was 7 years old at the time. The other day Crocker received word that a girl was being detained in Manistee as a witness against her mother, who, it was alleged, tried to lead her child into a life of shame. The father quickly went to Manistee and was overjoyed to find that the young witness was none other than his long-lost child, who was delighted with her new-found parent.

Two Mammoth Children.

Gerard Palmer, Jr., son of Gerard Palmer, of Detroit, is 10 years old and weighs 190 pounds. His sister, Miss Hattie, weighs 265 pounds. Both the children are seemingly healthy, but so unwieldy in their proportions that it is difficult for them to walk. Hattie is a fraction of an inch below 5 feet in height and her breadth seems almost as much. Gerard, the younger, is also rather under the medium height for his age. Both children are getting fatter all the time.

Oldest Native-Born Resident Dead.

Mrs. Elizabeth Odren died at her home in California township, Branch county. She was undoubtedly the oldest native-born resident of Michigan, having been born in Detroit August 11, 1797, and was over 97 years of age. She was the mother of fourteen children, seven still living. Her husband, who was also born in Detroit, died in 1888, aged 96 years, after a wedded life of seventy-four years. Mrs. Odren had resided in Branch county since 1837.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by fifty-four observers in different parts of the state for the week ended December 5 indicated that typhoid fever, cholera morbus, dysentery, whooping cough and typho-malarial fever increased, and inflammation of the brain, kidney and bowels decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-seven places, scarlet fever at forty-one, typhoid fever at forty-one and measles at six places.

The Horticulturists.

The State Horticultural society, in session at Eaton Rapids, elected the following officers:

President, T. T. Lyon, South Haven; secretary, E. B. Ried, Allegan; treasurer, W. M. Pearsall, Grand Rapids; member of the executive committee, C. A. Sessions, of Oceana county. Interesting papers were read by W. A. Taylor, assistant pomologist at Washington; A. C. Glidden, of Paw Paw, R. Morrill, of Benton Harbor, and J. F. Taylor, of Douglas.

Seven Brave Girls.

Seven of the 14-year-old girl schoolmates of little Blanche Thomas, of Grand Rapids, submitted to the surgeon's knife while 6 square inches of skin were removed from the arm of each and grafted to the side and upper arm of their playmate, to cover a burn. The children bravely stood the skinning process without anæsthetics.

"Foxy, the Con Man," Dead.

William Fox, better known as "Foxy," one of the greatest confidence men in Michigan, was found dead in his room at the Reynard house in Bay City. "Foxy" had been implicated in numerous scrapes, even to murder, but nearly always managed to escape the clutches of the law, only serving once a short time in state's prison.

"AFTER ALL!"

Has thy day been long and drear?
Have thy nights grown faint with pain?
Seems the future filled with fear,
And thy toiling all in vain?
Ah! 'Tis but the fate of all!
Shadows come, and sunbeams fly;
Cares and crosses, great and small,
Fade the cheek and dim the eye.
Yet we trust, whate'er befall,
God is watching—after all!

Feeble souls who faint and fail,
Life's best blessings never know;
Helpless, tossed by every gale,
Drifting, sinking, on they go;
But strong hearts, in deepest pain,
Looking up, through tears, to Heaven,
Still repeat the sweet, sad strain;
"E'en though dearest ties are riv'n
I will thank Him, though I fall?
God's love watches—after all!"

Courage, then! Through night and storm
Bear thy burden cheerfully!
Pure in heart, and stout of arm,
Glorious victory thou shalt see.
Not a moment pause; nor sigh
Over faded joys so fond;
Buried let the dead past lie,
Hope for blessings still beyond.
Trust and hope, whate'er befall,
God will keep thee—after all.

THE ONEIDA COUNTESS.

True Story of a Frenchman's Life with the Indians.

In the year of the French revolution, 1792, a young man of good birth, fine education and good address, who was glad to escape from Paris with his life, came to this country. He was tall and handsome, with the manners of an aristocrat. Finding nothing to do (for the physical labor of the docks was so much better done by the negroes that he could not stand the competition) he finally gave up in despair; and while he had money for the few implements needed, started for the Oneida country, where he cut a few saplings and built himself a shelter from the weather. He endeavored to support himself by fishing, shooting and trapping, but had made little progress, when he was stricken down with fever. His end seemed coming. He was alone and helpless, and, commending himself to the care of Heaven, he lay down to die.

On the other side of the wood near which he had built his hut, but hidden entirely from his view, there lay an Indian village. One afternoon, an Indian girl, named Nanita, out berrying, espied the hut of the stranger, and naturally peered into it. Hearing no noise, and seeing no one, she finally entered and found a handsome man lying prone, very pale and apparently dead. Her woman's heart was touched with pity. She saw, too, that, though insensible, the man was still alive.

The young girl paused not to think of his color. Her fleet feet took her back to her wigwam, whence she returned with milk, rum and a blanket. With the latter she covered him, and, pouring a little rum down his throat, she pillowed his head upon her lap and sat still and watched him. Presently he opened his fine eyes and gave her a dim, wandering, wondering look. But he was faint. He saw, however, in the large, lustrous, black, deep-set eyes of the squaw legibly written: "Thou shalt not die forsaken, stranger."

She signified to him as well as she could that he must sleep now, and that she would return after awhile and see him.

In a couple of hours the Indian girl returned to her patient with food and medicines for the night. She found him still very feeble, but much better; she made him eat and gave him to understand by eye and pantomime that he must sleep, and she would see him as early as possible the next morning.

In the morning the Indian girl told her mother about the stranger. At first the squaw was suspicious, but she went with her daughter to see the stranger, when her heart warmed to the young paleface; and, with true womanly feeling, she busied herself about the sick man. The women removed him to their own wigwam for better nursing.

Three weeks' good nursing brought him round, and he was a man again in all but strength. The patient endurance of the count, with his quiet, graceful manners, won the little community, and all found a pang in their hearts at the mention of his departure.

The old warrior, one morning, said:

"Stranger, the time has come when you should no longer be a stranger. You have a name in your own country. What is it?"

"Arthur De Lille, they call me in my own country."

"Then, Arthur De Lille," said the chief, "stay with our people another moon. Hunt with us, fish with us, go to our council fires, smoke with us, then go back to your own country. Or, if you like the red man's life and will cast your lot with us, we will adopt you into our tribe. You shall be my son; you shall be a hunter and a warrior. Adopt our custom and our costumes, and we will give you a wife from our tribe."

Nanita explained what he did not understand to De Lille, who, turning to the chief, said:

"It is well said. It shall be so," and offered his hand.

They smoked a pipe together, and the understanding was complete.

Arthur De Lille rapidly grew from convalescence to robust health. He walked, wrestled and ran with the young braves, his great height being of much advantage to him. His education in the school of the athletes and in fencing and shooting in Paris now became of great service to him. With returning health he developed great physical power; the Indians were proud of him, he was their equal in most sports, their superior in many things.

As the time approached for his decision, De Lille went to the old warrior and said:

"De Lille wants to go into retreat for three days to consider his decision. He wants to be alone, to consider the future, to consult the Great Spirit."

"De Lille speaks wisely. It shall be so. No one shall speak to thee, to ask anything of thee for three days."

It was so ordered. He took his gun and went to the top of a mountain, and there considered his situation. He reviewed the civilized savages of France, destroying everything that was good. Then he turned to the peaceful civilization of the savages going on around him and thought of what he should lose, nay, had lost, in France; then of the life of toil and labor before him; then of its freedom—the joyous, wild life of the Indian.

He thought how he had been snatched from death at home; how he had suffered in New York and since; how now by this Indian woman he had been brought from death to life, and he looked up to the Great Spirit and prayed: "Direct me in all my doings with Thy most gracious favor and further me with Thy continual help." Then he laid down to rest and think. For three days he continued the meditations that were to fix a life, and at length rose from the ground rejoicing in a psalm of praise: "I am an Indian," he said. "I thank Thee, Father, for this revelation of Thy will."

The mind thus made up is fixed forever, and it was so with De Lille. He now sought the accomplishment of his purpose with avidity. On his way home he spoke to every one he met, and meeting the old warrior he said:

"I am an Indian; embrace me."

"Welcome, my son."

And the chief embraced him.

De Lille said that he was ready for whatever ceremonies were necessary.

"I'll settle it at the council of the braves to-night," was the reply.

"You promised me a wife," said De Lille. "Give me Nanita? One moon from my adoption into the tribe I'll take her."

"My son, we must see what she says to that; but I'll not object."

They entered the wigwam, carrying sunshine into it. De Lille strode up to Nanita's mother and kissed her. He went up to Nanita and said:

"Nanita, I am an Indian! Help me to be a good one."

Her bright eyes danced in ecstasy, as she threw herself on his bosom and wept there. He looked round, and the mother was weeping on the old man's bosom. Even the old warrior's eye was moist.

De Lille was adopted into the tribe with the usual ceremonies, and great rejoicing was there on the occasion; and, at the feast of sweets, when the maple sugar ran, he brought Nanita home to his wigwam as his wife. She proved a good wife; always smiled upon him, and bore him many children. The blessing of the Great Spirit had come with her.

De Lille became a leading chief among the Indians. His superior education, his knowledge of French, English and the Indian dialect became of great value with the tribes; and he kept his own tribe at peace with the whites, and he was much respected by our government. Thus he lived twenty years.

He visited New York, where he learned so much of the restored tranquillity of France as to beget the hope that some of the broad lands he left there might be restore to him, and he was not mistaken. He sent one of his sons to France to be educated. He sent another to be educated in Columbia college, who afterward became a prominent lawyer in New York.

He himself stayed with his tribe. He was universally respected as a faithful ally of our government, and so continued to his death in 1835.

He was restored to his titles by Louis XVIII., and so Nanita became the Countess De Lille. She once visited France with her husband and was well received. She returned to this country, and spent her life in elegant luxury on a large estate in the neighborhood of the spot where she first saw her husband.

His son and hers is a titled man in France to-day.—N. Y. Ledger.

The Hen.

The quintessence of the omnivorous is supposed to be imaged in the hog, but a hog is a Peabody among animals alongside of a hen. Hens are by nature monopolists. When the subject of victuals is mentioned they are evidently listening. Throw a handful of corn into a ten-acre lot and every hen in the inclosure will get a dab at it. The last hen on the spot may not secure more than two kernels, but nothing in the hen's appearance will indicate that. It will step around with as much precision and gratitude as any in the flock and wear the most pensive smile you ever saw. A hen will not eat everything it sees, but it will try to, and there isn't one of them on the face of the earth but that can tell you the taste of everything it has seen within the radius of a half-mile of its house. It is only when a man has kicked at a hen and missed it that he begins to understand how thoroughly hollow and deceitful this world is, and it is a marvelous fact in connection with this that he will miss the hen if he does kick at it and misses it if he don't.—Danbury News.

—Some years ago Prof. Rhein planted in the Frankfort botanical garden some of the trees from which it is stated the Japanese obtain their lacquer or varnish. The tree is known to botanists as the rhus vernix, and it appears there are now thirty-four healthy trees, some thirty feet high. Prof. Rhein has taken sap from a few of the trees and sent it to Japan for trial by native artists. It is, however, almost useless for Europeans to attempt to compete with the Japanese in their line, but the lacquer, if it can be made from trees grown in Europe, may be used for other purposes than varnishing wood. The rhus coriaria, or varnish tree, grows in many parts of what may be termed the Mediterranean district, and its juice is known for its deleterious or injurious properties, and has consequently been let alone. The Japanese, however, seem to understand it, and it is certain they make a beautiful lacquer or varnish from the juice of their trees; but they keep the processes secret.—English Mechanic.

Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company

OF MILWAUKEE, WIS.

PERSONAL TO YOU.

The first dividends on Tontine Policies of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, paid this year, 1891, are from 40 to 55 percent. larger than similar Tontine Dividends in the New York Companies. This protentous truth has made the agents of those companies more industrious than ever in circulating slanders upon the Northwestern, and in endeavoring to show by false ratios and delusive figures that the "Northwestern's dividends have been falling off. If it can be proved: First, That the Northwestern's dividends are running down; or, Second, that the Northwestern's dividends on similar policies in past and present are not anywhere from 40 to 250 per cent larger than the dividends of the Companies whose agents are circulating these delusive attacks, then the Northwestern agent will agree willingly and forever to retire from Life Insurance business and leave the field free to the attacking Companies. We want no business and ask for no man's application unless we can prove that the Northwestern will do better by him than any other company.

EXPELL THE INTRUDER.—That disease is propagated by the innumerable microbes, germs, etc., which fill the air we breathe and the water we drink, there can be no question. These microbes attack the human body and breed poison in many shapes. Recent experiments read before the congress of surgeons at Berlin leave no doubt that the way to clear the system of these germs is to force them out through the pores of the skin. S. S. S. does this in the most efficient way. It cleans them out entirely, and the poison as well.

Mr. F. Z. Nelson, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Fremont, Nebraska, suffered for years with scrofula, and it continued to grow worse in spite of all treatment. Finally, four bottles of Swift's Specific cured him, and he writes: "Words are inadequate to express my gratitude and favorable opinion of Swift's Specific."

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY | Mr. A. B. Davis, of Davis Bros., at Arcola, Miss., is a great believer in the virtue of S. S. S. He writes that he was afflicted with one of the worst cases of blood poison known to the human race, and after going through quite a long treatment, finally resorted to S. S. S., and he is proud to say that he has been entirely cured, and the disease thoroughly eradicated from his system, and sends thanks to the company for their valuable discovery, and says that it is a God-send to the world. For contagious blood poison S. S. S. is truly a specific. Very few cases have ever resisted its curative properties, and no one suffering from this disease or other blood poison should neglect to give it a fair trial. We will mail a special treatment on contagious blood poison to all who apply for it free.

John Cheever received a letter from his son Eugene, who is at Sorrento, Florida, with John Taylor, last Saturday, saying they had shipped four boxes and two barrels of oranges for home.

The Dramatic Club at their meeting Monday evening voted $25 of their surplus fund toward the library, thus making at present a total of about $140 at the command of the board of directors for purchasing books. Let everyone put forth his best efforts to make this enterprise a grand success.

Robert Patterson's new house, on what is known as the old Gould farm, burned last Saturday evening, about 6:30 o'clock. The family at the time were away from home and cannot even conjecture as to the probable cause. The loss will probably reach $1800, partly covered by insurance.

Will Osgood received a letter from L. C. Hoagland, who is at Mt. Dora, Florida, containing a sample of southern soil. Mont said he had just cut his name on a mammoth cactus; that the thermometer stood at 90 degrees in the shade, and although he was well pleased with the country he wouldn't trade Florida and all Georgia for old Lenawee.

The school entertainment last Friday evening was a success in every particular. The little ones, dressed in fancy costumes, executed the grand march to perfection, and in response to an encore they again executed the march, amid the applause and admiration of the entire audience, giving much credit to their teacher, Miss Bowerman. The small sum of 5 and 10 cents admission defrayed the necessary expense. The total receipts were $9.51.

About 4 o'clock Tuesday morning fire destroyed E. M. Lewis' sawmill. Although the entire structure was consumed it is thought but little damage was done to the heavy machinery. Some few things were gotten out, but the continued blowing of the whistle occasioned quite a fear in those present to approach very near for fear of the bursting of the boiler. Although the loss may not be very heavy, it will suspend business, which at the present time of the year is at its best.

ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON) It is said that in a lake near the city of Silene, in England, a huge dragon dwelt whose insatiable maw seemed satisfied with nothing the people could give him. In their despair they cast lots to determine who among their dearest ones should be flung to the beast, and the lot fell to the King's daughter. As she was going, like Jeptha's daughter, to meet her terrible fate, she was met by George of Cappadocia, who, after hearing her sad story, bade her to fear not, and making a sign of the cross, he brandished his lance, attacked and transfixed the dragon, and leading him into the city beheaded him in the presence of all the people. For this noble deed he became the Patron Saint of England. Many a dragon in the form of disease, while leading his victim to death, is sure as that which would have befallen the King's daughter but for her timely rescue, has been demolished by the use of S. S. S., and the victim restored to health.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as I ever did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

The remarkable book of Robert Louis Stevenson, bearing the above title, has created phenomenal interest. It is the book of the past decade and by some is esteemed as "the Mosaic of the Nineteenth Century." It has become the theme of many a preacher's sermon, many a literary article, much wonder and discussion. It has been dramatized and nearly every city, town and village of the land has seen one or more of the many horrible stage spectacles founded upon the strange, weird story. But the dream of the talented author has never been before interpreted. Its meaning is hidden; the history of this difficult task which Mr. Nourse has imposed upon himself is best given in his own words: He says. "I read the story as thousands did and wondered at the time whether the ordinary fiction reader would get to the meaning of it. Conversation with many soon convinced me that they had not. Then I learned that it had been dramatized; and I went to see Richard Mansfield in the role of 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' with this question in my mind 'will the dramatic presentation of it convey the lesson?' The acting was superb, the sensation thrilling, but the inane observations of the people around me, the hoots and yells of the gallery gods demonstrated that the lesson was lost; then the thought haunted me that some one ought to interpret it and I undertook the task." Mr. Nourse is especially qualified for this, for—1st, he has great natural histrionic powers; 2nd, he was a student in the Royal Dramatic College, England; 3rd, he has already done it with wonderful success, as will be seen in the following notice. A celebrated critic who heard this lecture delivered for the first time, writes as follows:

"Mr. Nourse is tall, with a clean shaven face, long curly hair, a pair of small merry eyes, a grand stage presence, a rich orotund voice, a born orator, a born actor, and a born preacher, who glides from one to the other imperceptibly. He has the Ingersollian habit of laughing at own humor. Dress such a man as this in a Prince Albert frock coat, and you have Mr. Nourse, and in Mr. Nourse, Dr. Jekyll. But in a twinkling the long hair falls over the forehead, he diminishes to a dwarf, his teeth gleam wolfishly, his hands turn to claws, he becomes a devil—it is devilishly well done. Then he interprets the parable with wonderful genius and moral power. We went to criticise a novice, we came away applauding a master. What an actor is lost in this platform orator! He would have made a fortune on the stage, but will do more good on the platform. I don't know of any living man who can do just what Mr. Nourse is doing so grandly. Actors don't preach, and preachers cannot act. Nourse does both in this magnificent oration. It is a drama, sermon and lecture, all three rolled into one. He is the greatest dramatic orator in the world."

"MY DAUGHTER'S LIFE was saved by Hood's Sarsaparilla," says Mr. B. B. Jones of Alna, Maine. "She had seven running sores in different places on her body, but on giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla there was marked improvement and now she is well, strong and healthy."

A GOOD SCHEME.

A BUSINESS SUGGESTION TO THE FARMERS OF NORTHERN LENAWEE.

Shall We Have a Farmer's Exchange? A Few Practical Hints on the Utility of Such an Exchange.

We have long thought that a reasonable amount of space in our columns could be devoted to a "Farmers' Exchange" department, which the farmers of Northern Lenawee might use to their mutual benefit and profit. Nearly every farmer has some domestic animal on his farm, or some special kind of grain or seed which he would be glad to dispose of for cash or exchange for some other kind of property. The trouble is, no one knows the fact but himself. Many a farmer wishes to buy articles, property or stock of various kinds, but does not know where to find them. Can these two classes be brought together? Certainly they can be, and the process is as easy as a simple twist of the wrist.

To test the practicability of such a scheme we shall open a Farmers' Exchange column in the month of January. During the four issues of that month we will run a special notice, not exceeding five lines in length for the sum of twenty-five cents per week. The notice should give the name and post office address of the patron and the property which he may wish to sell or exchange. Below are a few samples of these notices:

JOHN DOE, TIPTON, MICH.—One Jersey cow five years old, five bushels prime clover seed, one mustang pony, broke for saddle, to sell cheap.

RICHARD ROE, CLINTON, MICH.—Ten good colonies of bees to exchange for a few Merino ewes.

PETER SMITH, MACON, MICH.—A Milburn wagon and a double farm harness, in use only one year. Will be sold cheap.

SAM BROWN, BRITTON, MICH.—A splendid breeding mare, 8 year old, will exchange for a pair of good ponies.

JOSHUA GREEN, HOLLOWAY, MICH. Ten fine Holstein heifers registered, one and two years old, one Holstein cow three years old registered, to exchange for a first class heavy farm team.

JAMES ROBINSON, RIDGEWAY, M.—A Walter A. Wood self binder used two seasons, a Hiley road wagon as good as new, one light single harness, will sell cheap.

The first issue of January next will be on Thursday, Jan. 7th, and all notices ought to be handed in not later than Saturday Jan. 2d, '92. Try the experiment, gentlemen, for one month. The expense for each person is a mere trifle and we believe it will realize a handsome profit on the investment. There should be five hundred of these notices in the HERALD during January, and we confidently assert that even one hundred would effect the sale of thousands of dollars worth of property that would otherwise remain unsold. There are big possibilities in this scheme if it be properly taken advantage of. Now is the accepted time, gentlemen. Go in and win.

OBITUARY.

R. Morrison died on the 12th inst. at Harper Hospital, Detroit, aged 46 years.

The deceased was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and emigrated to Philadelphia, Pa., in 1864, where he married and in 1866 removed to Tecumseh. The integrity and general worth of our departed townsman were too generally known to require other than a brief mention. During the 23 years that he has lived among us not one act of either his business or private life has ever brought a blush to the faces of those who bear his name. He was a loving husband and father, an honest, upright citizen, and a sincere, unostentatious Christian. Mr. Morrison had been in poor health for years and recently, by the advice of his physician in Tecumseh, consulted Dr. McGraw, of Detroit. By his advice he entered Harper Hospital on the 26th of November, accompanied by his devoted wife, who remained with him as special nurse. On the 1st of December a cancer was removed from his stomach. He rallied after the operation and good hopes were entertained of his recovery, but on the evening of the 11th inst. unfavorable change took place and on the following evening he calmly passed from earth. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family. May the friend of the widow and fatherless be their comfort and support through the years which can never more be brightened and cheered by the loved presence of their earthly companion and parent.

Scribner's Magazine for January begins the sixth year and eleventh volume of this periodical, which now announces a circulation of more than one hundred and forty thousand copies monthly, which is constantly increasing. The plans for the new year include, beside the more purely literary contents, remarkable series on the Poor in the World's Great Cities; Important Historical Moments, by eminent men who took part in them; Out-of-Door Papers; occasional Railway articles on Rapid Transit, Australian Railways, Speed in Locomotives; on important Water-ways, like the Nicaragua Canal, and the water-route from Chicago to the Ocean; also travel, exploration, and abundant fiction, including the notable serial "The Wrecker," by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osborne.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 24 1891.

The appointment of Stephen B. Elkins to a Cabinet portfolio is a very emphatic pointer that the Republicans intend to fight for West Virginia next year.

Speaker Crisp has a happy faculty of remembering names and faces, an invaluable accomplishment for a man in public life. He is also quick to place men he has heard of only casually.

Col. Elliott F. Shepherd expresses the opinion that if Chicago opens the World's Fair on Sunday some awful calamity will befall that city. Can this be a threat that he intends to take up his residence in Chicago?

Senator Turpie of Indiana has done well in offering a measure providing for the election of U. S. Senators by popular vote. This would be a good companion reform to the Michigan plan of choosing presidential electors.

President Harrison does not fancy the Michigan plan of choosing presidential electors. Whatever its merits or demerits may be it is certainly preferable to the Louisiana plan, by which Samuel J. Tilden was cheated out of his election.

The appointment of Stephen B. Elkins as Secretary of War indicates that President Harrison has decided to stake his fortunes with the politicians. A more discreditable nomination for a Cabinet position was never before promulgated from the White House.

The gavel presented to Speaker Crisp by the citizens of Americus, Georgia, is of polished oak in solid gold bands, enclosed in a velvet-lined case. With it came the written assurance: "We have every confidence that you will ever wield it with wisdom, justice and moderation."

The Tammany heelers probably have the power, if they use it, to prevent Cleveland's nomination next year, but they will be powerless to force Hill's nomination. The candidate who will head the Democratic ticket in 1892 will be Grover Cleveland or a western man. Stick a pin right there.

With two appointments within forty-eight hours: Elkins of Star Route fame, and Judge Woods, who dismissed the suit against Blocks-of-five Dudley in the interest of the party, it is safe to conclude that President Harrison purposes to rely upon the old freebooters for help to succeed himself in office. No civil service reform and mugwumpery in his "at such a time as this."—Toledo Bee.

Those who favor the election of the president of the United States by a direct vote of the people cannot consistently object to the Michigan system of choosing electors by congressional districts. The change would put the presidency one step nearer direct choice, and it would be an undoubted improvement upon election by general ticket as practiced in the other states.—Philadelphia Record.

Two hundred and twenty-three votes will elect the next president. See how this figures out: New York, 36; Indiana, 15; New Jersey, 10; The South, 159; total, 220. The other three will surely come from Michigan. Thus did the democratic Wolverines, by one patriotic act, completely neutralize the republican scheme of admitting five territories to statehood for the sole purpose of perpetuating republican power indefinitely. No wonder the republicans do not like the Michigan plan. It was salvation oil for the democrats.—Toledo Bee.

The Farmers' Alliance, so far as its efforts to "corner" wheat and cotton are concerned to get even with the government for discrimination against their interests does not exhibit the spirit of true reform, but a simple desire for retaliation. If the government under republican administration for the last quarter of a century has swindled the farmers, then let them demand reparation and emphasize their demand by declaring against a continuance of the robber methods. If the farmers have been insincere in their denunciations of trusts and corners, then their attempt to follow the example is not surprising. Otherwise it is quite incomprehensible.

A Burlesque of Protection.

One of the most grotesque manifestations of the paternal theory of government is in the distribution of bounties to the New England farmers for the manufacture of maple sugar. The early settlers in this country discovered that sugar could be made from the sap of the maple trees that grew in the forests, and they and their descendants have utilized this bounty of nature ever since. They go out into the woods in the spring and tap the trees, collecting the sap and boiling it over a fire until it forms a syrup, from which the sugar crystallizes upon cooling. It is a simple process that costs practically nothing. There is not even any labor spent upon the cultivation of the trees. The resulting sugar may be used for domestic purposes, but even in remote districts refined cane sugar is now easily attainable, and the maple sugar is mainly used as a sort of confectionery.

That this modest industry needed any "protection" never occurred to the most ingenious tariff advocate until the last Congress undertook to distribute the surplus and hit on the idea of giving a slice of of it to sugar growers in the form of a bounty to balance the removal of the tax on imported sugar. Then the happy thought struck Senator Edmunds that if the money was being passed around he might as well get some for his constituents. Vermont sugar, he held, was as much entitled to a bounty as Louisiana sugar, and as nobody could contradict this proposition, Vermont sugar was included in the beneficent law.

So now, as was read in the New York Tribune, all the owners of sugar bushes in Vermont have been making haste, before the close of the fiscal year, to file their papers and procure a "government license, which will entitle them to a bounty on all the maple sugar they make next spring. Of course they will make a great deal more than there is any demand for, so that their actual profits will not be greatly enhanced, except in the case of the large landowners, like Governor Page and ex-Governor Smith and Congressman Grout, who can afford to make the production of maple sugar a regular industry; but as they never have looked to maple sugar for profit heretofore, the farmers will regard the bounty as so much clear gain.

The question is what the farmer who does not happen to have a sugar bush on his place will think of this arrangement. Why should his neighbor be paid for drawing sap out of a forest tree and he be paid nothing for the hay and oats and buckwheat and potatoes that cost him so much labor and bring him so small return? This is a question that must come home even to the agricultural mind. Either we shall have to extend the bounty system to all products of every kind or else we shall have to admit, what is the truth, that this whole coddling system has been carried to the point of utter absurdity.—Philadelphia Times.

A VOICE FROM THE JUDICIAL BENCH.

Judge John Chaney of Osceola, Ia., "I contracted sciatic and muscular rheumatism in the army, and suffered most excruciating agony for years. Dr. James Roberts of Osceola, advised me to take Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I have used eleven bottles, and find that it keeps me in good health. I can not recommend it too highly."

Yelling at a street car for a hastening lady is a sort of charity bawl.

Purify Your Blood

The importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditary and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

TECUMSEH HERALD.

Issued Every Thursday Morning.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 24, 1891.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 21, '91.

The President has sent to the Senate the following nominations, to be United States Judges, as provided by section 1, chapter 517, United States statutes at large; Wm. P. Putnam, of Maine, for the first judicial circuit; Nathaniel Shipman, of Connecticut, for the second; Geo. M. Dallas, of Pennsylvania, third; Nathan Goff, of West Virginia, fourth; Wm. H. Taft, of Ohio, sixth; Wm. A Woods of Indiana, seventh; Warrin Truitt, of Oregon, United States district judge for the district of Alaska.

As has been the case in most of the judicial appointments by President Harrison the appointments of circuit judges to-day, have excited favorable comment from both parties. The Democrats are gratified by the appointment of men of their party faith as a minority of the bench.

There is some talk of opposition to the confirmation of Judge Woods of Indiana. Otherwise there seems to be no friction. Judge W. L. Putman, of Maine, is said to be the best Democratic lawyer in the New England States. He is a man in about the prime of life and full of energy. He was at one time the Democratic candidate for governor of Maine, and was a member of the joint fisheries commission appointed to consider the Canadian dispute during the term of Mr. Cleveland.

Judge Shipman is a leading lawyer of Hartford Connecticut, being the head of one of the leading law firms of that section, and is Judge of the United States district court of his state. He was recommended by the two Connecticut Senators.

Geo. M. Dallas, the second Democrat on the list, is a nephew of the Vice President by that name. He is a native of Pennsylvania, and has practiced most of his life in Philadelphia. Representative Riley, of Pennsylvania, in whose town, Pollsville, Mr. Dallas began the practice of law, says the appointment is very appropriate. Mr. Dallas, he says, is a capable lawer, eminently qualified for the position.

Mr. Goff, is the leading Republican of West Virginia. He has served as United States district attorney, two terms in Congress and has twice run for Governor of his state. He served as Secretay of the Navy for part of a term under President Hayes. He is a capable lawyer and a man of great popularity.

The appointment of Solicitor General Taft is very favorably commented upon.

Judge Woods is the district judge of Indiana, who has been most talked of by the public at large on account of his decision favorable to Col. W. W. Dudley in the famous "blocks of five" prosecution. He is regarded by Indiana people as an eminent lawyer and was urged for a place in Mr. Harrison's Cabinet and also on the Supreme bench.

Mr. Putnam's appointment, it is said, was not requested by any of the Maine delegation in Congress and he was not a candidate for the office, having given his aid in behalf of the Republican candidate from Maine for judgeship.

Since writing the foregoing, Mr. Stephen B. Elkins' name has been sent to the Senate for Secretary of War vice Redfield Proctor, resigned. "Then Blaine will not be a candidate," is the utterance given by many politicians, Republicans and Democrats alike. It has been known for a long time that Secretary Blaine has been anxious to have Mr. Elkins in the cabinet, because Mr. Elkins was his intimate friend. A few politicians, who are credited with knowing all that is worth knowing, say this evening, that Mr. Elkins' nomination, will not in any way effect the action of Mr. Blaine on the Presidential nomination question, but these men are in a decided minority. Mr. Elkins is quoted as saying that, "his going into the Cabinet could not possibly effect the future of either Mr. Harrison or Mr. Blaine. This is, however, only another chapter of the studied mystery, which is undoubtedly well understood by President Harrison and Secretary Blaine.

President Harrison has decided to exercise the power vested in him in section 3 of the reciprocity clause of the McKinley Tariff bill and issue a proclamation restoring the duties on sugar, coffee, teas and molasses from the countries that have not negotiated reciprocity treaties with our government. The proclamation will take effect Jan. 1st, 1892, and will be issued in a few days, certainly not later than Christmas Day. It has been prepared by the Secretary of State and has been signed by the President. From time to time there have been rumors that the President would issue such a proclamation, but they have not been delivered. But the President has now decided to take this step regardless of consequence, and the announcement is therefore made in positive form. The effect of the proclamation will be far reaching. The only countries that have concluded reciprocity treaties with the United States, and will consequently, not be included in the proclamation, are Brazil, Cuba, Porto Rico, San Domingo and the British West Indies.

No country can complain of unfair treatment in the matter. All have had notice that the President would take this step on Jan. 1st, 1892, provided they did not make reciprocal arrangements with us before then. If they did not choose to believe that the President would exercise the power vested in him by Congress that is their lookout. Congress certainly did not intend this section of the Tariff law to be a dead letter.

SOME CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

How a Humorist Severed a Useful Present for His Wife.

CHRISTMAS, as has been said, I think by some great writer, comes but once a year.

It is a mighty fortunate thing for some of us that it doesn't come twice.

Perhaps it doesn't crowd every one to the verge of penury as it does me, but then every one hasn't such a penchant for keeping always in the neighborhood of penury as I have.

A while ago my father took it into his head that there was money in raising hogs, so he paid $40 for some squealers, fed them $60 worth of corn and sold $78.60 worth of pork. A drifting toward a sort of pig penury, he says.

One Christmas followeth so closely upon the heels of another that the space of time, after it is past, is but as a tale that is told or a Waterbury watch in the night. A Christmas past delighteth us not, but a Christmas present is a joy to our soul. And it is the Christmas present, Heaven strengthen us, that we all have to deal with.

For my part I never know what to buy. Only once have I had things all cut and dried for me. A little while before last Christmas I gave my celebrated funny lecture in a New England village, doing a one night stand for the benefit of the L. S. R. G. S. S. H. society of the brick church with shingle roof situate on the west side of the street as you leave the town. The name of the organization I found was the Ladies Sewing, Reaping, Gossiping and Sending Socks to the Heathen society. Which Heathen society they sent them to I never learned.

"GOING AT FIVE!"

Quite a good many people listened to my remarks, without more signs of pain than I have noticed everywhere. As one of the committeewomen remarked, facetiously, afterward, "there was more in the audience than there was in the lecture."

I noticed that no one seemed to be putting on overshoes, while I was slowly running down, or letting the cat die, as you might say, and after I had got off my final bon mot and didn't have a single bong mo' to get off, I sat down, but everybody stayed. Then the president of the society came to me and said: "Mr. Hood, our society has been making a autograph quilt. Ten cents to put your name on a block, you know. It's got over 400 blocks into it, and we've raised pretty near $50 for the heathen now. We thought, while everybody was here and it was so near Christmas, we'd have you auction the quilt off."

So I got up and held up the quilt and stepped on the edge of it and fell down, and everybody applauded and seemed to think it was a real clever thing to do. Mr. Hood then spoke in substance as follows:

"How much am I offered for this quilt? It is a well-made quilt and is strictly non-partisan. The names, you will notice, are in blocks of five; it is designed for protection: it won't tariff you're careful of it, will keep Silver Bill or any other man warm, and how much am I offered for it?"

Then everybody laughed quite a lot and nobody bid. I thought that they were afraid to speak up, so I said: "Well, now, I'll just start it at five dollars. Who'll make it six? Going at five—at five. Give me the half. Five I have; six will you give me? Going at five-five-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi—do I hear the six? Five I'm bid; are you all done? Going at five, fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-fi-five. Give me a quarter somebody. Five I have; do I hear the quarter? Five I have—going at five. Must I knock it down for such a paltry sum? Five I have; make it five dollars and ten cents. Five I have. Are you all done? Going, once—going, twice—going, twice—going, three times. Won't some one please bid?—and sold to a poor, misguided fool of a funny-lecture man for five dollars."

And then the society all crowded around me and thanked me, and said that I was such a clever auctioneer, and if I hadn't been there to run the auction they wouldn't have got half so much. So they deducted a fiver from my fee, said they didn't understand about the "locals," so I'd have to pay my own hotel bill, and then they left me alone with my quilt.

I tried to give it to the landlord, but he said: "Oh, hades, I wouldn't have the damb thing around the house!"

So a bright idea struck me, and I sent it home to my wife for a Christmas present. She keeps it up on the spare bed, and I notice that folks that come to see us nowadays, expecting to stay several months, always begin to weaken along about the third night, and we never had a guest yet who could stand that quilt with four hundred names on it for more than a week without going stark mad.

THE WATERWAYS.

A Convention in Detroit to Consider Needed Improvements.

Resolutions Adopted Asking the Government to Construct a Route Twenty-One Feet Deep from Chicago to the Atlantic.

FROM LAKE TO OCEAN.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 19.—When the deep-waterways convention reassembled Friday, the committee on resolutions reported a lengthy memorial to the senate and house of representatives, setting forth the history of lake navigation and dilating upon the importance of the 20-foot channel from Buffalo to Duluth and Chicago. The memorial abounds in interesting statistics, all of which go to show the advantage to be derived from the proposed action, and earnestly appeals to congress for such legislation as will provide for the immediate beginning of work at each of the required localities, so as to insure the completion of a 20-foot channel along the whole line by the time the works now in progress on the St. Mary's river are completed.

The resolutions accompanying the memorials and which were adopted, urge congress to authorize immediate commencement and speedy completion of an unobstructed channel not less than 20 feet in depth and sufficient width through the lakes and connecting waters between Chicago, Duluth, Superior and Buffalo, and that the secretary of war be authorized to make contracts for the entire work, and a sufficient sum of money be appropriated therefor, as every consideration of prosperity in time of peace and protection in time of war demands the construction of a waterway of sufficient capacity to allow the free passage of vessels drawing 20 feet of water through our own territory from the great lakes to the Atlantic ocean. The convention strongly favors the improvement of the Hudson river to a navigable depth of 20 feet from Coxsackie to Troy. It respectfully urges upon congress the necessity for the most liberal appropriations for the establishment and maintenance of all needed lighthouses, fog signals, buoys and beacons throughout the entire chain of lakes, to the end that added security may be given to life and property.

A committee of legislation was appointed to place the matter before congress.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates and cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HOLY LAND.

A TRIP FROM JAFFA TO THE JORDAN.

An Instructive and Entertaining Lecture Monday Evening at the M. E. Church, by Rev. R. W. Ryan, D. D., of Adrian, Michigan.

The large audience in attendance was intensely interested in the graphic and pleasing account of Dr. Ryan's personal experiences and observations in the Holy Land. The history of his journey from Jaffa to the Jordan formed a theme fascinating as a charming romance. The doctor is a fluent speaker of pleasing address and earnest manner,—characteristics which lent additional charm to the lecture and held the close attention of those who listened. Our space will permit only a passing notice of the chief places of interest dwelt upon by the speaker.

Jaffa was one of the most ancient and important sea-port towns of Palestine, situated on the Mediterranean coast, about thirty geographical miles from Jerusalem. The lofty hill on which the City stands is surrounded on the land side by orchards of orange, lemon, apricot and other trees, which for luxuriance and beauty are unsurpassed in the world. They extend several miles across the plain. The houses are grouped together without order; the streets are narrow, crooked and filthy. Few remains of antiquity are found, except the house of Simon, the tanner.

Passing out of Jaffa towards Jerusalem the traveler traverses part of the famous plain of Sharon. It consists of a tract of land north of Jaffa, extending to Cæsarea (whence it is frequently in Scripture coupled with Carmel), and reaching from the Central hills to the Mediterranean. It is celebrated for its roses, mentioned in Solomon's Songs.

The speaker entered Jerusalem by the well-known Jaffa Gate. It is on the west side of the City, close to the north-western angle of the Citadel. It consists of a massive square tower, the entrance to which from without is on the northern side, and the exit within on the eastern. All the roads from the country converge to this gate. The golden gate is one of the most striking features in the eastern wall. The Jews' Waiting Place is in the Tyropœon Valley, at the base of the wall which supports the west side of the Temple area. In the wall are five courses of large beveled stones in a fine state of preservation and which, beyond a doubt, are part of the original wall built by King Solomon. Here the Jews for long centuries have been permitted to approach the precincts of the temple of their fathers and bathe its hallowed stones with their tears. On each Friday, at this retired spot, Jews of both sexes, of all ages, and from every quarter of the globe are there, lifting up a united voice of wailing over the desolation of Zion and a desecrated sanctuary. They are objects of pity and sympathetic regard.

The principal structure described was the Mosque of Omar. It occupies a part of the spacious area known as the Haramesh Sheslf,—"the noble sanctuary." The massive and lofty walls by which this area is surrounded, the ornamented marble fountains and mihrabs, the broad elevated platform, encircled by graceful arches, prayer niches and cupolas; and the great Mosque itself, with its noble dome rising up in the center of all, bright and gorgeous as a vision of fairyland, all together form a picture such as is scarcely surpassed in the world. It is so secluded, so still and solemn that the very sight impresses one with the sense of its sacredness. The Mosque is believed to stand on the site of the ancient Jewish temple, in the center of which rests what is known as the "sacred rock." Concerning this rock the Moslems relate a number of absurd traditions. Within the Haram enclosure are many ot er structures. The Holy Sepulchre itself occupies the center of the grand rotunda. It stands quite alone, directly under the aperture in the center of the dome. The speaker described how he entered the Chapel of the Angel by its low door, saw the stone on which the angel sat, crept into the Sepulchre room and looked at the raised recess, which fine marble slab is said to cover the real rock couch where the body of our Lord was laid. As to the credibility of these sacred places, it is affirmed that when the Emperor Constantine and his mother Helena had become Christians she had a dream by which she was impelled to go to Jerusalem and search for the Sepulchre in which Christ was buried, and they found it. On this site Constantine built a group of edifices. These were subsequently destroyed, and rebuilt and destroyed again, but the site was preserved.

The next place of interest noted was Gethsemane, about three-quarters of a mile from the walls of Jerusalem. Our interest in this sacred spot clusters about that single wonderful event—the agony of our Saviour on the night before His crucifixion. A tradition which reaches back to the time of Helena locates it on the west side of Olivet, where, near the first bridge crossing the Kidron, on the way from St. Stephan's gate to the mountain, is an almost square piece of land enclosed by a common stone wall, within which stand several old olive trees. That this is the real garden there is little doubt. On entering this holy place, the scene of our Saviour's sufferings, the lecturer said that he was overwhelmed with strange sensations and could not restrain the falling tears.

Journeying on from Jerusalem the next place visited was Hebron, the oldest town in Palestine. It is situated among the mountains of Judah, twenty miles south of Jerusalem. When David reigned over Judah alone (seven and a half years) Hebron was his residence. The City lies in the narrow valley of Eschol, whose sides are clothed with vineyards, groves of olives, and other fruit trees. A short distance up the valley is a huge oak tree, said to be the tree of Mamre, under which Abraham pitched his tent. Two ancient pools are seen near by.

Leaving Hebron, with all its sacred memories, the journey is ended at the Dead Sea and the Jordan. The Dead Sea is the final receptacle of the River Jordan. The specific gravity of this sea is wonderful. Dr. Ryan says that he floated in it easily in an upright position, with his head and shoulders above the water. It had been thought that no bird could live on its waters, but they were observed swimming and diving in the water. A bath in the sea was richly enjoyed. At the north end of the sea are the entering waters of the Jordan. This celebrated stream is without parallel, historical or physical, in the whole world. No other river's name calls up such a host of sacred memories.

We have given but an imperfect sketch of one of the most valuable and impressive lectures ever delivered in Tecumseh, and which for nearly one hour and a half held the audience spell-bound.

Ida Van Courtland.

Ida Van Cortland and her very able company of twelve people will give her great performance of Lucretia Borgia at Sutton's opera house, Saturday night, Dec. 26th. Of the performance the Washtenaw Times of Ann Arbor says:

A fine house of representative people attended the VanCortland performance of "Lucretia Borgia," at the opera house last night, and that they saw one of the finest performances of the season seems to be the universal verdict. In fact, Miss VanCortland's assumption of the title role is worthy of being classed with the names of Cushman, Davenport or Siddons, rising at times to the very highest flights of tragic acting. Her costumes are very rich and tasty, as, in fact, are all those worn by the supporting company. Mr. Butler essayed the character of Gennaro in a masterly manner, and Mr. Tavernier, as Gubetta, gave a most excellent characterization of this difficult part.

Good in Every Family.

For plain, practical, common sense, useful information, and much of it at small cost, we recommend to every family in Country, Village and City, the Orange Judd Farmer. It is under the Editorial Care (with good helpers) of the Veteran Orange Judd, who still vigorously uses his pen, drawing on the accumulated knowledge and observation of nearly half a century, and is ever on the alert for good new things. He is ably assisted by sons associated with him. This journal omits most political and other controversial subjects, and devotes its beautiful and ample pages chiefly to practical questions affecting the work of every day life, out-door and in-door. Its "Common Sense Health Talks" are invaluable to every Man, Woman and Child everywhere. Published Weekly at $1.00 a year by Orange Judd Farmer Co., Chicago, Illinois.

Look out for John Simpkin's brass band and great street parade, Jan. 2d.

Editor Kempton, of Addison, gave us a two-minute call this forenoon. He was en route to Jackson to testify in a law-suit.

Spring has evidently come. The Italian harpist, with the usual accompaniments, was on our streets yesterday afternoon and last night, and rendered some fine music.—Adrian times.

Everybody should turn out and hear Wolff's orchestra at the Christmas Party to-morrow night. Concert begins at 7:30, the Grand March immediately following. Admission to Gallery 15 cents. Reserved seats at Adamson's, 25 cents.

Fred White, a theological student from Ann Arbor, supplied the Baptist pulpit Sunday morning and evening. Mr. White, though a young man, preaches a very strong and eloquent sermon and the congregation was exceedingly well pleased with his effort.

Brigade Hospital Steward, M. S. T. Geo. A. Conners, of Detroit, was in town Tuesday in consultation with Sur. Gen. Woodward and Hospital Steward Hall in regard to the hospital service for the next State encampment. We understand many improvements will be introduced in this branch of the service before next year.

"His wit, keen, cutting, and pleasing; his anecdotes; his laughable impersonations; his pronunciation and imagery; his frequent flights of true eloquence, must all be considered in forming an estimate; and then you do not know him until you have heard him. We echo the desire of all when we say "Let us have Mr. Nourse again."—The Morning Transcript, Lexington, Ky.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

Mac G. Fritz has resigned his position with Wm. McCowen and will give his personal attention to his Bazaar enterprise after Jan 1st. 1892.

Henry Wilson of West Tecumseh is making a very fine article of Jersey Creamery butter, which he calls the "gold coin." It is meeting with a ready sale.

Rather a soft time for poultry shipments, but notwithstanding that fact an immense amount has been shipped from this station during the past two weeks.

The Opera House will present a very handsome appearance to-morrow night, about 400 yards of bunting having been ordered to trim it for the Christmas Party.

The committee on decorations are hustling and you will see the old Opera House trimmed for Christmas Tide as it never was trimmed before, provided you come to the concert.

Ellen Fisher is home from Kalamazoo College. Willie Haines, of Charlevoix, son of Rev. M. E. Haines, a former pastor of the Baptist church here, is her guest over the holidays.

Mrs. Michael Wilson, who has been ill for some time with jaundice, died at her home in west Tecumseh last Saturday. The funeral services were held on Monday and were largely attended.

The souvenir edition of the Toledo Sunday Journal is just at hand and it is a beauty in every respect. In both matter and make up, it is a model holliday extra, and reflect credit upon its enterprising publishers.

Joseph Keppler has one of his brilliant cartoons in Puck of December 23d, entitled: "Europe's Christmas—'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men.'" Like all of this famous artist's work, it is skillfully drawn and handsomely colored, and will create a sensation in both Europe and America.

Below is the program for the Christmas Concert:

1. Overture, "Bohemian Girl"—Balfe—Orchestra.
2. —Clarinet Solo, "The Song That Reached My Heart"—Jordan—Koehler.
3. Cocoanut Solo, characteristic—Hermann.
4. Xylophone and Bell Solos—V. Platz.
5. Medley, "Daily Question"—popular airs—Orchestra.

The editor is home from Chicago, but about three-fourths "full" of the worst dose of the grip or something near akin. Part of the office force is also on the sick list from the same cause. As a result much matter received has been unavoidably left over for future consideration.—Adrian Messenger.

"Dr. Nourse is a happy speaker; at one moment he is plowing deep into the recesses of thought, and the next is skimming as lightly on the surface as the swallows on the buoyant air; he moves his audiences to laughter by irresistible humor, sweeps them upward on the tide of eloquence, dashes them here and there on the waves of logic and reason, only to drown them in tears by touching pathos.—Kentucky New Era.

Among the articles in the January magazines few will be of greater interest to the literary world or will be welcomed by a larger circle of readers than the "Personal Recollections of Nathaniel Hawthorne," by Horatio Bridge, in Harper's. Mr. Bridge was the classmate of Hawthorne at Bowdoin College, and for forty-three years thereafter enjoyed with him an intimate friendship. His reminiscences will doubtless embrace a large number of interesting facts which have not hitherto been published.

The hospitable farm home of John Margeson was the scene of a happy social event on Thursday evening, Dec. 10th, at which time about one hundred guests assembled to witness the marriage of Mr. C. A. Satterthwaite and Miss Alice B. Garlinghouse. Shortly after five o'clock the knot was tied by Rev. F. E. Arnold, and then hearty congratulations followed. A beautiful array of wedding gifts bespoke the esteem of the assembled guests more emphatically than mere words can express. A pleasant evening devoted to social chat and refreshments was enjoyed by all. The bride and groom left at eight o'clock, driving to Mr. Fred Kopke's home in Raisin, and from thence they took a Wabash train for Ionia county, to visit friends there. Both of the contracting parties have been residents of this vicinity for many years and are held in high esteem by a large circle of acquaintances. Among the many good wishes they will receive at this auspicious season the HERALD begs leave to add its own hearty congratulations.

When Mr. Charles H. The bazaar and festival given by the ladies of St. Peter's Episcopal Church last Thursday evening was a marked success. Numerous fancy articles suitable for holiday gifts were sold during the afternoon and refreshments were sold at the usual supper hour and during the evening. It was not only a very agreeable fair socially considered, but was a nice thing financially also. They cleared over eighty dollars.

Last Sunday evening, at the Presbyterian church, a large audience listened to a fine Christmas concert. Special music was prepared for the occasion, in which the choir assisted the Sunday School, with Miss Jennie Root at the organ, and also W. S. Dickinson, cornet; Geo. Knapp, violin; J. R. Hosmer and Ernest Goff, flutes. Recitations were given by Robbie Rogers, Leila Knapp and Mabel Mills; select readings by Christine Wilson and Willie Elliott; a special exercise by Jennie Nyland's class. The Primary class, Mrs. S. W. Anderson teacher, assisted by Mrs. John J. Orr at the piano, rendered a beautiful motion song very finely. A large lot of presents was brought in, and a box weighing 250 pounds was sent to a school at Boyne Falls, Mich., and $5.00 to the pastor of the church there. The entire program was a most excellent one and was a decided innovation upon the usual style of Christmas services.

SENATOR PLUMB DEAD.

The Kansas Statesman Suddenly Expires in Washington.

Apoplexy Was the Cause of His Death—His Wife Heartbroken—A Brief Sketch of His Remarkable Career.

SUDDENLY CALLED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Senator Preston B. Plumb, of Kansas, is dead. He was stricken with apoplexy at an early hour yesterday morning, and after lingering some hours in an unconscious condition died a few minutes before noon.

The news of his death spread rapidly through the city, and was a great shock to the public. Indeed, it was hardly credited by his associates, being regarded as a rumor. The matter of breaking the sad news to Mrs. Plumb, who is in feeble health, was a delicate one, and was done through a telegram to Maj. Hood, president of the Emporia national bank at Emporia, Kan., where Mrs. Plumb now is.

In a political sense Senator Plumb's death is a great loss to his party. In a public sense it is equally great to the country, for he was a legislator of tried experience and of great ability. He was chairman of the public lands committee, was next to Chairman Allison on the appropriations committee, and held other influential places.

EMPORIA, Kan., Dec. 21.—At noon Sunday, just as church services were about closing, news of the death of Senator Plumb reached this city. Mrs. Plumb, the wife of the senator, who has been an invalid for several years, was at the First Congregational church, at which she is a regular attendant when her health permits. The news was not broken to her until she had arrived at her home, when Mrs. Maj. Calvin Hood, accompanied by Mrs. T. E. Perley, both lifelong friends of Mrs. Plumb, and the former the wife of the business partner of the senator, waited upon her and in the gentlest manner possible conveyed the terrible intelligence to her. At first she seemed like one stricken to the death and for a time her life was despaired of, owing to her feeble state of health. She, however, rallied and is now bearing up under her crushing grief with a fortitude wonderful to behold.

[Senator Plumb was born in Delaware county, O., October 12 1837, so that he was in his 54th year at the time of his death. He was not a college graduate, but left the common schools for the printer's case, and in pursuance of his vocation as a journeyman printer in 1854, in the bloody days of the history of the newly organized territory of Kansas, he walked into that territory. He plunged at once into the thick of the political strife which then was waging over the slavery question. He at once went to the front and soon became a member of the Leavenworth Constitutional congress of 1859. He was admitted to the bar in 1861, when the place of his adoption became a state of the union; served in the legislature in 1862, was chairman of the judiciary committee, and subsequently reported the supreme court. When the war broke out he entered the army as second lieutenant in the Eleventh Kansas infantry and served successively as captain, major and lieutenant-colonel of the regiment, and was commissioned a colonel of the regiment in August, 1862. After the war Mr. Plumb, returning to Kansas, was elected a member of the Kansas house of representatives, and in 1876 was chosen United States senator to succeed James M. Harvey, republican. He took his seat in 1877 and has represented his state as a senator ever since that time. His term of office would have expired March 3, 1895.]

DEATH BY DYNAMITE.

The Head of One Man Blown Off and the Heart of Another Blown Out.

While preparing to lower a charge of dynamite into a well which they were boring the giant explosive was accidentally set off. Bell's head was blown entirely off and to a distance of 15 feet. Gordon was struck in the left side, the heart being blown entirely out of his body. Gordon's relatives live at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Death of a Well-Known Iowan.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Dec. 21.—Edward Russell died at Minneapolis Saturday morning, aged 62 years. At 18 years of age he came to Davenport and lived here until 1887. He was editor of the Davenport Gazette for more than nineteen years and postmaster here for seventeen years, his commissions having been signed by Abraham Lincoln, U. S. Grant, R. B. Hayes and James A. Garfield. During Johnson's term he resigned, but was reappointed. He was secretary of the Hennepin canal commission for years.

D., Dec. 21.—The population of North Dakota, as given by the official report of the census department, shows that as far as can be determined there were 36,909 people in this territory in 1880 and that ten years later there were 182,719, an increase of 145,810 residents, or 394.05 per cent.

LABOR FEDERATION.

Samuel Gompers Reelected President at the Alabama Meeting.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 19.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor yesterday adopted a resolution favoring a woman's suffrage amendment to the constitution and refused to adopt a resolution recommending political action on the part of trades unions. Samuel Gompers was reelected president; P. J. McGuire, of Pennsylvania, first vice president; W. A. Carney, of Pittsburgh, second vice president; Chris Evans, of New York, secretary, and John B. Lannon, of New York, treasurer.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 21.—The Federation of Labor adjourned Saturday. They refused to allow James Hughes, of the New York Knights of Labor, to give his grievances against the United Garment Workers of that city, but they adopted a series of resolutions providing a basis of agreement by which harmony will be restored between the Knights of Labor and the federation.

It was decided to renew the struggle for the eight-hour working day during the coming year and the executive council will select the organization that will make the test. Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Denver and Hot Springs were named for the next annual convention, and Philadelphia was chosen.

HER AIM WAS DEADLY.

A Philadelphia Woman Coolly Commits Murder.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21. — Mrs. Josephine Smith, 25 years old, Saturday afternoon shot and instantly killed John Hobbs in the Powelton avenue station of the Pennsylvania railroad. As yet the police have been unable to discover the cause that induced the woman to kill Hobbs, but the supposition is that they had been intimate, and that Hobbs was weary of her. As Hobbs was about to step from the platform upon the steps of a train the woman drew a revolver and shot him in the back of the head. The bullet pierced his brain and he fell, dying almost instantly. After the shooting the woman coolly handed her revolver over to the officer, and without any remark accompanied him to the station house. When brought before the magistrate she declined to make any statement regarding the shooting. Mrs. Smith's maiden name was Madison, and she is the daughter of a wealthy mill owner of this city.

KILLED BY HIS SON.

Murder of Senator Sam Paul, a Noted Indian Statesman.

ARDMORE, I. T., Dec. 21.—A telegram from Paul's Valley, just received here, brings intelligence of the murder of Senator Sam Paul by his son, Joe Paul, at that place Saturday night. The senator had just concluded supper and pushed his chair back, when his son entered the restaurant door and discharged one barrel of a double-barrel shotgun at him, blowing the top of his head off. As the murdered man rolled under the table the other barrel was discharged, the load entering the body. The murderer then mounted his horse and rode off.

[Senator Paul was one of the most prominent Indians of the country, and enjoyed a national reputation as a politician and public man. He had only a few days ago completed a canvass of the Chickasaw nation and was preparing to start for Washington in the interest of general jurisdiction for territorial courts and the opening of the Indian country to white settlement. He was a citizen of the United States, having taken the oath of allegiance a few months ago.]

KINGFISHER, O. T., Dec. 21. — Four car loads of negroes came into Oklahoma Saturday morning on the Rock Island railroad from Memphis, Tenn. Half of them, being about twenty families, or an aggregate of about eighty persons, stopped here and the others went to El Reno. They claim to be well provided with money, horses and mules, farming implements, household goods and provisions. They are all well clothed and are evidently a superior looking class of colored people.

FOR THE HUNGRY.

A Shipload of Flour Soon to Be Sent to Russia.

Success of the "Northwestern Miller's" Scheme—Secretary Rusk and Senator Paddock Plan to Kill Two Birds with One Stone.

STARVING RUSSIANS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 21.—The donations to the shipload of flour which the Northwestern Miller is soliciting from the millers of America for the starving peasants of Russia are receiving constant accessions. The total amount subscribed up to this time is 900,000 pounds.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 21.—Gov. Thayer has issued an appeal to the people of Nebraska calling for contributions of corn sufficient to make a trainload to be sent to the needy peasants of Russia.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The famine in breadstuffs in Russia has attracted the attention of the United States government, as it has that of every civilized country. Secretary Rusk has given it considerable thought, and he and Senator Paddock have hit upon a good idea by which they propose to do a humanitarian act, and at the same time prove to the Russian government that American corn is a first-class food product.

This government has been trying for twenty years to introduce corn abroad as food, without great success. Under the present condition of affairs Secretary Rusk and Senator Paddock believe Russia will gladly receive the cereal. They propose that the farmers of Kansas, Nebraska and other western states shall contribute to a huge train load of corn that shall be sent as a gift. It can be carried across the country free and probably transported across the ocean in the same way.

By this method several hundred tons of corn will be sent to Russia and an excellent opportunity of introducing it taken advantage of. Senator Paddock will take immediate steps to put the idea into execution.

SECRETARY OF WAR.

Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia, Will Succeed Mr. Proctor.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The president has sent to the senate the nomination of Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia, to be secretary of war. In some quarters the nomination of Mr. Elkins is something of a surprise, although his name has frequently been mentioned in this connection recently. There was a widespread belief, however, that the portfolio would fall to Gen. Lewis A. Grant, the assistant secretary of war, and an able associate of Secretary Proctor.

[Stephen Benton Elkins, the newly nominated secretary of war, was born in Perry county, O., September 26, 1841. He removed to Missouri while quite young, graduated from the Missouri university in 1850, and subsequently studied law. He served in 1862-3 as a captain in the Seventy-seventh Missouri regiment. In 1864 he was admitted to the bar of New Mexico. Then he accumulated a fortune in mining and stock raising. He was a member of the territorial legislature in 1868-9, and United States district attorney in 1870-72. He was then elected to congress on the republican ticket, and served two terms, from 1873 to 1877. He was a member of the national republican committee from 1872 until 1884, and was once its chairman. He took an active part in the Chicago convention of 1884 that nominated James G. Blaine for the presidency, and is a staunch friend of the secretary of state.]

MERIT WINS.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica alve and Electric Bitters, and haves never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal Satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. J. J. Orr, Druggist.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world today.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

HURRAH FOR CHRISTMAS.

HURRAH for merry Christmas with its mistletoe and holly
And royal feasts of goodly cheer when everyone is jolly:
Hurrah for good Kriss Kringle, too, who brings his sleigh of treasures
To fill the children's stockings with such overflowing measures.

Of all the days we love to praise is Christmas best and brightest;
Then faces shine with joy divine and then we're hearts the lightest;
Then gifts abound, and pleasure crowned are those who are receiving—
But gladder, O, are those who know the sweeter bliss of giving.

The girls and boys hail Christmas joys with eagerness excited,
The babe in arms at Christmas charms claps little hands, delighted—
But old folks all, who then recall sweet childhood's memories clinging,
Have thrice the fun of anyone when Christmas bells are ringing.

When cold winds blow and heap the snow and woods are bleak and dreary,
The Christmas tree aglow we see in homes all warm and cheery.
And faces bright reflect its light and merry voices mingle,
While from above look down with love glad angels and Kriss Kringle.

Hurrah for merry Christmas when we all are O, so jolly,
And yule logs blaze with brightest rays on mistletoe and holly;
And pie and cake and puddings make the feasters rounder growing,
And good Saint Nick fills stockings quick with treasures overflowing.

H. C. DODGE.

THE pageantry of Christmas has been formed by processions moving from many countries and from remote ages.

The old heathen druids were wont, at this time of the year, to bear the evergreen, the holly and the mistletoe from the forests to decorate their temples, long before the grasses and the corn leaves rustled about the head of that marvelous child in Bethlehem's stable.

Grave and dignified men, during the Saturnalian days of southern climes, at our Christmas period indulged in the "feast of fools" when they gave way to all of a boy's abandon hilarity, ages anterior to that era, "when the wise men from the east" bent in wrapt contemplation over the Baby Boy, who lay in sweet unconsciousness in the manger midst Judea's hills.

Out of the twilight of heathen countries has come the children's custom of hanging the stocking near the fireplace for the good fairy to fill with knick-knacks so dear to the child's heart.

It is an evidence of the real character of our Christmas spirit that it could secure to its service, for the illustration of its own spirit, these and other customs, as it is also an evidence of the generous breath of Christianity's spirit to receive, employ and honor every good custom of man.

Adapted to celebrate the truth of Christmas, all these customs were relieved of many evil features and exalted in their whole tone.

A light heart, a merry countenance, an elated spirit only are in harmony with the day.

It is a day of generosity, too. The best gift of Heaven was bestowed upon the earth.

They tell us that the angels came floating down from the heights of Heaven with rapturous songs of joy, congratulating humanity in its great good fortune. We know that the only proper mood which a human being should indulge upon the reception of such news, and the commemoration of such an occasion, is a joyous one—so great as to surpass his power to display it. A tender, loving, vital alliance has been formed by the Creator with our natures. Finite are we? But Christmas tells us that we are in bonds with the Infinite. Poor are we, limited to a little earth? But Christmas tells us that we are heirs of the unbounded universe.

But the true spirit of Christmas will not be recognized if the favors bestowed, at least some of them, are not for some more unfortunate person. The poor, the sick, the outcast, the degraded, the weak and defenseless are the proper ones to excite our generosity.

It is a day also of good will. "Peace on earth and good will to men," sang the angels.

Old grudges are to be buried on this day. Every human being is to be met in a kindly spirit. A cessation of hostilities is to be announced, and a general amnesty should be proclaimed. The pipe of peace—if any pipe is to be smoked—should be smoked first, and reconciliations be effected.

It is a cosmopolitan day. In celebrating Christmas we are not Americans, or Englishmen, or Germans, but citizens of the world, for this is the only festival in which the civilized world joins. Peace on all the wide earth, good will to every man in every land, is the sentiment of the day.

Then it is the children's day. What immense significance is contained in that statement! But we pause, unable for space, to utter the thoughts which rise and the emotions which crowd within our hearts at the mention of the children. May everyone of them have a merry Christmas!

THE UNEXPECTED GUEST.

An Odd Christmas Story of Twin Houses.

RUDOLPH BOULONGER was very eccentric, very peculiar. He was learned and rich but conspicuously lacked commonsense. Nevertheless he was lucky to an extent passing belief. Other men toiled faithfully for years and used the best judgment, but their ventures failed. Fate was their relentless enemy. Boulonger would do something which in the eyes of the wise stamped him as a fool, and yet his seemingly brainless act would bring him a small fortune.

His boyhood was one of ease, his father being in good circumstances and requiring nothing more of his son than that he should go to school and college and learn from books all that he could. Rudolph had a splendid memory, and absorbed printed knowledge as readily as a sponge sucks up water. He gave no attention to anything except books until the death of his father compelled him to think how he should live and pay his bills. The fortune left him was modest, and his friends, knowing what a lamentably impractical person he was, advised him to put his money in a savings bank, not to marry, and to live economically. He rejected their advice with scorn. He wished to travel abroad and enjoy luxuries. He invested nearly all of his fortune in a gold mine. His friends were horror-stricken. They said his money would surely be lost in the wildcat scheme, and that, as he was utterly incapable of making a living, he would be obliged to go to the poorhouse, and eventually, perhaps, to the retreat for imbeciles. But to the surprise of the foreboders the mine soon proved to be one of the richest on this continent and in a few years Rudolph possessed a half million dollars. Henceforth his career was marked by a succession of lucky blunders. He would buy real estate in a wilderness where only the remains of Indian tribes could be persuaded to dwell, and in a year's time a railroad would be run through his land and he would sell building lots at a handsome profit for the establishment of a village. He did other things equally absurd, but made money every time.

In spite of his many eccentricities he secured for a wife a beautiful and accomplished girl. How she ever allowed herself to marry him was a marvel to those who knew them. But they appeared to live happily together. Their children, twins named James and Edith, were sensible like their mother.

The family resided in a fine country mansion about a mile from the outskirts of Boston. Their nearest neighbor was a well-to-do farmer whose son, John Hendrickson, a sturdy and practical young man, fell in love with Edith Boulonger when she was eighteen years old. But Mr. Boulonger wished his daughter to marry a college-bred man who was the descendant of an old and cultured family. Another requirement was that the suitor should either be rich enough to lead a life of elegant leisure or else should be a professional man; doctor or lawyer admissible, but minister preferred. That Edith should marry a mere farmer was preposterous. Moreover, Mr. Boulonger did not like Hendrickson for a reason that will late appear.

"YOU CAN NEVER MARRY MY DAUGHTER."

"It will be useless to speak to father," said Edith to John one Christmas eve. "He will never give his consent to my marrying you."

"Nevertheless I will speak to him," replied the bold lover. "He shall know that I dare to face him."

Mr. Boulonger sat in his library when the young man was ushered into his presence. The eccentric gentleman assumed an air of dignity and clothed his countenance with an ominous frown. He believed that his demeanor alone would dishearten his intended victim. But Hendrickson was not awed at all. Aristocratic pretensions had no effect upon the independent American except to make him despise them.

"You can never marry my daughter," said Mr. Boulonger, in weighty tones.

"Why?"

"For various reasons. The most important one is that you do not belong to a cultured family and are not college bred. You are neither an Artium Baccalaureus nor an Artium Magister. Moreover, you deceived me when I bought that Jersey cow of you. As soon as she was in my stable I ordered my hired man to milk her. He reported that he could not obtain any milk. Thinking the pail might leak, I ordered him to go to a tin shop and buy a new, tight pail. He at once obeyed. He placed the new pail under the cow and again manipulated the udders. There was no flow whatever. The cow's bag was small and shrunken. It was a clear case of desiccation. For lacteal purposes the animal was useless. I sold her that very day."

Hendrickson could scarcely restrain a shout of laughter.

"There was nothing the matter with the cow," he exclaimed. "I had milked her just before sending her to your place and of course her bag was empty."

Rudolph was not astonished. Evidences of his stupidity were too frequently brought to his attention to cause him any uneasiness. Moreover he was too pigheaded to acknowledge an unwelcome truth while he could think of any pretext with which to combat it.

"OH, FATHER! SPARE HIM!"

"An ingenious excuse on your part," he replied, stiffly, "but it will not answer. You must recollect that I have studied the genus bovine scientifically. I have one hundred books relating to the breeding and nurture of cattle and to the diseases to which they are liable. I have read every one of these books through and can speak with an authority unknown to the empirical farmers in this neighborhood. I know when a cow is in a normal condition; and I say that the Jersey that you sold me was a farrow cow that had long ceased to yield any lacteal fluid."

Hendrickson soon left in disgust. Had he not loved the daughter deeply, he would have objected to marrying into a family the head of which was so great a fool.

It was a sad Christmas eve for the lovers. John bade Edith farewell with the knowledge that a long time would probably elapse before they could meet again.

As for Mr. Boulonger, he made up his mind that his children were being vulgarized by too much contact with rural influences, and the family moved into the city, where they boarded at a hotel during the greater part of the next year. In conformity with his eccentric tendencies Mr. Boulonger, when spring arrived, set about carrying into effect a long cherished plan. He purchased two adjoining building lots in the suburbs of Boston and erected upon them two large square houses that were built and painted just alike. He also furnished the houses so carefully and arranged their contents so systematically that the interiors of the structures were exactly similar. His son and daughter were twins, he said, and ought to live in twin houses, his design being to have James live in one house and Edith in the other after each had succeeded in getting married. He selected a minister for Edith; but the young lady did not favor her father's plan, and the dominie made as poor progress in his courtship as he did in writing sermons that contained original and interesting ideas.

Finding that his children would not marry immediately, Mr. Boulonger moved with his family into one of the furnished houses and rented the other house to a Mr. Belnap, a friend who also knew John Hendrickson and liked him well.

Meanwhile James Boulonger had acted as a confidential messenger between his sister and her lover; and the three, with Mr. Belnap and Mrs. Boulonger as confederates, devised an artful plan by which it was hoped the elder Boulonger might be persuaded to accept Hendrickson as a son-in-law.

At the approach of the holiday season the young farmer came to Boston and became the guest of Mr. Belnap, much to the annoyance of Radolph Boulonger.

Nothing of interest occurred until Christmas eve. Then in the midst of a blinding snowstorm James Boulonger returned home at midnight. The rest of the family were abed and asleep and James retired to his couch without delay.

An hour later the household were startled from their slumbers by the cry: "Robbers, robbers!"

James Boulonger dashed out of his bedroom and fired his pistol. Old Rudolph was aroused, and with a rifle in his hand ran out of his sleeping apartment on the first floor. Father and son met in the dining-room where much expensive silverware, which it had been hoped would grace the Christmas dinner the next day, had been stored in a sideboard. The silver had not been disturbed.

"We are just in time," cried Rudolph. "The rascals would soon have secured all of our silver had they not been frightened. I do not hear them, but they have probably not gone from the house. They are undoubtedly armed and may fight desperately."

His ardor was not so great as it was at first. But James was full of prowess and his father reluctantly followed him to the kitchen.

"There he is!" cried Rudolph as he saw a man dart into an entry that led to the cellar. With hands that trembled violently the old man raised his rifle and fired at random. The room was filled with smoke, and Rudolph was at the same moment filled with confidence. He was not afraid of a robber who retreated as if he were unarmed. Rudolph put another cartridge in his gun and quite boldly opened the door connecting the entry with the cellar.

"For God's sake!" cried a voice in the darkness, "do not shoot again. I am John Hendrickson."

"Ha! it is you, you rascal. Just what I've expected; you've become a robber, I'll dispose of you so that you'll never sell another dried up cow," shouted Rudolph; and again he blazed away, although he could not see Hendrickson.

"Father, oh, father, spare him! It is all a dreadful mistake!" cried Edith, as she pinioned her infuriated parent's arms with her own.

"Listen to me just a moment," said Hendrickson in excited tones as he appeared from behind a barrel when he saw that there was to be a cessation in the hostilities. "You know that I have been visiting Mr. Belnap, and that this house and the one in which he lives are just alike outside and in. I approached this house in the midst of blinding snow, thinking it was the right one. I found the door unlocked, but supposed Mr. Belnap had forgotten to secure it after him. I entered and locked the door. Every object about me was familiar. I descended to the kitchen and left my coat and rubbers there. I then returned to the parlor and lighted a lamp. Not feeling sleepy I read for about an hour, having found a copy of the same book which I had been reading at Mr. Belnap's. About one o'clock I went to the bedroom which I supposed was mine, and to my intense surprise found your son in it. He was awake and was after me with a pistol in an instant. You know the rest."

"Did you leave the door unlocked?" asked Mr. Boulonger, turning toward his son.

"I declare, I believe I did," said James.

He did not add, however, that he had left the door unlocked purposely and was not surprised by what had subsequently occurred.

Rudolph Boulonger shuddered, not knowing that he had been firing blank cartridges that had thoughtfully been provided for his use, and was glad that he had not killed an innocent man. He felt that he had greatly wronged John Hendrickson; he observed with alarm the highly-wrought feelings of his daughter; his nerves were too much shaken for him to deny that the twin houses which his eccentricity had caused him to erect and furnish alike were responsible for the unwelcome occurrence, and he was glad to make peace by giving the intruder permission to marry Edith.

The next day the family sat down to a splendid Christmas dinner in their home, and John Hendrickson, the unexpected guest, was entertained by them in a very pleasant manner.

"It is a fitting occasion for a reconciliation," said Rudolph Boulonger, whose recent experience had made him unusually regardful of religion. "I for one am glad to feel the influences of a day that has brought 'peace on earth and good-will to men.'"

"PEACE ON EARTH."

The others acquiesced in the worthy sentiment.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hendrickson and Mrs. and Mrs. James Boulonger now reside in the twin houses, and every Christmas the two families and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Boulonger dine together in one of the peculiar dwellings.

It is said that on one of the happy occasions Rudolph Boulonger was gently told of the ruse by which he had been deceived. Edith and her husband excusing themselves by saying that there had been love and war and that all tactics were fair in both. It is further reported that the old gentleman forgave the couple, having in the meantime learned from the owner of the Jersey cow that that animal had given a good mess of milk eight hours after she had left the Boulonger farm.

Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company

OF MILWAUKEE. WIS.

PERSONAL TO YOU.

The first dividends on Tontine Policies of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, paid this year, 1891, are from 40 to 55 percent. larger than similar Tontine Dividends in the New York Companies. This protentous truth has made the agents of those companies more industrious than ever in circulating slanders upon the Northwestern, and in endeavoring to show by false ratios and delusive figures that the "Northwestern's dividends have been falling off. If it can be proved: First, That the Northwestern's dividends are running down; or, Second, that the Northwestern's dividends on similar policies in past and present are not anywhere from 40 to 250 per cent larger than the dividends of the Companies whose agents are circulating these delusive attacks, then the Northwestern agent will agree willingly and forever to retire from Life Insurance business and leave the field free to the attacking Companies. We want no business and ask for no man's application unless we can prove that the Northwestern will do better by him than any other company.

After having used only seven bottles of S. S. S., he feels like a new man. The painful trouble is all gone, and now at sixty years of age he is once more in good health, and restored to his family. He states that his cure is entirely due to S. S. S. He says that he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that his post-office address is Olean, Pike county, Ala., and that as he wishes all sufferers to know the good that he has received from the medicine, he will take pleasure in answering any inquiries that may be sent him. The January number of Lippincott's Magazine is marked by several new features: the first of sundry stories and sketches illustrating journalistic life and labors; the first of a series of articles on athletic subjects; an editorial department headed "As It Seems," containing brief essays and comments on various topics of the times, literary and other; and notices of several recent books, given in the form of dialogue.

"The lecture more than met all the expectations which the advertising bills had excited. It was instructive; it was full of witty bits and curns; there were passages in it of tenderest pathos; and every now and then there were splendid outbursts of oratory, which carried everything along with them. One, in listening, was reminded of the best days of Gough."—The Advance, Chicago.

WIDOW DRAKE'S BEAU.

Why He Looks Forward Impatiently to New Year's Day.

"WELL!" said the hired girl, as she took a clothespin from her mouth and carefully fastened a pair of trousers of ancient cut and ample proportions to the clothesline, "when it comes to widows, I own 'em to be beyond my understandin'. What Mrs. Drake can see in that there furrin-speakin' westerner I can't see. But there's no question but what the weddin's to come off sometime soon, an' her tellin' me to fetch these here clo'se that belonged to number one out an' air 'em is to my mind a sure sign she's goin' to dispose of 'em an' get 'em out the way before number two comes along.

"Her first's been under the sod these ten year an' she's mourned him long enough, the land knows. I ain't in no way against widows marryin' an' tryin' it again if they like; but I do say it 'ud be more seemly to choose a man o' her own Yankee stock than one o' frog-eatin' French descent."

And the hired girl gave the vest which she was shaking a jerk which sent one of the buttons half-way across the yard.

It certainly did look as though there was to be a wedding at Widow Drake's before long, and the neighbors whispered that there was a little romance connected with it. And so there was, but they never could have guessed what it was about, neither could you if you were to try for a month—so I am going to tell you all about it.

The Widow Drake was plump, well-preserved little body, with fresh rosy cheeks and bright blue eyes and the smoothest of brown hair without a thread of silver in it. She was not young, but nobody would have guessed that she was forty, and as a woman is only as old as she looks, she kept her own counsel and let people speak of her as being thirty-five.

Her husband had left her a neat little home and enough money to keep her comfortably without any care beyond a few little economies now and then, in the shape of a dyed gown or a reconstructed bonnet.

Her life was calm and uneventful: too uneventful, by half, she thought, as she sat in the twilight stroking the great Maltese cat which was her companion and confidant.

Priscilla, the maid of all work, was a woman of too mature an age to be called a girl in any other sense than a "hired girl," and she chose that title of her own free will. She had lived with Mrs. Drake during her brief married life, and the widow had kept her ever since because she dreaded being alone in the house. But Priscilla was neither sympathetic nor responsive, and Tom, the Maltese cat, was much more apt to agree with the widow's opinions, so it was to him that she whispered, upon this evening in June, that she had half a mind to go west and take up a claim.

And Tom purred his approval and the widow went on and poured into his ear a scheme which had been working in her mind for several days.

Of course every one said that she must be crazy. Odd, over-thrifty and venturesome were the mildest of the adjectives which were applied to this harmless little woman, who was simply tired of the dull life which she was living and who knew of no other way of making a change which would benefit her health and mind and her purse as well.

And that is how it happened that this woman, who seemed far too dainty for such a life, was living away out on a Dakota claim, in a snug little shanty of pine boards, banked with sods, and in the midst of the crudest of surroundings.

It was the first of July when she filed her claim and it was required that there should be a six months' residence upon it. Everybody said that she never would stay half the time; but she smiled and stroked old Tom.

It wasn't so bad after all, she thought. There were plenty of neighbors—not very near, to be sure—but half a mile seems so much nearer in that clear atmosphere which transmits light and sound so marvelously.

Each morning she heard the shrill vocal salute of the two schoolma'ams who lived on the claim next hers; and from her own door she would call back a hearty "halloo-o," which always brought a smile to the faces of those ancient dames.

And then, out there everybody was so kind to everybody else, and somebody was always offering to bring one's mail or one's groceries from the queer low hut which served as general store, post office, machine shop and dwelling in one.

Of course the bill of fare was apt to be a little monotonous. There was a great deal of salt pork and bacon and dried fish, but there were lots of tinned vegetables and canned fruit from home to help out; and, really, it wasn't at all what one would fancy from the doleful tales one hears of the suffering in new countries.

Then there were papers and magazines and letters from dear ones. Only there was one trouble. The widow had no dear ones. She was so alone. And a little jealous feeling would come in spite of her when the two old maids would stop with their hands full of letters from sisters and nephews and nieces, to hand her a letter from—Priscilla.

THE SHY MAN'S OFFERING.

Sometimes a tear would drop on Tom's sleek coat, but that was not often; only when she was silly, she told herself.

Now there was, about three-quarters of a mile to the right of the widow's shanty a modest little shock, half covered with luxuriant vines; over the front door was a roughly-made lattice, and this, too, was covered with the vines, and the whole cottage was a picturesque little affair and the envy of the schoolma'ams, who loved flowers, but whose vines always died and whose ornamental gardening was confined to a bed of sickly-looking four o'clocks which grew by their door.

The owner of the vine-draped shanty was a bachelor of middle age who spoke with a queer foreign accent. He was an extremely bashful man and he scarcely dared look at the ladies as they passed him, with the good-natured "Howdy" that was the customary greeting of the country.

The widow had watched him often from the window as he plowed upon his claim, and she admired his fine manly bearing, and she did wish in her heart that he'd be a bit neighborly, and she told Tom so; but Tom only purred and stretched himself in the sun.

Now, as I said, the schoolma'ams were passionately fond of flowers and were discouraged and chagrined that nothing would grow in their door yard. So one day when they saw the owner of Vine cottage, as they called it, setting out for town, they equipped themselves with a basket and trowel and, stopping for the widow, they went on a tour of pillage.

They all entered into the fun of the thing and in an hour or more a drooping, dejected-looking vine was clinging to a string beside the door of each cottage.

And the odd thing was, that while the vine of the schoolma'ams faded and died, that of the widow grew and throve marvelously. So wonderful was its growth that soon it began to spread over the walls and roof until her shanty rivaled the vine cottage in the way of verdure. And the two old maids joked the widow and caused her to blush furiously at the undignified prank she had played in getting the vine.

In time, the shy man grew a little neighborly and sometimes a brace of prairie chickens would be hung, without a word, on the widow's door. Or again it would be a lot of rare pebbles, quartz and agate, or a trout or pickerel from the lake near by. And at each offering the widow would nod her pretty head wisely and smile to herself.

Nature was kind to the pioneers that year. There had been no severe storms, no terrible heat or drought, and in November it was still mild and warm, without a sign of frost. Everyone said that it was a remarkable season, just as though the remark were quite new and original.

The widow was saying to herself one afternoon that after all it had been very pleasant to be a pioneer woman. There had been no great discomforts and deprivations, and now that there were but two months more to stay, she was half sorry.

She had been putting away some of her summer clothes, and a white Mother Hubbard wrapper, a favorite garment of the widow's, hung upon a clothesline beside the house. It was a dainty thing, white cambric, with lace-edged ruffles and with a pink ribbon bow with long ends at the neck. Indeed, to have seen the widow in it would have reconciled the most prejudiced person to the much-maligned Mother Hubbard.

There had been little fitful gusts of wind all day and late in the afternoon it became quite a gale. The tumble weeds hurried from spot to spot as the wind veered about, and the dainty Mother Hubbard flapped furiously in the breeze, but the widow was reading a very interesting book and never looked up until crash came a flying board against the side of the house and the shanty began to sway and rock like a cradle.

It was a short-lived storm and there was no damage done, and in half an hour the sky was again clear; but when Mrs. Drake went out to look for her gown it was gone. Of course the wind had torn it to tatters. There was no use to look for it; it was gone forever, and with a sigh the little woman went into the house.

The next two months flew very swiftly. The bachelor had grown bolder and had come to call, but the lively widow did the most of the talking and he replied in broken monosyllables.

The weather was still bright and pleasant, and there had been no blizzards, no snow. That was "remarkable" too, for it was nearly holiday time.

Then came Xmas, such a queer, quiet day with not even a letter from Priscilla. But even then there was genuine regret in her heart when Mrs. Drake began to pack her belongings preparatory to going back to the states. She was in better health and spirits than ever before, and she had a quarter section of land of her own and she had made some pleasant friends. On the whole it had paid well.

It was New Year's eve and she was to leave the next morning. She put on an extra lump of coal and set the lighted lamp in the window. She thought it might cheer some one, you know, and it did; it shone way out on the path and lit the way for the bachelor as he came hurrying across the fields.

As he came into the little room, bare of all the pretty little articles which had made it so cheerful and homelike, his heart gave a thump to think that it would so soon be empty and deserted, and he resolved to say what was on his mind at once.

But the words would not come; he could only open the parcel which he had brought and take out—guess what! The tattered remnants of a cambric Mother Hubbard.

As the widow gave a little squeal of surprise, he said, with a stately bow: "I have bring ze—ze chemise of madame, which ze wind brings to me so long ago." And with an impetuous motion he tore open his coat and there over his heart lay the folded pink ribbon which had been at the throat of the gown.

Somehow after that he didn't need words, for the widow's dark head rested on the ribbon and both his arms were about her.

Now there is something irresistibly funny about the courtship of middle-aged lovers. Young lovers are interesting enough, and old lovers are pathetically grotesque, but when two common-place people in middle life fall in love with each other I defy them to behave so that they are above ridicule.

So we will draw the curtain here, when I tell you that after her lover had gone the widow whispered to Tom: "So romantic, isn't it? But how absurd to call it a chemise." The widow returned to her old home and to Priscilla; and it has leaked out that she is wearing a ring with "Happy New Year" engraved inside, so the neighbors believe that the wedding is to come off on an anniversary of that day.

But I have told all that I am going to, now, and if you really want to know if they are married, just look among the marriage notices on New Year's day.

The January Forum.

The January number of the Forum contains two timely and interesting articles on the Louisiana Lottery; a full history of the company, explaining who the men are that have managed it, what its methods are, and the enormous amounts of money that it takes in, by John C. Wickliffe, a prominent member of the anti-Lottery League and editor of the anti-lottery organ, The New Delta; and a strong indictment of the Lottery by Judge Frank McGloin, of the Louisiana Court of appeals. In view of the ill-health of the Pope and the discussion of the possibility of his removal from Rome, Prof. Geffcken, the distinguished German author, writes on "The Pope and the Future of the Papacy." Mr. Courtenay De Kalb, an American who has lived long in Brazil, explains the late crisis there and its causes. This number of The Forum contains also a review of the trial of Dr. Briggs for heresy together with a statement of other notable heresy trials in the United States, by the Rev. Dr. Philip Schaff, of the Union Theological Seminary; and following this is an article by Dr. Briggs himself on theological education and how it should be extended and improved—the most notable contribution that Dr. Briggs has made to periodical literature. The discussion of pensions is continued in this number. General Slocum, one of the bravest soldiers of the Union Army, writes "Time to call a Halt on Pension Legislation," and Dr. J. S. Billings, of the Surgeon-General's office, presents interesting facts about the health of the survivors of the war. Judge Lambert Tree, late minister to Belgium, explains the Treaty of Brussels for the suppression of the slave trade in Africa, which is now pending in the United States Senate, and points out our duty in the matter. The recent article in The Forum to show that the reformatory prison method had caused an increase of crime in Massachusetts, has called forth extensive discussion, and Mr. Warren F. Spalding, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, writes in this number a reply, which is interesting because it shows that while certain vices have undoubtedly increased, there has been a notable decrease in the more serious offences which may properly be called crimes. Mr. George S. Coe, president of the American Exchange National Bank in New York, writes on "Why the Silver Law Should be Repealed." There is a review of the secret-ballot in thirty-three states, with an analysis of the laws passed in each, by Mr. Joseph B. Bishop; and Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer writes of the Development of Taste in the Building and Furnishing of American Homes. A notable contribution to this number of The Forum is a Christmas sermon, by Bishop Henry C. Potter, of New York, one of the most learned and eloquent of American preachers, who explains the meaning to modern life, of Christ as the light of the World.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

Reports of a War on the Borders of Mexico.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 26.—A startling report reached here early yesterday morning from Fort McIntosh that Capt. Francis Hardie, of the Third cavalry, and his detachment of fifty men met an armed force of Garza's followers near Carriso, Tex., Thursday, and in the engagement that ensued fourteen of the United States soldiers were killed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—When Mr. Elkins begins business at the desk lately occupied by Secretary Proctor he will find ready to his hand business that will require all his ability to deal with. A revolution of no common magnitude is incubating all along the Rio Grande, on the American side, and this country is powerless to prevent it. Clear-headed officers see in this movement danger to the peace between the United States and Mexico. The hatred of the Mexicans along the border to the United States and especially to its soldiers is intense. Mexico has always been extremely particular about the neutrality law, and though they cannot put down these filibusters, as they are called, a great tumult is made if the United States troops cross the border into Mexico after them. As has been stated, the Mexican authorities have been notified that they must keep their bandits on their own side or they will be dealt with by the United States. The sacred soil of Mexico will be invaded long enough to wipe out one of these gangs.

STRANGE MEDICAL CASE.

A Michigan Man Who Had Been Dying for Fourteen Years Finally Expires.

OTSEGO, Mich., Dec. 26.—W. P. Blakeman died Friday of a decidedly novel malady. His death is probably the longest on record, having covered a period of fourteen years. During the time the man's pulse has been gradually and slowly slackening. The disease first made itself manifest by an inert feeling and a bloodless condition of the complexion. Investigation disclosed that the heart beat was less than sixty a minute. The usual stimulants were taken without visible effect, and the pulse steadily decreased until death came to the relief of the singularly afflicted man. During a year past it is said that Blakeman's pulse has been only twenty-eight a minute. The patient wasted away to a living skeleton, and for months was more dead than alive. The heart and neighboring organs have been removed and preserved in the interest of science. They will be sent to Ann Arbor for examination.

Judge McClain's Mangled Body Found at St. Joseph, Mo., in an Open Court.

That was the last seen of him until Saturday morning, when his mangled body was discovered lying on the ground in an open court in the center of the courthouse. The head was crushed in, the legs and arms broken and the neck dislocated. It is supposed that the unfortunate man entered a small walk at the top of the high wall surrounding the court and, losing his balance, fell over, dropping a distance of 60 feet. He was a warm personal friend of Gen. John C. Fremont.

THE ANGEL OF DEATH.

SUDDEN DEMISE OF TOM. S. APPLEGATE, THE VETERAN ADRIAN JOURNALIST.

He Expires without a Moment's Warning from an Attack of Paralysis of the Brain—a Brief Sketch of His Life and Tributes to His Memory.

Our community was shocked on Monday morning to learn of the death of Tom S, Applegate, the veteran editor of The Times. He died very suddenly at his home on Sunday forenoon from an attack of paralysis of the brain. His demise will remove from the sphere of earthly life a journalist of national reputation. No editor in Michigan, outside of Detroit, possessed a larger clientage, or exercised a wider influence, than the genial, whole-souled Tom Applegate. We gather from the Times and Free Press the following sketch of his life, facts about his last illness, and tributes to his memory.

MR. APPLEGATE'S LAST ILLNESS.

About the first of November Mr. Applegate had a serious attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which confined him to his house until some two weeks ago, when, much against the wishes of his physician, Dr. Harry D. Hull, he came to the office and assumed his regular routine duties. He seemed quite well, with the exception of occasional rheumatic pains.

On Wednesday, December 16th, the news was received at the office of the death of Marshall Reed, of Cambridge. Mr. Applegate took this much to heart, as Mr. Reed was a warm, personal, life-long friend.

On Christmas Mr. Applegate was feeling unusually well, and spent the day with his family. Saturday morning he came to the office and went about his work as usual. Fred Irland, of Washington, Dr. Hull, Rev. Mr. Parker, and several other friends in and out of the city, called on him that day, and in answer to inquiries in regard to his health, he said he had not felt so well in months.

On Sunday morning he complained of feeling badly, but after taking a little exercise seemed somewhat better. After breakfast he came to the Times office, and meeting one of the attaches of the paper, gave some directions in regard to his mail. He then went home. This was about 10 o'clock.

Upon arriving home he sat down upon a sofa in the parlor, with his overcoat on, and complained of feeling cold. Mrs Applegate asked him to go out into a warmer room. Mr. Applegate said, "Wait one moment," and his head fell forward. He became at once unconscious, and Mrs. Applegate telephoned for assistance. Dr. Hull, who was his attending physician, could not be reached, and Drs. Jewett and Allen immediately responded, but too late. He was dead, having apparently passed away without a moment's pain.

A SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

The following biography of Mr. Applegate appeared in the Detroit Free Press Monday morning. It is from the pen of a gentleman who has always been a close personal friend of the deceased, one who years ago took his novitiate in journalism on the Times, and who now fills an important position in Washington.

Mr. Applegate was one of the most influential and best newspaper publishers in Michigan, and indeed in the United States. No newspaper outside of Detroit had so great an influence in state politics, and his absence from any Republican gathering in Michigan would have been so unusual as to at once be the subject of remark and regret. The following are some of the more important facts in connection with his career:

Mr. Applegate was born in Blandford, Dorsetshire, England, June 8, 1839, and was consequently in his 53d year. He came to America with his parents in 1851, first living in Utica, N. Y., and subsequently removing to Rome, N. Y., where his father became a prosperous merchant. In Rome, while a boy, Mr. Applegate was apprenticed to the printer's trade in the office of the Rome Sentinel. On completing the term of his apprenticeship he went to New York City, where he held cases in various printing offices, and also on the Brooklyn News. In November, 1863, in company with George W. Larwill, he came to Adrian and bought an interest in the Adrian Watchtower, formerly owned by R. W. Ingalls. The firm for a time was Larwill, Applegate & Co., the "Co." being J. H. Champion, previously editor of the Watchtower and now of the Owosso Press. Mr. Applegate subsequently purchased the interest of Mr. Larwill, who has always remained, however, actively connected with the Times in responsible capacities.

In the fall of 1865 Mr Champion sold out to Gen. Wm. Humphrey. The name of the paper was then changed to the Times. Gen. Humphrey became editor-in-chief, and the paper has ever since been Republican in politics. In the fall of 1866 Gen. Humphrey was elected Auditor-General, and on January 1, 1867, the Times absorbed the Adrian Expositor, then run by A. H. Lowrie, now of the Elgin, Ill., News, and Dr. Ragan. The firm became Lowrie, Ragan & Applegate, and in the fall of 1867 Capt. J. H. Fee bought out Dr. Ragan's interest. Subsequently Mr. Lowrie retired, and until 1885 the Times and Expositor was published by Applegate & Fee. In that year Mr. Applegate bought out the interest of Capt. Fee, and has since been sole proprietor.

In every newspaper office in Michigan, and in hundreds of other offices in this country, Mr. Applegate was recognized as a really great newspaper man. He had the instinctive faculty of saying the right thing at the right time, and in a wonderfully simple, terse, effective way. There is no man who has done more to make important the interior newspaper of Michigan. Early in his newspaper life he introduced features of newsgathering and publishing before unknown to the smaller newspaper offices. The Times has become one of the greatest and most valuable newspaper properties in Michigan, for years having been the only daily in the second congressional district. A score of other journalistic attempts have seen failure, while the Times has steadily grown.

Mr. Applegate was a wonderful personal power in the Republican politics of Michigan. He served for eight years as a member of the state central committee, and for six years was chairman of the executive committee. He was also chairman of the Republican congressional committee for the second district for six years. Gov. Crosswell appointed Mr. Applegate a member of the board to locate the State School for the Blind, and he was for ten years a member of the Board of Control of that institution, until legislated out of office by the establishment of the central board by the last Legislature. He was a member of the Chicago Press Club and of the various state press associations, in which he has held official positions. United States Senators, Governors, Congressmen and state officers innumerable have had occasion to thank Mr. Applegate for his powerful influence in helping them to success, but he has always shown remarkable indifference to official position for himself. There have been many times when he might have had almost anything he wished politically, but he always declined to accept any honors other than those that came through the successful conduct of a bright daily newspaper. Mr. Applegate was the president of the Adrian Petroleum and Light Company, and secretary of the recently organized Adrian National Paving and Construction Company.

He was married in 1870 to Harriet Sinclair, daughter of D. D. Sinclair, of Adrian, and she survives him. He had no children. Always cheerful and good-natured, Mr. Applegate was one of the tenderest and truest friends a man could have, and he could maintain the cause of a friend with a courage and steadfastness which were always the wonder and admiration of all who knew him. His death leaves a vacancy in the circle of Republican leaders in the press of the state, and in the hearts of his friends, which will never be filled in just the same way again.

GEO. W. LARWILL'S TRIBUTE.

The following beautiful tribute is from the pen of his business associate and friend Geo. W. Larwill.

Tom S. Applegate has joined the great majority.

The hand that all these many years has wielded so facile a pen, now lies pulseless and cold.

The active brain that has for nearly three decades directed the columns of The Times; the brain whose ready intuitions so oft told trenchantly for the right, in the heat of great political campaigns, or in the midst of imminent local crises, is dormant in death.

The brave big heart that ever responded to the calls of duty; that ever warmed to the appeals of friends; that never beat sluggishly when the occasion demanded action, and never quailed in the face of a foe, has now forever ceased its beatings.

It was a sudden summons.

To us, his co-workers, who still tread on in the path his steps so long have beaten; or stand, whelmed with our woe, by the silent clay that so lately held his big, brave spirit, the abrupt taking impresses on our minds the grief and dread that ever pertains to such a manifestation of what we know to be the inevitable.

But our emotions are mitigated by the thought, that could our stricken leader himself have chosen the way of his own transition, he would hardly have had it different.

With a judgment matured and ripened by experience, an intelligence broadened by reading and burnished by contact with the best and brightest men known to our state and nation to-day, he kept pace even to the very end, in the van of the journalistic craft, and when the messenger came that none can avoid, he stepped aside just for one moment, and without a murmur or regret accepted the final obligation that invests all perishable mortality.

T. S. Applegate was a potent factor in the life of our community as well as our commonwealth, and that his death has left a vacancy which cannot readily be filled, will hardly be disputed.

To The Times his loss is well nigh irreparable. To his ready tact, unerring judgment, and sound discretion, is due the fact that the paper stands now among the most prosperous, as it is acknowledged to be the most potential, of the provincial press of the state. And its score or more of employes lament to-day in the knowledge that they have lost not merely a liberal and indulgent employer, but a considerate kindly and ever helpful friend.

Whatever success our friend is conceded to have attained, both in the practical affairs of business life, and in the subtler influence that made him a leader among his associates of the press, and a power in our public affairs, is due alone to his own earnest and well-directed efforts.

He was emphatically a self-made man, in the fullest and highest sense in which that phrase is used among Americans. With but brief preliminary preparation in the public schools and academy of Utica, N. Y., the home of his youth, he launched out to make a way for himself in life.

It has been said that those who have not had the advantage of a higher education in their early life, seldom attain to prominence or mental culture. But with our friend it can truly be said that in whatever association he was cast, he was ever in the front, and his personal influence and indomitable will power made him an acknowledged guide, director and counselor.

Although not a product of the schools, his inborn love of reading, his strong retentive memory, his ready and comprehensive understanding, his ingenious sense of reasoning, and ready powers of deduction, gave indubitable proof of a ripe and vigorous mentality, and evidenced a higher grade of intellectual power than is ordinarily found among the common run of men, or that for which degrees and diplomas are usually supposed to stand sponsor.

Toward his friends, Tom S. Applegate never harbored a disloyal thought, and time, influence and means alike were ever at their service.

Popularity in its usually accepted sense he never sought or cared for. But he had about him a personal magnetism that brought men close to him, and that served largely as the secret of his power among people everywhere.

Albeit not a church-goer, or the follower of any special creed, he respected the religious sentiments of others, and amid his most intimate friends often pondered on the overpowering mysteries which have long been left to the duly appointed teachers to expound. The pastors of the city, regardless of denomination, were among his warmest friends, and his pen and purse were ever responsive to the appeals of religion as well as charity. His creed was eminently that of the good Abou Ben Adhem, and the loyal service he ever did to others must stand credited to him on the pages of the eternal record.

In his death the city of Adrian has lost one whose heart ever responded to measures for the public welfare, and who never tired in laboring for its best and dearest interests.

In his death the attaches of this paper have lost an indulgent employer, and the cause of labor a sympathic friend. His relations with those around him were ever of the most considerate and cordial nature, and in the daily associations of office life, there was never a word or act to indicate aught of authority or dependence on either side.

The unvarying kindness that guided him in his business relations, existed even to a more marked degree in his home. Considerate, thoughtful, ever indulgent, few men realized more keenly the social pleasures of the family circle.

To the bereaved wife, who was to our dead friend a companion and a comrade, in the ideal sense of those potent words; and to the stricken mother, in her declining years, we tender tearful sympathy.

Attempts at consolation in the face of grief like theirs, is apt to seem more like a mockery than a mitigation. We shall not attempt to deal out words of condolence, but leave to these wounded hearts, the tender alleviations that come with lapse of time alone.

Good-bye, old friend!

The vacant desk, the empty chair, the cheery voice now silent for aye, are ever-present evidences of the loss we have sustained.

Dead?

No, you are not dead!

For we know

"There is no death! What seems so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life Elysian,
Whose portals we call Death."

OBITUARY.

Abram Derby was born in Columbia county, New York, in the year 1815. He came with his father's family to Michigan in 1836. Like most of the early settlers in our State their means were limited. Their first efforts must be to procure for themselves a home. For this they must work. But their health was good. They had willing hands and strong arms, and they shrank not from economy and self-denial. Their efforts were crowned with success and in a few years they had the satisfaction of seeing their parents settled on a farm of their own. The boys then began to think of getting farms for themselves. Abram applied himself diligently to work, summer and winter, and though times were hard and wages low, he wasted no time in idleness. Persevering industry is bound to succeed. After years of honest labor and several judicious investments he came to be the owner of the splendid farm in Tecumseh where he has lived for several years past, and where he has at last closed his labors and his life on the 22d of December, 1891. His wife, three sons and two daughters remain to mourn his loss. The funeral services were held on Thursday, at his late residence, conducted by Rev. John Patchin, of Tipton. A large number of relatives and friends were present to sympathize with the bereaved family. But, while sorrow flowed from eye to eye, all were cheered and comforted by the pleasing evidence given by the departed in his last days that he was prepared for the summons, and that he was exchanging the shadows of earth for the brightness of Heaven.

On December 28th Mrs. Mary Kennedy, passed to her eternal rest. A good Christian woman, a devoted wife, a loving mother and faithful friend, her loss is not only keenly felt by her immediate family, but also by her large circle of acquaintances. Her numerous charities endeared her to all with whom she came in contact. Her highest ambition was to make home happy and her kindly words and motherly advice will long be remembered by those who came to her either in prosperity or distress. The funeral obsequies were held on Wednesday at two p. m., and were attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends, Rev. O. J. Perrin officiating.

A CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to all those kind friends who tendered their aid and sympathy so freely in our late bereavement.

WM. KENNEDY AND FAMILY.

"Reno & Ford's comedians appeared at the Cosmopolitan Hall, Vineland, last evening in "Joshua Simpkins" to a crowded house. Bursts of laughter and applause were the order of the evening. It is one of the best companies that has ever visited Vineland. Every one connected with it is a star of no mean ability. Their next visit here will no doubt bring forth more people than the hall will accommodate. They play at Bridgeton to-night.—Bridgeton, N. J. News, Sept. 30.

FORCE THEM OUT.—Scientists tell us now that the best and safest way to cure diseases of the blood and skin is to force out through the skin the microbes or germs which produce disease. In this matter Swift's Specific has been about sixty years in advance of medical science, as it has for that length of time been curing blood and skin diseases, by eliminating the germ and poison through the pores of the skin. S. S. S. does this effectually, safely and quickly. It is entirely a vegetable compound, and harmless to the most delicate child.

Mr. W. C. Curtis, editor of the Mecklenburg News, at Boydton, Va., says that he has been entirely relieved from an abscess which formed in his throat, and caused intense pain, almost choking him. He could not swallow solid food, and was in a most painful condition. He says that he took only three bottles, and that it effected a complete cure.

THE CHRISTMAS PARTY.

"It was the best one yet" was the universal verdict of all who participated in the Christmas party. The arrangements were evidently in good hands, for not the slightest detail was left unattended to, so far as an old bachelor's critical eye could discern. The decorations far excelled anything heretofore attempted. Festoons of evergreen and evergreen mottoes were hung about the gallery. Six lengthy strips of bunting were suspended from the dome in the ceiling to the gallery front. Lace curtains covered the lower windows and the entire room presented the appearance of a veritable Christmas bower. "The Happy Yule-Tide" appeared in large old style letters upon the face of a drop scene.

Wolff's orchestra never gave better music in that hall and that is compliment enough for them. The concert before the dance was a fine program which was given as published in last week's HERALD.

Promptly at nine o'clock the dancers filed upon the floor in couples and the grand march began. It was led by Mr. Will H. Hayden and Miss Julia Wood, assisted by Mr. Will Ross and Miss Hattie Conklin. The march, of course, was similar to previous ones, although some new and difficult figures were introduced very nicely. Forty couples went through the grand march, but several dancers arrived later, and about fifty dance tickets were sold altogether. There were several guests present from abroad, while our home dancers were present in goodly numbers. The supper was served in Armory Hall by Mrs. R. C. Vantwerp, who is acknowledged by all to be an adept in this line. The menu was an excellent one for the price charged. It was probably the most elegantly dressed party ever given in Tecumseh and for downright enjoyment it was never surpassed. Although the expenses were quite heavy, the receipts were sufficient to meet them all.

DR. TRACY ONCE MORE.

In the interest of temperance work we would drop a word to the public in answer to the article of last week on Dr. Tracy.

As we believe the Doctor is filling a long-felt need in the fight against intemperance, and that he is doing a most effective work, we do not want the friends of temperance to be prejudiced against him by the tongue or pen of those who simply hope to justify their indifference to the work so dear to the Doctor's heart. The Doctor, however, is not dead, and he will yet speak for himself through the columns of the press of Lenawee county, we believe to the entire satisfaction of all unprejudiced minds. For the present we need but remark that the W. C. T. U. of Adrian, regardless of money, investigated the charges alluded to in the previous article, and as a result completely exonerated the Doctor. And as the friends of temperance wish to secure the Doctor's services for our own state the coming year, we are glad to know that he is filling out a tent that will seat more than 2,000, for the summer campaign, which we expect will be pitched at Tecumseh, as he makes the tour of the state. This enterprise will demand all the money at the Doctor's command, and it is hoped he will have the sympathy and cooperation of the "Friends of Temperance," wherever he may go, as the charge of avarice seems absurd.

FRIENDS OF TEMPERANCE.

Dr. Robert Nourse's Lecture on Monday evening was a brilliant effort. The entertainment course seems to improve with each number. At all events there has been no deterioration thus far. Dr. Nourse, in his new field of platform oratory, has certainly achieved a wonful success. He possesses dramatic abilities of the highest order. Nature made him an actor at first and he had a thorough training in the Royal Dramatic College of England. He is also a pulpit orator of rare gifts and acquirements. His talents as both preacher and actor he can combine upon the platform without violating any of the proprieties, and the combination certainly produces a lecture of wonderful power and interest. He possesses a dignified presence and a perfectly modulated voice. The peculiar double character of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde was vividly portrayed in the highest type of the dramatic art. His lecture was finest specimen of oratory, to which a Tecumseh audience has listened since Daniel Dougherty's oration last winter.

G. P. Waring, of Ridgeway, spent Christmas at home. He intends moving his family to Harvey, and will sell his Ridgeway property cheap.

Levi B. Stevens returned to Detroit yesterday. His wife will remain a week longer. He still retains his position on the Free Press and likes it very much.

Work was stopped in the News office for a time this week by the falling of the pipe. It was fortunately only the stove pipe instead of the office pipe however.

Perhaps the most redolent Christmas present in this vicinity was a half barrel of Florida oranges sent to Mr. and Mrs. Asa Gage, of Brownville, by Mrs. Gage's sister who has an orange grove in the land of flowers.

D. H. Zeluff is seriously ill.

Mr. Otto L. Rice, of St. Louis, Mo., has taken the position of foreman in the HERALD office. He comes very highly recommended, is a first-class job printer and news foreman, and we believe he will fill the bill to the entire satisfaction of both ourselves and our patrons.

"Joshua Simpkins" kept an appreciative audience in a roar of laughter last evening at the Grand. Nellie Fay and others in their specialty songs, musical feats and dances, did remarkably well, and J. W. Carner, as "Josh" took well the part of the characteristic Yankee farmer.—Reading, Pa., Morning Herald, October 8.

A Christmas concert was given at the M. E. church last Sunday evening to an audience that filled the church. A special service was rendered entitled, "The Lord's Annointed," consisting of choruses, responsive reading, etc. Several single recitations were very nicely rendered and also a solo by Dora Grayson, a special piece by the infant class and a juvenile quartette. It was an excellent program throughout.

Mr. W. G. Blymyer has severed his connection with the HERALD office. Having received an offer of a fine position at Coshocton, Ohio, at an increased salary, we felt it our duty to release him. Mr. Blymyer is a first class printer and an honorable gentleman, and we part with him with sincere regret. May his lines fall in pleasant places and may he always find a choice position at the top of a column, next to reading matter.

The Baptist Sunday School held an entertaining Christmas eve concert on Thursday evening last. The program was a varied one, consisting of choruses by the school, recitations, a special motto piece by the juvenile class, vocal selections by Mrs. Alf W. James and Roy DeWolf, and a very fine address by Rev. C. E. Conley. At the conclusion of the program, the Christmas trees were stripped of their goodies to the delight of the little folks.

A quiet wedding took place in this village, on Christmas day, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Schreder; at which time their daughter Ida was united in marriage to Mr. W. I. The bride is well known here as a genial and accomplished young lady, being a graduate of our High School and having passed a good portion of her life here. The groom is a highly respected citizen of the community in which he resides. Being the owner of a fine farm they will make farming their occupation. The entertainment committee had another narrow escape with Dr. Nourse. He got left at Toledo and a special train was procured to convey him to Tecumseh. He arrived in good time and began his lecture promptly at eight o'clock. The train cost $57.00.

Lansing Quackenbush, who has been stopping with his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Getchell, at Marshall for the past two months, died last Monday after a brief illness of only one week. The remains were brought to Tecumseh yesterday and the funeral was held this afternoon at one o'clock, at his own home west of the cemetery, Rev. Frank McAlpine, of Charlotte, officiated.

OUTLAWS LYNCHED.

A Mob Wreaks Vengeance on the Bob Sims Gang.

His Posse Overpowered and Bob Sims and Three of His Followers Are Hanged—Two Others Lynched in Mississippi.

WIPED OUT THE GANG.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 28.—The finale in the case of the notorious Bob Sims gang came Saturday when the leader and three of his partners in crime were strung up to pine trees in the woods of Choctaw county, Ala. The gang was surrounded Wednesday afternoon. After its members had committed the dastardly deed of murder and arson they took refuge in Sims' house. Sheriff Gavin, of Choctaw county, and 200 armed men soon gathered and called on Bob to surrender. He refused flatly and fire was at once opened on the house where Sims and his family and three of the Savage boys were in hiding. Sims returned the fire, which was kept up all Wednesday night and Christmas morning.

At 3 o'clock Christmas afternoon Gavin was called on again by Sims, who said that for the sake of saving the lives of his wife and children he would surrender. The only guarantee he wanted was that he should be given a guard of fifty armed men who would take him to the jail in Butler, Ala. The sheriff granted this request and Sims and the Savage boys came from the house and surrendered. Sims picked out twenty-five men, whom he desired should accompany him, and the sheriff selected the other twenty-five from his posse. About 4 o'clock Christmas day the outlaws were taken into custody and the guard started with them for Butler jail, a place they were destined to never reach dead or alive.

The party had not proceeded more than a mile from the scene when a mob of citizens residing in the section where Sims has been carrying on his lawlessness organized and started after them. It was their determination to secure the gang and kill each one, and they succeeded in their plans.

On the way they overtook a man named Con Savage and as he was a great friend of Bob's and said to have been implicated in the gang's evil doings they threw a rope around his neck and hung him to a pine tree. They then proceeded on their way and soon overtook Bob and the Savages. The guard made no resistance as it would have been useless, and Bob and the three men were taken charge of by the mob. Bob and Tom Savage were placed in a buggy and a rope put around their necks and made fast to a pine tree.

The pair was told to stand up in the buggy, and as they obeyed the horse was whipped and the pair were strangled to death. The other two Savages were treated in the same style. All the Savages protested their innocence and begged not to be killed. After the four were hung their bodies were riddled with bullets and the mob dispersed.

SHUBUTA, Miss., Dec. 28.—The lynching still goes on. Two more victims, John Sims, brother of Bob, and Mosely, nephew of Bob, were both hanged Saturday night and the avengers are in hot pursuit of a negro that was with the Sims gang the night of the massacre. They have burned Bob Sims dwelling and all houses on his place, and killed every living thing to be found on the place except the family, and they had to escape to a neighbor's house.

It is alleged that she shared the secrets of the plot to rob the train and aided the outlaws in escaping. She will be arrested and brought to Denver.

TEN LIVES LOST.

The Cry of Fire Causes a Panic in an English Theater.

Nine Children and One Man Trampled to Death—A Deadly Jam at a Bend in a Stairway—Heroic Action of Several Persons.

A TERRIBLE SCENE.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—A theater in Gates Head, county Durham, Saturday night was the scene of a frightful panic, in which, according to the reports received here, at least ten persons, including nine children, were killed outright and many injured. The sight of a slight blaze caused by a man in the audience dropping a lighted match on the sawdust-covered floor caused some one to start the cry of fire and a terrible panic ensued.

There was a mad rush for the doors, which, owing to the savage crush and struggle, became so blocked that only a few succeeded at once in getting out. There was an especially violent rush for the staircase leading from the gallery. The passage giving access to this staircase became blocked almost at once with persons who were striving their utmost to escape when the staircase itself was filled with a struggling mass of humanity from the top landing all the way to the outlet. A check taker was killed in the midst of his heroic efforts to save other lives. In trying to restrain the crowd in its mad behavior he was thrown to the floor and crushed to death beneath the feet of the panic-stricken people.

When the panic had subsided so that an examination of the premises could be made the bodies of nine childen, whose lives had been literally crushed out, were found lying on the staircase or near a door leading to it.

The news of the disaster spread rapidly and soon thousands of frantic people were rushing to the scene to ascertain the fate of relatives or friends. Within a few hours all of the dead were identified. All were between the ages of 13 and 16.

Saturday morning he called at her home for the wedding, but for some cause Sadie wanted to back out. They were in a room by themselves, and high words were heard between them. The next thing was a pistol shot. He had killed the woman with her own Christmas present. Reese escaped.

SCANLAN'S MIND WRECKED.

The Popular Irish Actor Will Probably Appear on the Stage No More.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The condition of William J. Scanlan, the actor, remains practically unchanged. Sunday the demented actor's manager, August Pitou, caused Scanlan to be removed from his apartments at the Hotel Imperial to his own residence, 129 West Ninety-fifth street. He has canceled all engagements for the season and disbanded the company, as he believes the actor's mind is hopelessly wrecked. He is a victim of paresis.

ELEVEN KILLED.

Fatal Collision on the New York Central Railroad.

A Brakeman Sent Back to Flag the Express Stops to Take a Drink—Death and Destruction Are the Consequences.

COST OF A DRINK.

HASTINGS, N. Y., Dec. 26.—An express train on the New York Central ran into another near here Wednesday, and eleven persons were killed, six fatally injured and four badly hurt.

This accident was directly the outcome of a collision earlier in the tunnel at Sing Sing prison between a freight train and the Croton local. The first accident blocked the road with trains both north and south of the tunnel, and the weather being thick it was difficult to run trains with any degree of safety under the existing circumstances. The St. Louis express left the depot at 8 p. m., and forty-five minutes later the locomotive crashed into the rear sleeper of the Niagara express, which had been caught in the blockade.

A brakeman had been sent back 1,000 yards to flag the train following. He did not meet it and kept on down the track until he reached the Hastings station. The St. Louis express was not yet in sight. The brakeman went into the station and stopped to take a drink and talk with the station master. He stood near the door ready to go out and signal the train as soon as she was sighted. He was still talking when the express dashed by.

It was going at the rate of 40 miles an hour. Those in charge had no warning that the track was not clear until within a few yards of the rear of the stalled special. The engineer reversed the lever, turned on the air brakes and jumped just as the crash came. His fireman, too, tried to jump, but fell and was seriously if not fatally injured. The locomotive, with the momentum of its speed and the great weight behind, struck the rear sleeper with terrific force. There was a crash of broken glass, cracking timber and hissing steam, followed by shrieks of terror and groans of pain from the panic-stricken and injured passengers. Then the boiler of the locomotive burst and hot water and steam added to the horror of the accident. The sleeper—a Wagner palace-car—contained eighteen persons. The car was telescoped and only three of its occupants escaped serious injury.

The locomotive, when it crashed into the sleeper, exploded its boiler. The escaping steam did deadly work on the poor victims who were in the wreck. The trainmen lost their heads and ran about in a frantic manner, peering into the wreck in search of those groaning and dying. Physicians from Yonkers, accompanied by Coroner Mitchell, went to the scene of the disaster with all possible speed. The dead and injured were taken to that city on a special train. Coroner Mitchell looked after the dead and the police sent their ambulances and patrol wagons to the depot to remove the injured to the different hospitals in Yonkers and vicinity.

Buried by a Landslide.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Dec. 26.—Early Friday morning a heavy landslide occurred in the big cut on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Omaha road leading to the Missouri river bridge. A train passing through was buried in the debris. No one was badly hurt, but the bridge was blocked and cannot be cleared for forty-eight hours. Trains on the Union Pacific, Elkhorn & Pacific short line are cut off from the west until the wreck is cleared.

Fell Dead While Running a Race.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 26.—Louis Oliver, a 21-year-old son of Judge J. B. Oliver, of this city, dropped dead Thursday night. Shortly after 8 o'clock the young man made a visit to a neighbor's house to deliver a Christmas present. He was on his way home when he met a companion, and the two started to run a foot race. After running a short distance Oliver fell dead. He is supposed to have had some heart trouble.

Death of a Veteran.

CARLISLE, Pa., Dec. 26.—Gen. Alexander Brady Sharpe, a prominent Carlisle lawyer, was found dead in his bed Friday morning. His demise is attributed to heart failure. He was 64 years of age. At the opening of the civil war he enlisted as a private in Company H of the Pennsylvania reserves and served with distinction until the close of the war.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak;
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent;
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

THE PASSING OF THE YEAR.

NINE: and the noisy echoing clock
Tells the last stroke and then is dumb.
Grim taps that sharp on time's breast knock
Where the lost year lies cold and numb;
Breaks a charred fagot on the hearth
And sings the kettle from the crane.
While high above the shrouded earth
Dims the far moon toward its wane.

Ten; and the sharp-fanged watch-dog's yawn
Gleams cavernous beside the coals,
And flickering shadows, faintly drawn,
Dance lightly to the rafter poles;
And royal in her mottled fur
And lengthened curve of caudal sweep,
With muffled and recurrent purr,
The ancient house-cat dozes deep.

Eleven; and the jarring strokes
Come harshly as a warning will;
Outside, the giant naked oaks,
Snow girdled, stand all white and still;
And like to ships the wan clouds pass
Across the lone moon's argent shield
While, down below, the frozen grass
Lies dead within a frozen field.

Twelve; and upon my feet I stand
And fling aside the unread book,
For ghosts rise up on every hand
As backward o'er the days I look.
Aye! warp of fate, and woof of life,
What matters, since but death shall spin,
Falls the last stroke, a severing knife—
The old year's out, the new year's in.

A NEW YEAR'S WISH.

I wish you a happy New Year! May roses strew your way,
And paths be glad and peaceful on which you start to-day.
May golden shafts of sunshine bring just a little rain,
And gracious gifts of pleasure hold just a shade of pain.
For skies are fairer which the clouds may sometimes overcast,
And pleasures are the best which come when grief and pain are past.
And if among your roses the ivy is entwined
Your heart will beat the nearer to the heart of all mankind.

I wish you a happy New Year! Ah! who could wish you less;
May all the tender charities that heal and soothe and bless
Be scattered at your feet like flowers, and may you e'er impart
To all the weary souls of men the joy within your heart.
For hearts that hold no love know not the joy it is to live;
Our lives are measured by the joys which we to others give.
May charity and kindliness your life and mine imbue.
My joys shall be the brighter for the joys I wish to you.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

The Kind to Which the Prudent Man Will Confine Himself.

HOSE who intend to try once more the oft-tried experiment of making New Year's resolutions have not much time to lose. Such resolutions, if they are by any possibility to be kept, require a good deal of study beforehand. It must be the right kind of study, too. As a rule the more thought that is bestowed upon the subject the more elaborate and lengthy the set of resolutions become. That is going in the wrong direction. A more useful kind of study is that which discriminates, prunes and discards the superfluities. Don't resolve too much. If you do you will fail to keep your resolutions and that will tend to weaken your faith in yourself. If you are particularly fond of an after-dinner cigar and resolve to dispense with it, that is one of the resolutions that a discriminating resolver would prune out, because there is next to no possibility of its being kept more than three days at the utmost. There are some resolutions that are easier to keep, and to these the prudent man will confine himself. Resolve that if you sit down suddenly on the icy sidewalk, or pound your thumb with a hammer, you will make a few cursory remarks; because it is a resolution that you will surely keep. Resolve that in any case you will read this paper; that is another that you can't help keeping. Resolutions that are kept are a source of satisfaction, says the Boston Globe, and the kind that are made every New Year's day and never kept are a fountain of more or less poignant regret.

Elastic Resolutions.

We have knocked the stuffing out of the Christmas turkey and are already trying the strain on a New Year's resolution which will stretch a mile before it will tear an inch.—Dallas News.

ANOTHER chapter has been written in the history of the world, a chapter more wonderful than any in the wonderful narrative, and the recording angel sets his seal and turns the page. It is a story that it is granted to none to see its conclusion, and few indeed are there who rightly read its past. Its beginning was when the morning stars sang together over the order that was created out of chaos, and the plot, with its threads of light and shade, sublime courage and pitiful cowardice, hate and love, joy and fear, no man can comprehend and no man can alter. He may delay the consummation of the Divine plan, but there is all eternity for its completion.

The year of our Lord 1891 has witnessed marvels in the arts and sciences. The depths of the earth and the heights of the clouds have been called upon to yield their secrets, and the whole realm of space is now virtually the kingdom of the mind. In a year the world has made giant strides toward the perfection of civilization, and every one of the last fifty years has witnessed discoveries and inventions that have put to shame those of as many centuries, until, pausing in amazement on the threshold of the future, we are forced to exclaim: "What wilt thou bring forth, oh, inexplicable void! The crowning of man's dreams or the end of material greatness? The summit of perfection or the return of formless chaos?"

Great as has been the progress of the world, the high water mark has only been reached in certain favored spaces, and vast continents are still reserved for the maturing of God's purposes.

To our nation it has been a year whose bounteousness and peace have been unparalleled in the history of any country. The seasons have poured from their laps their garnered treasures, and north, south, east and west rejoice in abundance. The faces of nature and the elements have been propitious, and the smile of Providence seems to rest in benediction upon the land. In the social world too, the fruitage has been abundant. Never before, in the history of our country has so much good been done by earnest individuals and society for the reclamation of evil, the reform of abuses, and the amelioration of the condition of the deserving poor. The harvest of good deeds in that has been great in spite of the fact there are still fallow fields, and that much has been left unattempted. There are those, of course, who take gloomy views of the times, who see the evil, but fail to recognize the good, and declare that morally the world is growing weaker and more degenerate with each year. But truth, the mighty leaven, is germinating, dropped in the dark soil of ignorance and error; and hidden away from sight, folded in the bursting sheath, is the sprout which shall one day become the giant oak, 'neath which our nation shall be sheltered from storms and noontide heats.

Not in the spirit of the Pharisee, but in that of reverent humility, should we view our blessings of the past year, and have a fraternal sympathy for the famishing peasants whose cry goes up from the banks of the Volga, and from the slopes of the Ural mountains; for the exiled race, whose wandering through the wilderness of prejudice and injustice is as cruel as their forty years' probation in the desert; for the poverty-oppressed masses of our kindred nation, whose mother tongue is ours, and with whom we claim a common ancestry, and for those nations who sit in darkness, or girt about with misty and uncertain light, but longing for perfect day.

The year 1892, upon whose threshold we now stand, is surely destined to be a momentous one in the world's history, and to America is granted the honor of erecting a milestone in the universal progress. In the year that is before us the people of the old world will be summoned to witness the inauguration of a monument worthy of the genius and courage of Columbus, a monument which puts to shame the proudest structure ever raised to commemorate the great deeds of prince or conqueror, and that monument is an enlightened and prosperous people, whose self reverence, self knowledge and self control have raised them, in but little more than a century, to be the object of the wonder and admiration of the world. Not Columbus, the Genoese, nor Columbus, the navigator, do we thus honor, but the courage which was represented in him, which dared to fling away old traditions and obey the inward voice urging onward to great achievement.

The year lies before us, a mystery as great as the mystery of all mysteries—death. We meet it with high resolve, but every day in our life in reality marks a similar anniversary, and every night witnesses the end of a year, a step taken irrevocably from time toward eternity, for there, and there only, can we meet face to face that shrouded shape, the Future, which forever flees as we approach. If we would truly live well, the years, whether spent in work or meditation, in pleasure or pain, should yield us something more than material good, which is as evanescent as the morning mists. The outlines of our lives are drawn for us by circumstances, training, heredity and other influences above our control, but day by day we are filling in the light and shade, the coloring in the picture, and it is the coloring that will make or mar the beauty of that creation that shall hang in the gallery of God.

LOU V. CHAPIN.

THE NEW YEAR COMETH.

And With It Come Good Resolutions and Other Bothersome Things.

Ever since a long time ago, New Year's day, the 1st of January, has been the day upon which I swear off. Not swear of-ten, but swear that henceforth I will off with some pernicious habit which is slowly but surely weaving its —its—its—its unseen network of—of—of—of—of vice about me. Vice given its own way too long will soon hold a person like a vice. (Note.—This is a play upon words which I just thought of. The former vice referring to sin in its unadulterated state, and the latter meaning an instrument in which carpenters torture two-by-fours and the like and lather them previous to doing a job of plane shaving. The phrase is double action. The terms may be transposed and they get there just the same.)

Last year I resolved that I would retrench in household expenses, and so I agreed to give my wife a certain amount of money every week and let her provide for the table. That is the amount was certain the first week, but my wife says that after that it was frequently decidedly uncertain. She hadn't had much experience but she did nobly. She said one day that she wished I would give her the name of some great wholesale grocer, a name that would be a synonym for the choicest of everything, so that when dealers asked her what brand of an article she wanted, she wouldn't be at a loss and display her ignorance.

I told her to always ask for H. K. Cooper's goods. (That isn't the name I gave her at all, but that name will do. I don't propose to give advertising worth $14 per agate line for nothing.)

The plan worked delightfully. When she would inquire for some good olives, and the clerk would ask her superciliously what brand she preferred, she would remark, as pert as you please: "H. K. Cooper's, if you have them."

Nine cases out of ten they didn't have anything so good, but the salesman would treat her with the greatest consideration because she appeared to be up in the business pretty well herself, and not try to work off any old shop worn pickles or last year's yeast cakes on her.

But, alas! one day she went into a meat market and in her most imperious voice said: "I would like some liver."

"What sort, madam?"

"Why, I supposed that liver was all alike."

"Oh, no. We sell several varieties."

"Well," answered Marie in desperation, "you may give me H. K. Cooper's."

And this is a true story and worthy of all people to be believed.

As near as I can find out, Adam was the first man to turn over a new leaf. I have a suspicion, though, that he turned over a good many before he got his winter's supply of clothing all made up. Adam must have reversed his cuffs on Wednesday, and that was, of course, a turning of leaves. As a man once said to me, facetiously, when he discovered me trying to reverse my cuffs without attracting attention, behind the cabinet organ at a donation party, having forgotten to do it in the haste of my toilet preparations: "One good turn deserves another."

EXAMINING ONE YEAR'S RECORD.

I like to turn over a new leaf once in awhile. I get so tired of the old one. It is so stained, and blotted, and discolored. It is torn in so many places and it is written so full of mistakes and failures.

There are the 365 little "X" marks which indicate the days during the past year upon which I was needlessly cross and irritable. There are a half dozen near the top of the page marked "XX." That was while we were moving into the new house and getting settled. Then there's the entry, January 2, where I began smoking again, and 379,472 little dots, like fly specks almost, which mark the number of times I have "kicked" about things during the past year.

It's a poor, dirty, miserable, badly kept, altogether too faithful record. It is interlined and criss-crossed, but it isn't illegible. Every entry stands out bold and clear, and I can't erase a single one of them. I can only turn the sorry-looking chronicle out of sight and begin with a clean, fresh, new page on the other leaf.

John Babcock, a former resident of this place, but now living at Ann Arbor, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. J. T Clark and children went to Blissfield last Thursday for a week's visit. Mr. Clark spent Sunday there.

Prof. Daniels. Miss Virginia Daniels and Miss Mary Hyndman are spending their vacation at their respective homes.

Dr. White is attending a Sanford family, about nine miles east of here, several of whom are very sick with diphtheria.

M. L. Calkins, of Air Line Junction, Ohio, was in town Monday, the guest of L. K. Davis. He reports business flourishing at that place.

L. K. Davis is kept pretty busy nowadays between the small boys who want candy and popcorn balls and the big men who want to pay their taxes.

The program at the G. T. U. meeting next Monday evening will be furnished by the farmers and promises to be a good one. Let everyone attend.

Charles Nase, who has been having a severe tussle with diphtheria and quinsy, is slowly recovering. Mrs. Nase has been quite sick but is also improving.

F. D. Lancatter, C. S. Burroughs, W. C. Rogers, C. D. Keyes. Geo: Runyan and E. Van De Mark attended the funeral of Joseph Gordanier at Manchester Wednesday.

The marriage of Dwight Walters and Miss Nellie Poucher took place last evening at the home of the bride's parents. They will commence housekeeping immediately in their new home two miles north of here.

Carl Burton, who has been travelling through the Western states this season with "Skipped by the Light of the Moon" Company, has been obliged to give up his position as orchestra leader on account of ill-health. He is expected home in a short time.

The play, "A Victim of Circumstances," will be presented by local talent Jan'y 14th, 1892. The proceeds will be used toward building a belfry on St. John's church. The above is a lively comedy and those who enjoy a good laugh will do well to attend. Cast of characters next week.

The supper given by the Masons Monday evening was largely attended. The program was well prepared and the addresses given by Revs. Stone and Reeves were very interesting and instructive. The music was also a very acceptable feature of the evening's entertainment. The supper fully sustained the Masons' reputation for hospitality and that of their wives for good cooking.

The Christmas service at St. John's church was unusually fine. The responses were all sung by the choir, instead of repeated by the congregation. The Te Deum and Jubilate were new and showed that a great deal of pains had been taken in their preparation. The Offertory sung by Miss Grace Stevens was replete with the spirit of the day and the hearts of all those who heard it could not but be filled with "Good-will towards men."

WAS I A CANCER?

In the summer of 1890 something began to appear on my face, similar to a cancer. I tried various remedies but nothing gave relief until I used S. S. S., which entirely cured me. I used only [illegible] cures reported to us of epithelioma, or skin cancer. S. S. S. seems to cure by forcing out the poison and the poisonous germs, the general health is in the meantime improved, and finally the sore heals, the scales drop off, and the patient is well. S. S. S. is entirely vegetable and harmless. Our treatise on the blood and skin will be mailed free to all who will apply for it. Address,

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Our premium offers for the coming year are more favorable than ever before and the club list is the best one ever issued from this office. Examine them carefully and make your selections early.

A GOOD SCHEME.

A BUSINESS SUGGESTION TO THE FARMERS OF NORTHERN LENAWEE.

Shall We Have a Farmer's Exchange? A Few Practical Hints on the Utility of Such an Exchange.

We have long thought that a reasonable amount of space in our columns could be devoted to a "Farmers' Exchange" department, which the farmers of Northern Lenawee might use to their mutual benefit and profit. Nearly every farmer has some domestic animal on his farm or some special kind of grain or seed which he would be glad to dispose of for cash or exchange for some other kind of property. The trouble is, no one knows the fact but himself. Many a farmer wishes to buy articles, property or stock of various kinds, but does not know where to find them. Can these two classes be brought together? Certainly they can be, and the process is as easy as a simple twist of the wrist.

To test the practicability of such a scheme we shall open a Farmers' Exchange column in the month of January. During the four issues of that month we will run a special notice, not exceeding five lines in length for the sum of twenty-five cents per week. The notice should give the name and post office address of the patron and the property which he may wish to sell or exchange. Below are a few samples of these notices:

JOHN DOE, TIPTON, MICH.—One Jersey cow five years old, five bushels prime clover seed, one mustang pony, broke for saddle, to sell cheap.

RICHARD ROE, CLINTON, MICH.—Ten good colonies of bees to exchange for a few Merino ewes.

PETER SMITH, MACON, MICH.—A Milburn wagon and a double farm harness, in use only one year. Will be sold cheap.

SAM BROWN, BRITTON, MICH.—A splendid breeding mare, 8 year old, will exchange for a pair of good ponies.

JOSHUA GREEN, HOLLOWAY, MICH. Ten fine Holstein heifers registered, one and two years old, one Holstein cow three years old registered, to exchange for a first class heavy farm team.

JAMES ROBINSON, RIDGEWAY, M.—A Walter A. Wood self binder used two seasons, a Hialey road wagon as good as new, one light single harness, will sell cheap.

The first issue of January next will be on Thursday, Jan. 7th, and all notices ought to be handed in not later than Saturday Jan. 2d, '92. Try the experiment, gentlemen, for one month. The expense for each person is a mere trifle and we believe it will realize a handsome profit on the investment. There should be five hundred of these notices in the HERALD during January, and we confidently assert that even one hundred would effect the sale of thousands of dollars worth of property that would otherwise remain unsold. There are big possibilities in this scheme if it be properly taken advantage of. Now is the accepted time, gentlemen. Go in and win.

Cheap Farming Lands.

Do you want to buy or rent a farm? If so, southern Nebraska and northern Kansas offer you great inducements. Yield per acre this year: wheat 15 to 30 bushels, oats 40 to 75 bu., rye 25 to 45 bu., corn will yield 45 to 75 bu. Taxes are low, climate fine, plenty of timber and good water. Good markets, land cheap and terms of payment favorable. All inquiries answered promptly. Come via "Burlington Route" and you will be met at station and shown the country whether you buy or not.

Beware, gentlemen, how you rashly venture to pull off your boots. There's danger in it. Rube Brownell found it so the other day, when he pulled his knee out of joint pulling off one of his.

Every farmer, we think, has breathed more freely since the time for shooting quail, allowed by law, expired. That we mean to protect our quail is proven beyond a doubt by the warning notices posted on nearly every farm, go where you will. Prof. Riley estimates the loss from insect ravages as high as $500,000,000. Truly it is expedient for us to look well to our insectivorous birds.

ATTESTED POPULARITY

One of the most honest and reliable houses we have ever dealt with is the Swift Specific Company, of Atlanta, Ga., the well known founders and manufacturers of the so very popular blood remedy, S. S. S., which to our personal knowledge has cured many people throughout this section of terrible blood diseases. Our druggists inform us that in the past six months they have sold more of S. S. S. than any other preparation for the blood on their shelves. The success achieved by that firm is mainly due to their extensive advertising and to the purity of their medicine, which does everything claimed for it. We are unable to record a single instance where a purchaser has been deceived or disappointed. A treatise on Blood and Skin diseases will be mailed free to all who address SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

To all the readers of the HERALD, both old and young, great and small, short and tall, we extend our best wishes for a happy and prosperous year.

The Toledo Bee is getting impertinent. It asks this question: "Why should the man who raises beets to be made into sugar be bountied by the government any more than the man who raises cabbages to be made into kraut?"

The Ohio battle for the U. S. Senatorship is now on and it will be a royal battle between the friends of Sherman and Foraker. It will be an unlucky day for the Republican party if the "Fire Alarm" shall be sent to fill John Sherman's seat.

The decision of the New York Court of Appeals in the contested election cases will have a far-reaching effect. It makes the legislature democratic in both branches, which will give that party another U. S. Senator and an immense advantage in the great contest of next year.

Putting Springer, of Illinois, at the head of the Ways and Means committee, is taken to indicate that no attempt will be made to formulate a new tariff bill, and that the committee will devote its attention mostly to separate measures for the repeal of single sections of the present tariff law.

Senator Carlisle has introduced a bill providing for the exemption of all improvements on real estate from taxation in the District of Columbia after June 30th, 1892, and for making up the deficit by an increased rate of taxation on the ground. This bill, if adopted, would be a long step toward the "single tax" plan.

The schedule of the articles included in the reciprocity treaty with the British West India Islands, which was made public last week, appears to give general satisfaction, although there is some regret that wheat and corn was not put upon the free list, in place of being given a reduction of 25 per cent from the present duties.

Puck and Judge have been dropped from the list of periodicals in the Boston public library. Certain of the library board are of opinion that these papers are "only comic" and have no educational value, an opinion that will not be accepted by the majority of people, who can understand that satire and humor are sharp teachers, while one pointed caricature can expose a humbug as dozens of discourses by Boston wiseacres cannot.

The New Year reception at the White House was as interesting as usual and was enjoyed by a much larger crowd than usual. This is the one day in the year when by patiently standing for a couple of hours outside the White House, the humblest citizen can see all of the men prominent in politics, diplomacy, the judiciary branch of the Government, and the army and navy—a sight well worth going to those who like to observe the kind of men who get on top in life's struggle, and at no other time can all of the foreign ministers at the attaches of foreign legations be seen in their gaudy official uniforms.

Mr. Blaine says reciprocity is no more strange than for a Stark-county farmer to bring a hundred bushels of wheat to Canton, get his money for it, buy supplies for his family and go back home. Well, this is free trade. The farmer takes his wheat to the miller, sells it, and takes the money to the storekeeper and buys shoes, clothing and groceries. This is exactly what would happen under free trade, but Mr. Blaine says the farmer must get his supplies of the miller. He forbids the miller to give him an order on the merchant, or even to pay money for the wheat. "Buy of the miller or buy nowhere" is the meaning of reciprocity. Free trade means do as you please; if the miller has what you want, buy of him; if not go to the shoe-maker, or the druggist, or the dry-goods dealer, and with the money you have for your wheat, buy what you want.—World.

A HIGH TARIFF MORTGAGE.

If the Farmer Sells His Products Abroad and Imports Goods He Pays the Tariff Tax to the United States—If He Buys His Goods Here, He Pays the Tariff Mortgage.

A little over a year ago, when the McKinley bill was pending in congress, the high tariff organs vied with each other in their zeal to show how good a thing the enactment of this bill into a law would be for the farmers of the United States. The same thing was true of the leaders of high protectionism in congress, and McKinley, the author of the tariff bill, went so far as to assert that the "home market" was the only market the farmer wanted. The depression in the farming industry, he said, was due to the importation of farm products. To remedy this he increased in his bill the duties on wheat, corn, oats, butter and cheese, his aim being to make the farmers believe that his bill was a farmers' bill, and that he insisted on its passage for their benefit.

No political job ever concocted was more flagrant than this. To carry it out, the farmers were told by Statistician Dodge and Secretary Rusk that our imports of farm products were enormous. Had they gone into particulars and told the actual facts, the job would have fallen to the ground. As a matter of fact, we imported last year less than 4,500 bushels of wheat, against an export of over 54,000,000 bushels; our imports of wheat flour were only 19,218 barrels and our exports over 12,000,000 barrels; our imports of corn only 1,597 bushels and our exports over 102,000,000 bushels; and our imports of butter only 73,267 pounds, against our 30,000,000 exported.

The scheme was to keep the farmers ignorant of these facts, and under the cover of the job, to advance the duties on the articles which the farmers consume, and which they buy with their corn, wheat, and butter. The scheme was successful; and before the farmers awoke to the truth the McKinley bill had become a law. In it the "trusts" and combinations were well cared for. The duties on tin plate, cutlery, and iron and steel products, cotten, woolen and linen goods, glass and earthenware were greatly increased for the benefit of the "trusts" and combines engaged in their production. These duties were in many cases prohibitory, and in every case gave the manufacturers a complete monopoly of the home market at their own prices.

When all this was accomplished the high tariff organs were given the cue to take off somethihg else besides the farmers' tariff and "home market." The failure of the crops abroad and our own abundant harvest gave them a subject for discussion, and now every issue of these organs is filled with estimates of the probable amount of breadstuffs needed by Europe. The "home market" has long since been forgotten. At the same time the financial editors of these papers are estimating the probable amount of gold Europe will have to ship to us in exchange for our exports of farm products.

But why gold? Why not glassware, earthenware and woolen goods? Can it be that the farmers who have wheat, corn and butter to sell, do not need these articles, or can they get them cheaper here? Does this explain why gold and not goods is shipped in payment for wheat and corn? Surely the farmers have not enough of these things, and were they cheaper here there would be no need of a high tariff upon them.

This explains the purpose of the big jot on the farmers. It shows why the "trusts" were so anxious to have the McKinley tariff become a law. Their aim was to make the farmers buy what they need of them at their own prices. In this way they have secured a tariff mortgage on the farmers' wheat and corn and they intend to foreclose it this year. Every dollar's worth of glassware, crockery, iron, linen cotton and woolen goods bought in this country requires more bushels of wheat and corn in payment, than if bought abroad. The difference represents the number of bushels of wheat and corn required to settle the tariff mortgage. To show how much of farm products will be required to pay for every dollar of the tariff mortgage held by the crockery combine the following table has been compiled. It gives the net wholesale price for the various articles making up a set of dishes needed for the farmer's table, in England and the United States. It also shows the difference between the English price and the American price and the amount of duty that must be paid when the goods are imported. The ware is what is known as plain white granite ware.

	Wholesale prices
	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 doz. bakers	$0 [illegible]	$1 4	80 [illegible]	10.45
2 doz. bowls	47	71	24	24
2 covered dishes	28	47	19	15
1 doz. individual butters	10	17	6	05
1 doz. handled coffee cups	44	72	30	24
½ doz. row round dishes	1 12	1 80	68	62
½ doz. ordinary dishes	22	40	17	13
2 creams	10	2	1	07
1 doz. flat plates	8	66	25	14
1 doz. deep plates	37	60	23	14
1 doz. fruit saucers	14	24	9	05
2 sugars	21	36	15	12
1 doz. handled tea cup	8	67	3	2
1 tea pot	12	24	1	07
Total cost	$5 [illegible]	$8 [illegible]		$3 [illegible]

A set of crockery as above, costing $5.10 in England, costs $8.71 in the United states, the English [illegible] being $3.61 higher. The duties on the ware alone amount to $2.81. Duty at the rate of 55 per cent. is also levied on the packages in which the ware is packed and the other expenses of purchase, which, added to $2.81, makes the whole duty equal to the difference between the English and American price.

At the present prices of farm products the following amounts are needed to purchase the above set of crockery in England and the United States. The difference between these amounts shows how much of each product must be paid as taxes to the United States if the goods are imported, or to the crockery combine in payment of their tariff mortgage if the ware is bought in the United States:

	To buy $5.10 of crockery in England	To buy $8.71 of crockery in U. S.	Taxes or tariff mortgage
Wheat at $1.10 per bushel	4.63 bu.	7.31 bu.	2.68 bu.
Corn at 75c per bushel	6.80 bu.	11.61 bu.	4.81 bu.
Oats at 40c per bushel	12.75 bu.	21.77 bu.	9.02 bu.
Butter at 25c per lb.	20.40 lbs.	34.84 lbs.	14.44 lbs.
Cheese at 10c per lb.	51.00 lbs.	87.10 lbs.	36.10 lbs.

Unless the farmer abstains from buying crockery he has his choice of two alternatives. If he buys his crockery aproad he must pay the tax into the treasury of the United States. If he buys it here he pays an equal amount to the crockery combine.

When Senator Hoar said that a mortgage was a good thing, he no doubt referred to a tariff mortgage held by a highly protected trust.

FREE TRADE IN MEN.

"Hands Off Immigration" Is the Keynote of High Protection.

"Yes, men are on the free list. They cost us not even freight. We promote free trade in men, and it is the only free trade I am prepared to promote," said Hon. William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, the leader of the high protectionists in congress in 1872.

Ever since the contract labor law of 1864 was sandwiched in between the internal revenue laws of 1862 and the tariff of 1864 "free trade in men" has been the keynote for the high protectionist policy. This contract law went so far in its promotion of "free trade in men" as to provide that manufacturers who imported their workmen should have a first lien upon the workmen's wages to reimburse them for their expenses.

So persistently have the protectionists advocated "free trade in men" that to-day thousands of workmen are employed in the coal mines and iron mills of Pennsylvania whose names are not put down upon the day books of the manufacturers, but who are designated in the pay rolls by numbers alone.

That the beneficiaries of high protectionism will see to it that this policy of promoting free trade in labor shall not be changed is shown by the following statement made by Andrew Carnegie just before embarking at Liverpool for the United States. Mr. Carnegie, in reply to the question, "What do you think, Mr. Carnegie, of the unchecked flood of undesirable immigration into America?" said: "I say don't touch immigration; let it flow on. We are getting the cream of Europe. I want to see America great, really great. We need all the population we can get. We have only seventeen persons to the square mile, and there are hundreds of millions of acres of land where the sod has never been turned. I say, hands off immigration."

When the McKinley tariff was being discussed its promoters demanded its enactment on two grounds:

First—To provide work for the unemployed in new industries; and

Second—To provide a home market for our surplus farm products.

Nothing was more prominent than the protectionist assertion that the labor market was congested, and that our farmers were suffering from overproduction. But now that the tariff bill which they advocated has become a law they are using every effort to keep the labor market congested, and at the same time to continue the overproduction of farm products. This means low wages for working men and low prices for farm products. At the same time the real beneficiaries of the tariff, by the formation of trusts to regulate production and raise prices, will see to it that they get all the bonus the tariff allows. Free trade in labor, the the only thing the workman has to sell, and high duties upon everything the workman has to buy, is the keynote of high protectionism.

How long will it be before the farmers and working men will see through this hypocrisy?

ANOTHER TRUST.

A New Window Glass Trust Projected—Wages to Be Reduced.

The manufacturers of window glass are again perfecting plans for a trust. It will be recalled that they were completing a combination a year ago last spring, while Mr. McKinley was making his tariff bill, and that the managers of that combination were in session at Chicago when Mr. McKinley, at their suggestion, caused to be inserted in the bill the curious proviso designed to prevent the importation of window glass in boxes containing more than fifty square feet. That combination was dissolved owing to the hostile attitude of two or three manufacturers upon whose adhesion the makers of the organization had relied.

Some of our high tariff contemporaries asserted that it was scared out of existence by the anti-trust law. Concerning the new movement the Iron Age says: "The idea is to operate all the plants in the combination through one management; to control prices, wages and product, and to secure economy in the purchase of materials and the sale of goods." The manufacturers tried to reduce wages three months ago, but the workmen were too powerful for them.

The Paint, Oil and Drug Review reports that three [illegible] of the manufacturers have recently been held and predicts that plants for the combination will be completed within a few days. The third meeting was held in Cincinnati on the 10th inst., and we presume that Senator Sherman would gladly have improved the opportunity to rebuke these trust makers if he had not been so busily engaged in mending his senatorial fences.—N. Y. Times.

—In 1855 a bushel of wheat would buy 18¾ yards of good calico. To-day it will buy 15¼ yards of calico of the same grade. How much has the farmer profited by "protection?"

ATTACKING M'KINLEYISM.

To propose in the House at this session, on the eve of a national election, a general revision of the tariff, might be magnificent, but it would not be war such as must be waged for victory. It would in no sense advance the object professed. It would not make the devotion of the party to the principle of industrial and commercial emancipation a whit clearer than it is now. It would not make the necessity or advantage of the triumph of those principles any more obvious. It is not at all requisite to inform the country what the Democratic party believes in and is working for. It would be simply a tactical error of the gravest possible kind. It would be to abandon a strong aggressive position for a position of defence that would not be strong. It would instantly invite the concerted opposition of every interest now depending on the favors of the present tariff and give to the opponents of every item in the bill the combined strength of the opponents of all. And this would be done by a measure which is perfectly certain in advance to be rejected by the Senate and never to become a law. When the tariff reformers have the power to enact a bill for the revision of the tariff they will not shirk the responsibility of preparing one, and they will know how to defend it in all its parts and as a whole in Congress and before the people. But they will not waste their time or strength in a gratuitous and futile contest over an elaborate proposed action that can never be anything but a proposal.

It is an old maxim of the military profession that the secret of victory is to be strongest at the points the possession of which is essential, and the maxim applies, mutatis mutandis, to political contests. It would be absurb for a military commander to scatter his forces around a wide circle of attack with his enemy in possession of the interior lines and capable of rapid combination. It would be just as absurd for the tariff-reformers to attack the tariff by a general bill with the certainty that success was impossible.

The situation dictates exactly the contrary policy. There are a certain number of provisions in the present tariff, everyone of which involves the essential principle of favoritism and monopoly for the few, and injury and oppression for the many. The plain duty of the reform leaders is to assail each one of those provisions in turn. This will compel the Senate or the President to defend them in turn. If any one of the single assaults is successful, that is distinct gain, not only in the removal of a specific evil, but in the victory of the principle of equity which that evil violates. If the assault is not successful the reform has the great advantage of a vigorous discussion of a definite case, involving the highest principle and making that principle perfectly clear to the sense and conscience of the people. Take, for instance, the provisions of the present tariff against which the iron and steel interests of New England, represented by ex-Governor Ames, and many Republicans protested—the onerous taxes on iron ore, pig iron, coke and coal. A bill to enact the changes petitioned for by these interests would be one that would show with startling clearness the principle involved, and would at the same time force the Senate to face the representatives in their own party of the interests affected. The same thing is true of the repeal of the increased duties on wool. It is the existence and the prominence of these weak places in the enemy's lines that indicate beyond doubt the plan of campaign. Bills providing for changes of the kind referred to care being taken to adjust to these changes other rates affected by them, are all that this session requires of the Democratic majority of the House.—N. Y. Times.

King of Medicines

Scrofulous Humor—A Cure "Almost Miraculous."

"When I was 14 years of age I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and after I recovered had to go on crutches. A year later, scrofula, in the form of white swellings, appeared on various parts of my body, and for 11 years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed years. In that time four or eleven sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. I feared I never should get well.

"Early in 1887 I went to Chicago to visit a sister, but was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July I read a book, 'A Day with a Circus,' in which were statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine that I decided to try it. I [illegible] the soreness soon decreased, and I began to feel better and in a short time I was up and out of doors. I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the disease that I went to work for the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co. and since then

I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to the loss of bone, and the sore formerly on my right leg. To my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous, and I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, 9 N. Railroad St., Kendallville, Ind.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT

HENRY GEORGE.

Henry George was born September 2, 1839, at 312 Catherine street, Philadelphia. The house still stands. His grandfather was a shipowner and sea captain; his father in early life a publisher of religious literature and for thirty years a clerk in the custom-house; his mother, a comely and estimable woman, at the age of eighty was described as "a queenly looking woman still beautiful despite the years that have left their traces on her features."

Henry George attended public school until his twelfth year, and afterward attended Dr. Hare's academy. At 16 he was indentured to a printer, but soon becoming weary of the calling, persuaded his father to allow him to go as a cabin-boy on the ship Hindoo, bound to Calcutta on a three years' cruise. On his return he was apprenticed to King & Baird, printers, but the panic of 1857 caused the failure of the firm, and Henry George was compelled, from lack of other employment, to ship on a small coal steamer running between this port and Boston. On this vessel he labored for one year, and then secured a berth as a sailor on the United States steamer Shubrick bound for San Francisco via Cape Horn. On reaching its destination the vessel was thrown out of commission, and our embryo political economist out of employment with few dollars and no friends.

It was at the time of the gold discoveries in California, and Henry George became a miner and followed the occupation for a number of years but with indifferent success. In 1861 he obtained a position as compositor on the Alta California. Presently he began anonymous communications to the press which were almost always accepted. Among these he wrote a nine-column article on the life and services of Abraham Lincoln, just after the assassination. It made a marked impression, extracts therefrom being published in every section of the nation. Changing his position as compositor from the Alta California to the San Franciso Times he sent all his communications to the latter paper. They were eagerly received and invariably published, often as editorial matter. Finally Dr. Gunn, the editor, determined to discover his unknown contributor. His attempts to do so were unsuccessful until he noticed that these letters were always deposited in a box at the foot of the stairs leading to the editorial rooms. At this box a watch was kept. Whenever a note was inserted the person on watch removed it and compared the writing with that of the unknown correspondent. At length Mr. George was seen, in passing the box, to slip a letter in it and proceed up stairs to his employment. The watcher glanced at the letter and found the handwriting he had been searching for. He hurried to Dr. Gunn, told of his success. Both rushed into the composing room. Henry George was in one of the "alleys" removing his coat. Dr. Gunn showed him the letter and asked him if the handwriting was his. Mr. George answered "yes." "Then, young man," said the doctor, "you must not fool away any more of you time as a compositor. I have a place for you in the editorial room."

Three months afterward he became managing editor of the paper and held the position until 1867, when he resigned and joined the editorial staff of the San Francisco Herald. In 1873 Henry George, in conjunction with four others started the Evening Post, a penny paper. Owing to his brilliant and logical editorials the paper soon had thousands of readers and to a large extent among workingmen. He continued in charge of the Post until 1875, when it passed into other hands by purchase. He then accepted an official position from Gov. Irvin, which gave him sufficient leisure to make an exhaustive study of political economy, and to write "Progress and Poverty." He found great difficulty in securing a publisher. A first edition on five hundred copies was published by Hinton in California. The Appletons sent out a second edition; then Kegan Paul, of London, brought out a large edition, but it remained unsold and piled in their cellars until the English government kindly came to their rescue. At this time, 1882, Henry George was in Ireland as a correspondent of the Irish World. This was enough to make him a suspect and cause his arrest on two occasions. His arrest brought him into public prominence, and directed attention to his great work. It found readers competent to appreciate its merits. Favorable criticism boomed its sale and within a fortnight the cellars of Kegan Paul were empty, and new editions called for, which could not be brought out fast enough to meet the demand.—The Philadelphia Press.

The Remedy.

On the 8th, Rev. Wm. Short, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal church of St. Louis, spoke in Howard's hall, under the auspices of the Reform club. His subject was "Christianity and Social Reformers." A. B. Denton presided, and W. B. Addington was secretary. Mr. Short said the problems of life were becoming more complex as civilization advanced, and the indications were that the great battle for the solution of social questions was to be fought in this country. By social reform was meant some method which would provide for a more just distribution of wealth. The question was not one of poverty, an alleviation of hard conditions; neither did it concern the issue whether the statistics indicate that the condition of the poorer classes is better now than it was during the last century. The question was one of justice. If social reform had only to do with poverty, then Christian teachers might stand off and allow the matter to be settled without their interference, but if the question was one of justice then Christian teachers should be found fighting in the front ranks. The Christian church had too long been wrangling about theologies, and had not paid sufficient attention to the temporal conditions of the race. The church believed in fraternity or the brotherhood of man, but hitherto this belief had only been theoretical. It was in the practical denial of these fraternal equalities that the trouble exists. This was not a mathematical equality, but rather an ethical one, the equality of the children of a father, each of whom might differ from the other in ability and character, and yet be entitled to an equality at the father's board. It was an equality which would not discourage in any respect the exertions of superior ability, but at the same time would not deny to the weaker brothers an equal opportunity. It was not an equality of condition that was desired, but an equality of opportunity. Our civilization must cease to evolve extremes. Many sins which the Christian church tries to cure are the result of human conditions as much as human depravity. A reform of some sort must come. What shall it be? Some of us think we have a clew to it, and believe that God is not guilty of withholding from his children the necessities of life, but that these resources of nature are monopolized by a few who will not allow their brethren to approach the great storehouse of nature. If it was asked what this clew was, the answer has been furnished by Henry George. That the few have made the land of the earth private property is the crime of all the ages. A general discussion followed Mr. Short's address.

Land War in Maine.

Great excitement has been caused in Aroostook county, Me., by recent evictions there, and violence is feared.

Aroostook county contains 6,800 square miles, an area nearly as large as the whole state of Massachusetts. The northern section of the county, comprising more than seventy-five towns and plantations, is owned almost exclusively by land proprietors who reside in different New England cities. By connivance with state land agents many of the best timbered tracts here were bought at prices ranging from 15 to 35 cents an acre. As the price of stumpage on spruce logs, chiefly owing to the lumber tariff, soon rose to $2.50 per thousand feet, the wealth of the owners increased fabulously, and they have never been willing to sell lots to settlers, even after the land has been gone over once, for so rapid is the growth of spruce, that a recut can be made on the same land every seven years.

The men employed by the landowners to cut the timber are French Canadians who squatted a great many years ago in the valley of the St. John, cleared little patches of ground and built cabins. To this the landowners did not object, because it was convenient to have their workmen on the ground.

These settlements, called the Madawoska settlements of Maine, have grown to be thriving villages, and the land upon which the squatters settled has become valuable, and the non-resident landowners demand of the occupiers so large sums in payment for the land that there is nothing for the latter to do but to vacate their homes.

Last winter the legislature appropriated $30,000 to buy the land of the owners and settle the troubles, but the landowners are obdurate in their demands for more than the original value of the lands, and wholesale evictions have been instituted.

The squatters tell tales of cruelty on the part of the evictors which are almost incredible. One of these, which is well authenticated, is as follows: A squatter named Pierre lived with his family on the Caribou road, about fifteen miles from Fort Kent. He had refused to obey a notice to quit. One day last August as he was at work in his field he was seized by a party of landowners, handcuffed, and tied to a wagon. His wife, who was sick, was carried from his cabin on her bed, his children were evicted, and the cabin was burned down before the eyes of the helpless family. Pierre was carried off and lodged in jail.

This appears to be very cruel; but if the land really belongs to the evictors by what right can their cruelty be condemned?

In a Nutshell.

"How many workingmen are there in this country?"

"About 13,000,000."

"How much per day do they add to the wealth of the country?"

"They add to the wealth of the country $7 per day."

"On an average how much of this $7 per day does each workingman get?"

"Less than $1 per day."

"Why this unequal distribution?"

"Because workingmen, having no other places to work and thousands of idle men are ready to take their places, can not now get a raise in wages."

"If an employer does not wish to raise wages and a workingman can't support his family on the wages he is getting—which ought to yield to the demands of the other?"

"Neither ought to yield. The wage earner, inasmuch as the places to work for other men are all filled, should become his own employer and be able to find plenty of work on unused land where God first designed all men to work."

"But the land fit for use has all been taken. How is the idle wage earner to get it?"

"Easy enough. Take off the taxes from all kinds of personal property—off from merchants' goods, houses, barns, off from food, clothing, stocks and bonds—and concentrate all taxation on the unimproved value of land. This will make it unprofitable to hold land vacant for speculation and those not using it, which will be the case in land now of the lowest value, will drop it, and the idle wage earners can go on this land and employ themselves, make their own wages and support their families."

Millions of acres, enough on which to put every idle man at work, are now held out of use by the great railroad corporations of the west.—Industrial Gazette.

WAR ON TEXAS SOIL.

American Soldiers and Garza's Men Fight.

Attacked by Americans, the Mexican Revolutionists Are Routed—Five Rangers Reported to Have Been Killed.

THE BORDER WAR.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 4.—There is much excitement in military department headquarters and among the people of this city over the serious situation on the border. H. J. MacNeil of this city, Saturday evening received a telegram from his father, Capt. J. S. MacNeil, of the Texas rangers, which states that he had just had a desperate encounter with the Garza men. His command numbered only a few men. They were scouting through a chaparral in Starr county when they met a detachment of about thirty Garza revolutionists.

The rangers at once opened fire on the revolutionists and a number of the latter were severely wounded. Nearly 1,000 shots were exchanged, but none of the rangers were wounded. The telegram states that the revolutionists were all well armed and well mounted. They were closely pursed by the rangers for a considerable distance, but finally scattered and all escaped capture except a few of those severely wounded.

It is reported from Laredo that five Texas rangers were killed Friday in a fight with the revolutionists. The rangers reported to have been in the engagement left Laredo a few days ago to scout through brush in lower Rio Grande county for Garza men. From the report in circulation it seems that the rangers located a squad of the troublesome revolutionists and made an attempt to capture them. The Garza men were prepared and gave fight, the result of which was as above stated. If the revolutionists suffered any loss it is not reported.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 4.—A dispatch to government headquarters reports that on Saturday Second Lieut. Langhorne of the Third cavalry, with thirty regulars and a posse of deputy marshals, struck one of the Garza bands and an engagement followed. The bandits were found 5 miles above Rio Grande City and many shots were interchanged and some Mexicans wounded and some of the United States soldiers were hurt. Col. Pablo Munoz was captured. Two gross of cartridges and many revolutionary badges were taken. Private Walker is especially mentioned for bravery. Juan Antonio Flores, a follower of Garza in Nuevo Leon, Mex., has issued another proclamation calling upon all patriotic Mexicans to take up arms with Garza and assist in overthrowing Diaz and restoring the constitution.

The Mexican government has offered a reward of $300,000 for Garza's head, but they will hardly get him. So far the Mexicans have killed over a hundred men on suspicion of being revolutionists, and this has tended to drive other poor ranchers to join the revolt. At Pueblo the populace revolted and every priest has been placed in jail.

FRACTURED HIS SKULL

Sad Death of a Milwaukee Man While Returning from a Family Reunion.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 2.—George P. Seidler, a cigarmaker living at 731 Jefferson street, was walking along North Water street with his wife about 9 o'clock Friday evening when a water tank blew from the roof of Bruss & Wallaeger's factory and fell upon him, fracturing his skull, breaking both legs and inflicting other injuries. He died before the emergency hospital was reached. Seidler was aged 31 years, and with his wife had been spending the holiday in a family reunion at the home of his mother.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Jan. 1.—For several weeks thieves and outlaws have been terrorizing the people of County A, east of here. RIVER JUNCTION, Fla., Jan. 2.—Late Thursday night W. P. Bulley, a prominent merchant of this place, was murdered and robbed in one of the principal streets here. Bulley also runs a barroom and it is supposed that robbery was the sole cause of the assault. He was killed within 100 feet of his home.

CELINA, O., Jan. 2.—The deadly boiling soap got in its work Thursday, the victim being Master Frank, son of George Heffner. He was standing near a kettle of boiling soap when he slipped by the turning of a small stick and fell into it. He was horribly burned before assistance could reach him.

Accidentally Killed.

THE FORUM is the most instructive, the most timely, the largest and the handsomest of the reviews.

The three great groups of subjects of the coming year will be impartially and instructively discussed by the ablest writers.

I. Political Subjects growing out of the Presidential Campaign.

II. Financial Disturbances here and abroad.

III. Theological Unrest—with all the social questions suggested by these groups of great topics.

There is no other way whereby one may get the ripest information about the great problems of the time within so narrow a compass or for so small a sum—short studies of great subjects by more than a hundred of the foremost men and women of the world; because there is only one American periodical for which all the great leaders of opinion and of thought write; and that is The Forum.

The December number, for example, contains: "Degradation by Pensions—The Protest of Loyal Volunteers," by Lieutenant Allen R. Foote, founder of the Society of Loyal Volunteers; "The Meaning of the Democratic Victory in Massachusetts," by Gov. Wm. E. Russell; "French Feeling Towards Germany—Another Conflict about Alsace-Lorraine Inevitable," by Caille Pellemtan, Member of the French Chamber of Deputies; "Should the Silver Law of 1890 be repealed?" by Jacob H. REMARKABLE GROWTH.

The Unlucky 13 Dared.

Vigor, thrift, development, growth are ever welcome to the progressive horticulturist. That the American Garden has shown a vigorous growth in the past seven years it is unnecessary to argue. In thirteen months after the purchase of the journal by the present management it had absorbed the Ladies' Floral Cabinet, of New York. A year later was united with it the famous old Gardener's Monthly and Horticulturist, of Philadelphia. Last year were combined two publishing companies, by which The American Garden and The Rural New Yorker came under one general management, which was the greatest step in the history of both journals.

Now comes another important movement. Contemporaneous with the purchase of The American Garden by the present management, there was established at Buffalo the bright and sparkling Popular Gardening by the well-known horticultural author, Elias A. Long, than whom perhaps no other writer in America has so won popular attention to horticultural topics. Only a year or two after Mr. Long and Mr. Libby had entered on this new field of journalism for America (popular Horticulture) the late Peter Henderson repeatedly urged upon both a combination of their work and energies, as he felt that the two men were well fitted to work together side by side for the promotion of the cause he loved so well. Mr. Long and Mr. Libby gradually recognized their community of interest, and last year began to talk seriously of a combination. Now the combination has actually been accomplished, and with the November issue the two journals will be combined as one under the able editorship of Elias A. Long and the management of The Rural Publishing Co., Times Building, New York. The new journal, for we may call it "new" in the sense that it will have so much new life and interest, will contain the best features of The American Garden and also the bright and practical features of Popular Gardening which have made that journal so successful under Mr. Long's management. By this combination there actually have been no fewer than 13 journals combined in one, as both The American Garden and Popular Gardening have absorbed various others into their own bright personalities.

In addition to being a successful editor, Mr. Long has been establishing at his home, at La Salle-on-Niagara, N. Y., interesting and valuable horticultural experiment grounds. This work will be continued for the benefit of the journal, and in the midst of his own gardening, Mr. Long will do his editorial work for the practical good of the scores of thousands of readers of the combination journal.

The price of the new journal will be an even $1, which is astonishingly low for a high-grade monthly magazine. By adopting the $1 price, however, the publishers anticipate that so many more homes will be reached that they will not lose in the end.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

The House Committees.—Fair Recognition Given to both North and South.

The Speaker has given twenty-five chairmanships to Northern States and twenty-one to Southern States, including in the lower catogory the States of Maryland, Kentucky, and Missouri. These states did not, however, secede in the late war. They have between them nine chairmanships. Deducting this number from the total allotted to the seceding states and adding it to the Northen states, and the aggregate is thirty-four to the Northern states and twenty-two to Southern states. This little bit of explanatory arithmetic, however, is not necessary, in view of the fact that the committees allotted to the North far out rank in importance those given to the South, and this, notwithstanding the Southern members in the House have seen two-thirds more service than their newly elected Northern colleagues.

As far as the personel of the chairmanships is concerned, it will be also interesting to note that the Speaker has placed at the head of committees no less than fourteen Representatives who were his active opponents in the late contest. Mr. Mills, as has been anticipated, is given the chairmanship of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Mr. McMillin is already first on the Rules Committee and will have a place on the ways and means, while Judge Hayes, of Iowa, who was particularly energetic in endeavoring to bring about the nomination of Mr. Mills, gets the chairmanship of the Committee on Education. Mr. Chipman of Michigan, who voted for Mills, is given a chairmanship, while Representatives Williams and Hoar, who did not vote for Crisp in the House, have been well placed, the former going on the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The committee on ways and means is badly shaken up, as was expected. Mr. Springer, who has not heretofore been connected with the committee at all, is chairman, and Mr. McMillin holds second place, his relative position on the minority last Congress. Mr. Turner is retained, but the other members of the majority, with Wilson, Montgomery, Whiting, Shivley, Stevens Cochrane and Bryan, are all new men. Messrs. Reed, Burrows, McKenna and Payne have served before, and Dalzell takes Bayne's place. Mr. Dingley is transferred to the committee on appropriations.

The committee on appropriations is regarded as very strong, and is believed to indicate that a policy of strict economy is going to followed.

There is some difference of opinion as to the meaning of the construction of the coinage committee. A majority of its members are known to favor free coinage, and from this it is inferred by most persons at first blush that it means that a free coinage bill is to be passed. It is said, however, that the free coinage men on the committee have been selected with a view to their conservatism and judgment, and that the interests of the Democratic party will stand first before all things.

The appointment of Elkins means that the six votes of West Virginia will count next year. Suppose the Republicans lose New York and Iowa, 49 votes and carry all of Mich.; they could have but 220 in the aggregate. How handy would West Virginia come in here? Suppose still further that the Republicans, claiming 269 votes, lose New York 36, Iowa 10, and only 3 votes in Michigan. They would then have 217, and need exactly the West Virginia vote to help them out. Or should it so happen in the turmoil of Louisiana politics that the Republicans should carry that state, losing New York, Iowa, New Hampshire, and 8 votes in Michigan, they would have but 218 votes left, in which event half a dozen from West Virginia, raising the figures to 224, would be of victorious service. And so on. Evidently the administration thinks West Virginia is worth looking for.

Honors to the memory of Preston B. Plumb, who died suddenly of apoplexy last Sunday. "Finis" was written in the Senate Chamber, amid the pomp of state, to the last chapter of the brilliant public career of Preston B. Plumb. Gathered within those time honored walls were the great men of his country. The President and his Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Senators, and Diplomatic Corps and members of the lower house filled all available space on the floor. In the galleries the many private citizens this man's sturdy integrity and kindliness of heart has bound to him were gathered to pay the last tribute to the dead. The hour set for the services was high noon, but long before that hour every seat had been filled. The President and Secretary Blaine came arm in arm to the obsequies. The services were brief, but grand in their simplicity. When the Senators gathered in the Senate Chamber they found the chair and desk of their deceased colleague heavily draped in black. The prayer of the chaplain, Rev. Dr. Butler, which began the session of the senate, referred in a feeling manner to the death of Senator Plumb. "Sanctify," he said, this last bereavement. Teach us heavenly wisdom, and hear us when we commend to Thee, very tenderly, Thy handmaiden in her solitude and sadness and overwhelming sorrow in her distant home. We pray that Thou wilt sustain her, and comfort her, and give her Thy peace."

OBITUARY.

Died, Dec. 7th, 1891, of pneumonia, Jane Adelaide Merritt, aged 84 years and 8 months.

Jane Adelaide Griswold was born at Red Hook, N. Y., on the 29th day of March, 1807, her father dying when she was 9 years old. She with her widowed mother and a younger brother moved to Poughkeepsie, where her early girlhood was spent, and where she attended the village academy. At the age of 18 she removed to N. Y., where, in Dec. 1827, she was married to Henry Merritt. They lived in N. Y. several years, where two children were born to them, Francis A. and William H., living there through the cholera season of 1832, in sight of Greenwich Hospital, where hundreds died daily of that fatal disease. The following year they moved to Lockport, N. Y., where two children were born to them, James E. and Marie F., now Mrs. Gilluli, of Lawrence, Kansas. After spending two years at Strongville, O., they removed to Tecumseh, arriving in this place 52 years ago last October. Three more children were born to them here, Hamilton F., Walter S. and Helen J. Having been brought up in the Presbyterian faith she united with that church of Tecumseh. In 1849 the husband and father went to California and she with her family of young children moved to Franklin. Of an uncommon cheerful and happy disposition, she was always able to see the silver lining to even the darkest cloud and being of a social nature, no gathering was considered complete without Mrs. Merritt, and yet are living a few old-time friends who remember her. During the war she was called the mother of soldiers, having three sons and a son-in-law in the army. Capt. Jas. E. Merritt, of the Mich. Cav.; Lieut. Col. A. H. Merritt of the 1st Mich. Reg.; Walter S. Merritt of the 18th Mich., and Capt. Jas. Gilluli of the Mich. Cav. In 1867 she moved back to Tecumseh, owning the place now occupied by Thomas Elliot. For the past 18 years she has lived with and been cared for by her youngest daughter who was with her at the time of her death. When one of the sisters said, Mrs. Merritt we think you are going to die, "So be it if it is God's will, I am not afraid to die," was her reply and later in the day when her daughter arrived, she recognized her and often spoke her name, held up her hand to be caressed, when asked what mother wanted, would answer: "Nothing," showing perfect content. The following day her son-in-law and three grand-children came. She recognized them all, although not able to talk, appeared satisfied that her loved ones were near her, bade them good night, when they went away. Soon after passing into a sleep from which she never more awoke, passing away at half past three on Monday morning, Dec. 7th.

The youngest son, Walter S., did not arrive until her death but had visited her in the summer, saying then he never expected to see mother alive again.

The funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Babbitt officiating, who spoke comforting words to the friends. The Presbyterian choir assisting sang two sweet and appropriate hymns. The casket was then carried out by the son, Walter and three grandsons, Abner, Henry and Andrew Wilson, and removed to its last resting place in Tecumseh cemetery. Mrs. Merritt's eldest child, Mrs. Andrew Wilson, preceded her mother to the grave, having passed away Aug. 9th, 1882. She left six children and a large number of grand-children and great-grand-children, together with many friends who will remember with love the dear old mother and grandmother.

ANOTHER BIG BLAZE.

TEMPLE, McCLURE & CO'S PLANING MILL GONE UP IN SMOKE.

The Most Disastrous Conflagration In Years The Mill a Total Ruin, and a Large Amount of Lumber Destroyed.

Shortly after seven o'clock last evening, the fire alarm sounded. Many people were gathered in the stores and within five minutes the streets were filled with men rushing to the scene, which proved to be Temple, McClure & Co's planing mill.

The present firm has been running the business for some eight or ten years, with slight changes, Mr. J. S. Temple the senior partner, having held an interest much longer, and they have built up one of the best and most extensive manufacturing industries in the village. The mill is located at the north-east corner of Pearl and Bidwell streets, but most of their lumber is piled in the yards on another block, hence that was saved from destruction.

Upon arriving on the scene the north wing of the shop, which was occupied by James Potter's furniture rooms, was a mass of flames. As the building was filled with combustible material it burned like a tinder house.

The steamer was promptly on hand and rendered good service in protecting adjoining property. The house north of the mill and the one south across the road were both on fire and would have been consumed but for the fire department. The snow on the roofs also helped very materially in saving them. In one hour's time the mill itself was a mass of ruins, but the fire continued burning in the lumber piles, adjacent to the mill, about all night. The steamer was brought to the engine house at half past five this morning. The fire laddies held to the the work like veterans and had an all night's job of it. Ed. Grey, the new fireman, was pretty well initiated and all the boys worked faithfully.

The firm's loss will aggregate about $12,000, which is partially covered by insurance. James Potter's loss will reach $1,000, on which he had no insurance. Many of the employees lost valuable tools, which would amount to several hundred dollars in the aggregate. About twenty hands are thrown out of employment, which of itself will be a serious damage to the community.

Will the mill be rebuilt? The owners hope to do so and that is their desire, but it will depend on their finances. In the meantime all persons indebted to them will confer a special favor by paying the same as promptly as possible.

The Magazine of American History opens its twenty-seventh volume with the New Year. The commanding influence of this periodical of timely and authentic history is the result of age and excellency, rather than of advertised lists of fine writers and illustrations which characterize all new ventures. It is too well known and highly prized to need continual booming and it is always welcome to its hosts of readers because it never fails to bring something new and valuable. The issue for January is notably good.

The number of the Atlantic Monthly for January is an exceedingly strong one. It opens with Mr. Crawford's serial, Don Orsino, and besides the outlines of an interesting story, the incidental picture of the new Rome as contrasted with that of the Pope's temporal power is of really great value. Another feature of the number is Henry James's delightful article of reminiscence and criticism on James Russell Lowell. It deals particularly with Lowell's London life, and sketches the part that Mr. Lowell played in the English literary and social world very appreciatively.

Editor: I am sorry, but I cannot talk to anyone to-day. Author: Oh, that's no matter. I will do all the talking myself.

The farmers exchange column did not seem to take as we antilipated. A number of notices have been recered which are placed among the "special notices" on this page. Nevertheless we are still convinced than ever that it would be a good scheme; if a sufficient number would take hold of it.

All the ladies indebted to me please call and settle their account before Jan. 1st so you will greatly oblige me, as I have money to raise on that date.
MRS. M. A. IREEMAN.

Josh Simpkins drew a large and appreciative audience at the opera house last Saturday evening, notwithstanding the blizzard that raged al the time. The leading character was well acted and the support was all good. The plot is simple but natural. The play abounds in side-splitting situations and incidents, and the characters are not overdrawn. It was the finest company that has visited Tecumseh in years and the band parade in the afternoon captured the town. A crowded house will greet Josh Simpkins if he visits Tecumseh with a visit next season.

Is this our January thaw?

There are a good many cases of the grip in this vicinity.

The Board of Supervisers began their January session last Monday.

Col. L. Saviers and family were guests of O. P. Bills the first of the week. The Colonel is still residing at St. Louis, Mich., and seems to be prospering in business there.

The Ypsilanti Light Guard will tender a banquet to the officers of the First Reg. M. S. T. on Monday next, Jan. 11. Capt. Lawrence has received an invitation and will probably attend.

An erroneous idea prevails regarding Spade's special cash sale. This sale will continue for three weeks longer, closing Saturday night, January 23d., not Saturday night, January 9th.

A change of time went into effect yesterday on the Mackinaw road. The trains going west run substantially the same as before. The trains going east pass this station about half an hour later than under the old schedule.

The next number of Harper's Weekly, published January 6th, will contain a valuable and exhaustive article on the "United States Revenue Marine," accompanied by numerous illustrations. It will also contain accurate views of the new Protestant Cathedral of St. John the Divine, soon to be built in New York city.

Died near Ypsilanti, Dec. 22d., of typhoid pneumonia, Mr. H. C. Snedicor aged 44 years. The deceased was a cousin of Ed. Snedicor and a son-in-law of Mrs. John Werner. He was a member of the Christian church and one of the Maccabees. He was a kind husband and indulgent father, and a man who had many friends in and around Ypsilanti.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grippe is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease, but get a bottle and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. All druggists sell the Balsam.

I am very anxious to settle all accounts at least once a year, and if you owe me you can confer a great favor by paying me by January 20th next. If unable then, you can certainly come in and give me your note till you get the money. If the credit has been any accommodation to you please return the favor and I will gladly accommodate you again. C. A. SLAYTON.

The grip seems to be stalking right along through the city, disregarding the cold weather, and taking hold of people right and left, hardly a branch of business, office, store or shop that is not affected by its clutch. Among the older people its fingers touch with the grasp of death, in many instanees, and when not working fatalities, it leaves its victims so weakened that they will feel its grasp till warm weather come.—Adrian Times.

Kempton, of the Addison Courier, has evidently fared better in this world's goods than the majority of his brother quill drivers. In speaking of a visit made him by a brother publisher, he says: "Come in all ye knights of the quill. We have a well warmed den, plenty of easy chairs, and at meal time there'll always be room for one more at the editorial hash board." Such extravagance is not consistent with the flattened condition of the pocket-books of most of us poor cusses, upon whom fortune fain would smile but subscribers, never.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The "TWICE-A-WEEK" St. Louis Republic has obtained and holds an immense circulation solely upon its intrinsic and substantial merits as a newspaper. In the general and useful features, which are common to big weekly papers, it is unsurpassed, while it possesses many strikingly original features of which no weekly can boast. It is issued twice every week, making it, in effect, a semi-weekly for only one dollar a year, and every week's issue contains from fourteen to sixteen pages (never less than fourteen) of seven columns each. It is issued in five separate editions—one each for Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Arkansas and Kansas, and a general edition for the rest of the country. It has a special Tariff Department, edited by Hon. W. L. Wilson, M. C., and is beyond comparison, the biggest, cheapest and best paper published. On Thursday, Dec. 24th, at the home of the bride's parents in Franklin, Miss Luella Taylor became Mrs. Arthur Joseph. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. W. Stalker in his usual happy manner and it was a most enjoyable occasion for all present. The parties are both well known in Franklin and are held in the highest esteem. They will receive the congratulations of a host of friends, in which the HERALD begs leave to join.

The Temple Manufacturing Co., is the title of a new business firm which began work the first of the new year. The stockholders are S. W. Temple, Dr. Steinhoff and some Detroit parties. Mr. W. E. Maher is the business manager and he has the reputation of being a hustler in that line. The company will conduct a wholesale trade in sash, doors, blinds and mouldings, having leased the Temple brick planing mill and lumber yard adjoining. The office will be located in the building at the corner of Railroad and Shawnee streets. Mr. S. W. Temple will take an active part in the management of the business and will also continue the retail coal business in his own name. Success to the new arrangement.

Some people cannot see the utility of advertising but those who spend the most for printer's ink are firm believers in it. A little incident occurred last week to illustrate the fact that even small notices are frequently read. The "Good Scheme" article in last week's HERALD contained six fictitious notices inserted simply as samples. A man at York, Mich., happened to get hold of a copy of the paper and immediately sent a card to Joshua Green, of Holloway, making enquiries about the Holstein heifers mentioned in said notice. As "Joshua Green" does not get his mail at Holloway, the postmaster kindly forwarded the postal to this office for a reply. The York resident has been fully posted on the real situation. The Holloway postmaster thinks the "good scheme" takes admirably.

A BLAZING CAN.

It Causes the Death of Four Persons at Hanford, Cal.

HANFORD, Cal., Jan. 4.—Fire which broke out early Sunday morning destroyed $8,000 worth of property, caused the death of four persons and badly injured six others. The fire originated in the sick-room of O. D. Reed, in the two-story frame lodging house of Mrs. Kate Jacobs. Lou Woodward, who was watching with Reed, was pouring oil into a coal oil stove when he can caught fire. Failing to extinguish it with blankets she threw the blazing can into the hall, where the flames rapidly spread. The lodging house with the Methodist church and an adjoining dwelling, were entirely destroyed. Three men were burned to death. They were Elmer E. Spofford, of Chester, N. H.; F. B. Tucker, of Sacramento, and E. W. Foster, of the Star Nervine Company. Many of the inmates jumped from the second-story windows, receiving more or less severe injuries. T. C. Hammond, a printer, was badly burned and hurt by jumping and died a few hours afterward. Five or six others were bruised and burned, but will probably all recover.

FIREMEN PERISH.

Three Lose Their Lives at a Fire in Nashville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 4.—Ten years ago in May the most disastrous fire that Nashville has ever had occurred around the corner of College and Church streets. Saturday night another fire burned over the site of the fire of ten years ago, causing a loss of $475,000. The fire started in the rear of the store occupied by Webb, Stevenson & Co.'s house furnishers, at 5:40, and was not gotten under control until 10 o'clock p. m.

Three colored firemen lost their lives. They were fighting the fire at the time, standing on a three-story building occupied by Phillips, Buttorff & Co. They were pouring a stream of water into the building of A. J. Warren, when it toppled over upon them, crushing them all to death. Their names are as follows: Capt. C. C. Gowdy, Stokes Allen and Harvey Ewing.

WHOLE FAMILY WIPED OUT.

The Parents and Their Two Sons Stricken Down in a Week.

ATCHISON, Kan., Jan. 2.—A family named Delaney, who lived near here, has been wiped out by death within a week. They moved into a new house before the walls were dry and the father sickened and died almost before the house-warming festivities were over. The mother immediately took sick and died and was buried Sunday. The two sons were then attacked apparently by the same malady and both died Thursday.

Death of Gen. Meigs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Gen. Montgomery C. Meigs died here of grip Saturday. He was quartermaster general of the army for twenty-one years and was placed on the retired list in 1882. He was a widely known engineer, having constructed the famous Johns bridge near this city, the largest stone arch in America. He was also the engineer in charge of the construction of the capitol extension and architect of the United States pension office. He will be buried with military honors.

Gleitz died a few minutes later. The murderer is in jail.

DEATH'S HARVEST.

Many Notable Persons Passed Away in the Year 1891.

The Record Not Equaled for Many Years Whether in Number or in the Eminence of the Position They Occupied.

PASSED INTO HISTORY.

The necrology for the year 1891 embraces a record of famous names in the various departments of the world's work which has not been equaled for many years, whether in their number or in the eminence of the position which they occupied.

From the field of national politics there have gone William Wisdom, secretary of the treasury; ex-Attorney General Charles Devens, Alonzo Taft, ex-secretary of war; ex-Vice President Hannibal Hamlin, United States Senators Wilson, Hearst and Plumb; ex-Senators McDonald and Pomeroy and Gov. Hovey, of Indiana.

The stage, too, has lost many of its shining lights. Sweet Emma Abbott is no more. Lawrence Barrett is numbered with the dead of the year. Other names on the roll are those of the great and only Phineas T. Barnum, J. K. Emmet, W. J. Florence, Samuel K. Murdoch and Edmund S. Conner, the two last being links between the past and the present generations of playgoers.

The immortal Sherman heads the list of those who made name and fame by fighting the battles of their country. Next on the scroll comes Admiral David G. Porter. Rear Admiral Alfred Taylor, Rear Admiral Cartery, Rear Admiral Cooper and Commodore William Rouckendorff. Of the prominent ones that were on the "other side" Gen. Joseph Johnston is no more.

The worlds of letters and journalism have suffered heavily. James Russell Lowell is but a memory, Don Piatt, James Redpath, Amos F. Learned, Rev. Dr. Prime, Dr. B. J. Lossing, George Jones, Maj. J. M. Bundy, James Parton, W. W. Clapp and Tom S. Applegate, all authors or journalists of national reputation, have passed to the great beyond.

But these are but a few of the noted dead. Farther down the roll are the names of George Bancroft, historian; Dr. Howard Crosby, humanitarian; Bishop Gilmour, theologian; Charles Pratt, philanthropist; Dr. Joseph M. Saylor, the oldest clergyman in the United States; Dr. Fordyce Baker, the eminent physician, and Monseignor Paxton, who had he lived, would have been the next archbishop of New York.

The list of noted women that have departed this life during the year is not a long one. Mrs. Allen G. Thurman, Mrs. Cyrus W. Field and Mme. Blavatsky, the leader of the theosophists, were among the best known.

AT PEACE WITH ITALY.

The Trouble Growing Out of the Lynching at New Orleans Ended.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Word has been received here that Baron Fava has sailed from Rome for Washington to resume his post as minister from Italy to the United States. The Marquis Imperiali is in charge of the legation here, as he has been since the recall of Fava. The baron's name is still borne on the rolls of the state department as the Italian minister. The return of Fava to his old post confirms the news that the United States has agreed to pay a small indemnity in money to the families of the two Italian citizens lynched at New Orleans. This restores the entente cordiale between the two countries and the diplomatic incident is closed. It will be noticed that the settlement in this case has been made on the part of the United States by performance of the same acts of justice and reparation which this country is now demanding of Chili, and the prospects now are that within two or three weeks the Chilian incident will be closed in the same manner.

In Behalf of Anarchists.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The brief of counsel for Samuel Fielden and Michael Schwab, the Chicago anarchists who are confined in the penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., under a life sentence for complicity in the Haymarket riot, was filed in the United States supreme court Saturday. The cases are to come up within two weeks for argument.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 2.—Yesterday afternoon Gov. Humphrey signed the commission appointing ex-Congressman Bishop W. Perkins to fill the vacancy in the United States senate caused by the death of Senator Plumb. The legislature, which meets the second Tuesday in January, 1893, will elect his successor.

Rockford's Population 30,000.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Jan. 1.—The prosperity of the city during the last year has been unexampled. The new directory shows a population of over 30,000, and the amount expended during the year for new buildings at a very moderate computation is more than $5,000,000.

She Had a Kind Heart.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 2.—Mrs. A. Garcelon, the wealthiest woman in Oakland, died Thursday. The will leaves to Bowdoin college, Me., $400,000, and sixty or seventy friends of deceased are remembered in amounts ranging from $5,000 to $25,000.

Caught in Kansas.

ALLIANCE, O., Jan. 2.—Word has just reached here that Ephraim Kelly, of North Georgetown, who recently forged notes to the amount of about $5,000, has been captured in Kansas.

Our Pork at Boulogne.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The Official Gazette publishes a decree issued by the government announcing that Boulogne will hereafter be open to the admission of salt pork from the United States.

Many Fishermen Lost.

JEALOUSY.

And, tell me not, as love is true,
Sweetheart, you have no other lover;
Since, nightly, when I come to woo,
I see him near you slyly hover.

When autumn fires blaze and flare,
Or when the summer moonlight's mellow,
He loves to linger near your chair;
He is a most persistent fellow!

And then a dreamy, tender look
Grows in your eyes—a mute confession;
Your head droops, pensive, o'er your book;
I sigh, but leave you with discretion.

I know he comes to take my place;
I've stayed too late—a stupid blunder!
To greet his kiss you turn your face,
And I am jealous. Do you wonder?

There, do not pout and feign surprise,
Nor scoff at jealous lovers lightly.
'Tis sleep, enamored of your eyes,
Who woos you, little sweetheart, nightly!
—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

HIS MOTHER.

A Devoted Son and a Sensible Sweetheart.

The cold-gray shadows of the wintry twilight had enveloped tree and meadow and sluggish forest streams in their uncertain mist, and factory chimneys flung their fiery banners of smoke against the leaden sky, a basso relievo that would have made Rembrandt himself rejoice, and the hum of never-ceasing machinery in the little town rose above the rush of the river, like the buzz of a gigantic insect.

Charles Emery, the day foreman in the rolling-mills, was just retiring to his home, having been relieved by John Elter, the night official, and as he walked along, his feet sounding crisply on the hard-frozen earth, he whistled softly to himself, as light-hearted as a bird.

"You're going with us to-night, Charley?" cried a gay voice, and two or three young men came by.

"Do you mean—!"

"I mean to the opera!"

For upon that especial evening there was to be an opera in the little town of Crystalton, a genuine New York company with a chorus, a full orchestra and all the paraphernalia of scenery and costume which provincial residents so seldom enjoy, and the younger population were on the qui vive of delighted expectation.

"I am going," said Mr. Emery, slowly, "but not with you!"

"But you will change your mind, though," said Harrison Vail, "when you hear that Kate Marcy is to be of the party. Kate Marcy and the Miss Hallowells and Fanny Hewitt. There are eight of us going. We've kept a seat on purpose for you."

"I have engaged myself to another lady," Emery replied, after a second or so of hesitation.

Vail laughed.

"Well, I'm sorry for it," said he, "but Miss Marcy is not a girl who need pine for a cavalier. We'll keep the seat for you until a quarter of eight, in case you should see fit to change your mind. Only let me give you a word of warning, old fellow! Kate Marcy is a high-spirited girl; it won't do to trifle too much with her!"

Charles Emery went on his way rather graver and more self-absorbed. He had asked his mother the day before to go to see "The Mascot," and his mother's eyes had brightened with genuine delight.

"Your father often used to take me, Charley," she said, "when we were young people and lived in New York. But it's twenty years and more since I have been to an opera. And if you're quite sure, dear that there is no young girl whom you would rather take—"

"As if any young girl in the world could be to me what my own darling little mother is!" replied Emery, smiling across the table to her.

"Then I shall be so delighted to go," said Mrs. Emery.

And her voice and eyes bore happy witness to the truth of her words.

But now that a regular party had been organized, and Kate Marcy had promised to join it, things looked very differently to the young man. For a moment he almost regretted that he had engaged himself to take his mother.

"She would be as well pleased with any concert," he said to himself, "and I should have the opportunity of sitting all the evening next to Kate Marcy. I'll ask her to let me off this time. She won't care."

When he went into the little sitting-room of their humble domain, and saw his mother, with her silver-gray hair rolled into puffs on either side of her almost unwrinkled brow, her best black silk donned, and the one opal brooch which she owned pinned into the white lace folds at her bosom, his heart misgave him.

"I have been trimming my bonnet over with some violet-velvet flowers," said she, smiling, "so as to do you no discredit, Charley; and I have a new pair of violet kid gloves. And now you must drink your tea. I've made some of your favorite cream biscuit, and the kettle is nearly at the boil. Oh, Charley, you'll laugh at me, I'm afraid, but I feel exactly like a little girl going to her first children's party. It's so seldom, you know, that a bit of pleasure comes in my way!"

And then Charles Emery made up his mind that his mother was more to him, in her helpless old age and sweet, affectionate dependence, than any blooming damsel whose eyes shone like stars and whose cheeks rivaled the September peach.

"Going with some one else!" said Kate Marcy, rather surprised and not exactly pleased.

She was a tall, beautiful maiden, the belle of Crystalton, and rather an heiress in her own right, with all the rest. She certainly liked Charles Emery, and she rather surmised that he liked her also. And when she had been studying up her toilet for the opera, she had selected a blue dress, with blue corn flowers for her hair and ornaments of turquoise, because she had once heard Mr. Emery say that blue was his favorite color.

"Going with some one else?" she repeated. "Well, of course he has a right to suit himself."

And she kept within her own soul the fevered fire of girlish resentment, the gnawing pangs of jealousy that disturbed her all the while that she was sitting waiting for the great green curtain to be drawn up.

Until, of a sudden, there was a slight bustle on the row of seats beyond, and Mr. Emery entered with his mother.

And then Kate's overgloomed face grew bright again. She drew a long breath of relief and turned to the stage; it was as if the myriad gas lights had all of a sudden been turned up; as if all the mimic world of the opera house had grown radiant.

Never was voice sweeter in her ears than the somewhat thin and exhausted warble of Mlle. Rosalie de Vigne, the prima donna; never did scenery glow with such natural tints or footlights shine more softly. Kate Marcy declared that the opera was "perfection!"

"Yes, but," said pert little Nina Cummings, "do look at Charley Emery, with that little old woman! Why couldn't he have come to sit with us!"

Kate bit her lip. In the crowd now surging out of the aisles of the little opera house she could scarcely venture to express her entire opinion; but she said, in a low, earnest tone:

"I don't know what you think of it, Nina, but I, for my part, respect Mr. Emery a thousand times more for his politeness to his mother."

And, almost at the same second, she found herself looking directly into Charles Emery's eyes.

For a moment only. The crowd separated them, almost ere they could recognize one another; but Kate felt sure—and her cheek glowed vivid scarlet at the certainty—that he had heard her words.

"Charley," said little Mrs. Emery, looking in her son's face, as they emerged into the veil of softly falling snow, which seemed to enwrap the whole outer world in dim, dazzling mystery, "who was that girl?"

"What girl, mother?" with a little pardonable hypocrisy.

"The one, Charley, with the big blue eyes, and the sweet face, wrapped in a white, fleecy sort of hood—the one who said she respected you?"

"It was Kate Marcy, mother."

"She has a face like an angel," said Mrs. Emery, softly.

The next day the foreman of the rolling-mills went boldly to the old Marcy homestead, whose red-brick gables, sheeted over with ivy, rose up out of the leafless elms and beeches, just beyond the noise and stir of busy Crystalton.

"Miss Marcy," he declared, "without intending to be an eavesdropper, I heard what you said last night."

"It was not meant for your ears, Mr. Emery," said Kate, coloring a soft rosy pink.

"But," he pursued, looking her full in the face, "I cannot be satisfied with mere cold respect, Miss Marcy. I want a warmer, tenderer feeling toward myself. If you could teach yourself to love me—"

The dimples came out around Kate Marcy's coral-red lips, wreathing her smile in wondrous beauty.

"The lesson is already learned, Mr. Emery," said she. "I do love you. I have loved you for a long time."

And the foreman of the rolling-mills went home, envying neither king nor prince that day.

"But I never should have loved you so dearly," his young wife told him afterward, "if you hadn't been so good to that dear little mother of yours. In my eyes you never looked half so handsome as when you stood bending over her gray head, in the crowded hall of the opera house that night."

"You see," said Emery, laughing at her enthusiasm, "I agreed with the hero of the old Scotch ballad:

"'Sweethearts I may get many a one,
But of mithers ne'er another.'"

THE MANUFACTURE OF MEAT.

Excessive Fatness in the Meat Product of the United States.

Meat is a manufactured product for which a large amount of raw material is required. The manufacture of meat is a process of transforming the vegetable protein, fats, and carbohydrates of grass and grain into the animal protein and fat of beef, pork and mutton. The same principle applies in the production of milk, eggs and other animal foods. In the most economical feeding of animals it takes a number of pounds of hay or corn to make a pound of beef or pork. In other words, let the farmer make animal protein and fat from vegetable materials in the best way he can, and still he must consume a large quantity of soil product to produce a small amount of animal food. Hence animal foods are costlier than vegetable. This is the simple explanation of the fact that in most parts of the world meat is the food of only the well to do while the poor live almost entirely on vegetable food. Thus ordinary people in Europe eat but little meat, and in India and China they have none at all. It is hard enough for them to get the nutriment they need in vegetable forms. Meats they cannot afford.

But meat making in the United States to-day is far more wasteful than it need be, on account of the excessive fatness of our meats. This comes about very naturally. We have a great excess of soil product in the valleys of the Ohio and Mississippi and on the ranches of the west. At present the pork maker and the ranchmen convert a large portion of this into very fat meat. The pork producers of the great corn growing states select the breeds of swine which, as they say, "will take the most corn to market," and have thus got into the way of growing animals that are little else than masses of fat. The beef-growers of the western ranches, and those in the east as well, produce excessively fat meat. Part of the fat is trimmed out of the meat by the butcher, part is left on our plates at the table to go to the soap man or garbage barrel, and part is eaten. Unfortunately very many of us eat much more than fat, both in meat and butter, than is needed for nourishment, and thus do injury to our health.—Century.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

The Stream of Immigration.

The numbers and nationalities inspected were as follows: Six Arabs (from Jerusalem), 14 Austrians, 8 Belgians, 27 Bohemians, 49 Danes, 84 English and Scotch, 1 Finlander, 34 French, 97 French Canadians, 204 Germans, 20 Hollanders, 10 Hungarians, 6 Irish, 101 Italians, 309 Norwegians and Swedes, 66 Poles, 12 Russians, 36 Russian Jews, 2 Servians, 5 Swiss. Tragedy in Detroit.

One of the most atrocious murders ever committed in Michigan, and which rivals in brutality the Whitechapel murders, was brought to light in Detroit by finding the dead body of Frederick Zpinden in the German Lutheran cemetery. On the back of the man's head were eleven wounds, while he was stabbed in the throat, right eye and ear and the bones in his face were broken. The only cause assigned for the murder is that he had $14 with him when he was last seen and nothing when found.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by forty-four observers in different parts of the state for the week ended December 26 indicated that membranous croup, typho-malarial fever, whooping cough, plueritis, measles and pneumonia increased, and cholera infantum, inflammation of the brain and cholera morbus decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-six places, scarlet fever at forty-two, typhoid fever at twenty-three and measles at five places.

Can't Stop Spending Money.

J. H. Elliott, one of the best known young men of Rome, was said by his father, a wealthy citizen, to have been suddenly afflicted with a dementia which takes the form of spending money. The boy recently went to Caro, bought a shoe store, and spent $600 before his father overtook him and stopped the fun. The son's mind was unbalanced by sickness, aggravated by sorrow over the recent death of his mother and sister.

The People's Party.

Delegates representing several labor organizations met in Lansing and declared for independent political action under the name of the people's party of Michigan. The platform favors the abolition of trusts, the repurchase of lands held by foreign syndicates, the abolition of all duties on the necessaries of life, universal suffrage, and the suppression of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes.

Will Make Brooms.

Warden Mamburg of the upper peninsula prison has ordered a full outfit of broom making machinery from Chicago, and will add this industry to the prison's list. A foreman has also been engaged from Chicago. About twenty-five convicts will be employed at the start in the broom factory, and, if the experiment proves successful, the number will be increased from time to time.

Crowded Asylums.

The Michigan insane asylum at Kalamazoo is crowded with inmates. The institution has 1,047 patients, and they are obliged to sleep in halls, corridors and in apartments never designed for such purposes. Traverse City asylum has 793 inmates and Pontiac 934. New patients will not be received at Kalamazoo or Traverse City until vacancies occur.

Short but Newsy Items.

The oilcake department of the Union mills at Detroit was almost entirely destroyed by fire. Loss, $150,000.

Mrs. John Froling, wife of a barber at Grand Rapids, committed suicide by jumping into a cistern. Despondency on account of ill health was the cause.

At a meeting of the Michigan passenger agents' association at Detroit a single fare for the round trip for the state, district and all county fairs within the state was decided upon.

M. A. Mittenthal, dehler in men's furnishings and clothing at Bessemer, failed for $22,000; assets, $18,000.

Jennie Clarkson was arrested at Detroit, charged with shoplifting. Christmas goods worth nearly $1,000 were found in her house.

The Sault Ste. Marie ship canal was open to navigation 225 days in 1891. The average number of vessels passing each day was forty-five.

Mr. Moorehead, C. H. Prescott's purchasing clerk, was accidentally shot and killed at Tawas City by another clerk while shooting at glass balls.

Rev. John Hamilton, the "Fighting Preacher" of the old Twenty-third Michigan infantry, died suddenly of rheumatism of the heart at his home at Mount Morris.

John Harlocher, brakeman, and Emil Van Oppen, fireman, were killed in a train collision near Humboldt.

Seth McLean, a pioneer lumberman, died at Bay City, aged 88 years. He had been interested in sawmills and gold mines for the last thirty years.

The Muskegon iron and steel plant took off its first heat in the presence of about half the town who turned out to see steel made in their city for the first time.

The state board of agriculture has appointed Prof. Peter M. Harwood, of Ravenna, O., as professor of agriculture of the agricultural college, to succeed Prof. Davenport, who has gone to Brazil.

The supreme court has ordered a new trial for "Buck" Murray, serving a life sentence in Jackson prison for the murder of Patrolman Shoemaker in Detroit. The exclusion of the public from the courtroom was the cause.

The Pathogenic Microbe,

Or poison bearing germ, exercises a most destructive influence, and is continually waging war against health. Innumerable is this mighty foe and but few escape his injury. Entering the system through the blood, this poisonous germ infects every part of the body, and spreads its deadly virus everywhere. Under ordinary conditions it multiplies rapidly and soon maintains a stronghold upon the human body. To overcome this enemy, and put an end to its destruction has for a long while occupied the time and energies of scientists. Their labors have at last been rewarded with success and a most important discovery has thus been made known to the world. It has been shown that this germ can be forced from the body through the pores of the skin, and that this is the only method by which a permanent and sure cure of diseases of the blood can be effected. S. S. S. has for years been curing blood diseases and their results, and it is by this method of eliminating all impurities through the skin that it has performed its great work. All manner of complaints having their origin in an impure and disordered condition of the blood have been successfully treated by this unrivalled blood medicine. Being purely a vegetable preparation S. S. S. is entirely harmless and no bad effects result from its use.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. To all the readers of the HERALD both old and young, great and small, short and tall, we extend our best wishes for a happy and prosperous year.

THE HERALD FOR 1892.

The "Old Reliable" is still on deck and prepared for the campaign of 1892. Performance is better than promise. Recognizing this fact, we have no special pledges to make for the coming twelve months. The record which the HERALD has made during the past seventeen years, under its present management, is a sufficient guarantee of its ability to maintain its position among the chief exponents of local journalism in Southern Michigan. The general policy of the paper is well known. While it will not be a political organ, in the party sense of that term, it will always be found battling for the rights and welfare of the people. Whatever tends to strike the shackels from trade and open foreign markets for farmers and manufactures; whatever tends to increase the volume of both gold, silver and paper money, without degrading its value; whatever tends to break up the monopoly in unused land and give the poor man a chance to obtain a home of his own; whatever tends to give every laborer regular employment at fair daily wages the HERALD will uphold and sustain. Our chief aim, however, will be to make the HERALD a first class local newspaper, a faithful chronicler of all local happenings within the territory of its circulation. In this regard it will continue to lead all competitors.

Farmers, a Word with You!

Do you know that the National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the largest and best agricultural, live stock and family journal of its class published? It is the largest because it has twenty-four pages (ninety-six columns) every week the year round—no supplements. It is the best because it is the most practical, comprehensive and ably edited. It is, as its name implies, a magazine for the farmer and stockman. As such it covers the whole field. Each of its departments is ably edited; its matter is practical and to the point. All its correspondents are farmers and stockmen who keep up to the times in their various branches, and it combines more fully than any other journal of its kind all of the branches of husbandry. Each of its twenty-four different departments is represented in each issue, consisting of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Veterinary, Dairy, Apiary, Markets, Poultry, Household, Young Folks, etc., etc.

Its market reports have a national reputation of being the most reliable, comprehensive and freshest of any of its competitors. Their new press enables the publishers to mail their entire edition within twenty-four hours from the time it goes to press, thus enhancing the value of its market reports and other departments.

It accepts no fraudulent advertisements. Its organization page is one of its most valuable features. League, Grange and Alliance matters are intelligently and honestly discussed. It aims in this department to bring about a more equitable and harmonious state of affairs than now exists. It gives a table of contents with each issue and a complete index every six months, enabling one to find at once any article desired. It enters into political matters only so far as it is of interest to the farmer and his welfare.

The regular subscription price is $1.50 per year, but in clubs of five it is offered at $1.00 each. Send for a sample copy free. It gave away to its agents $3,000 in cash prizes the past year. Send for terms and supplies. Address
